Although at one stage it seemed as though the description "protestant" may have been justified in order to allay public suspicion that Anglicans who valued and sought to preserve their Catholic heritage were "Romanists" in disguise, e.g., Archbishop Laud et al, the evidence supports the view that it is an erroneous description for Anglicans. Nowhere in the BCP does the term "protestant" ever occur. Moreover if the Anglican Church is a true part of the historic Catholic & Apostolic Church, then all Anglicans are Catholics whether they realize it or not. Many Anglicans have become so indoctrinated by the use, or rather misuse, of the term Catholic by the Press that they unthinkingly equate "Catholic" with "Roman Catholic", thereby undermining the case for the Anglican Church. It is moreover a mistake for Anglicans to describe themselves as "protestants" because the reason usually given for the use of that term rightly belongs to the word "Catholic". If "protestant" signifies a protest against and rejection of erroneous doctrines or wrong practices, this is precisely the reason the term "Catholic" was adopted by the early Church. But if "protestant" involves the rejection of that which is true and right, e.g., the rejection of bishops, then it is obviously synonymous with heresy & schism. So Anglicans need to be very wary of using the word "protestant" as a description of themselves or the Anglican Church. On the other hand, Anglicans do not acknowledge the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Rome because, in their view, the Roman Catholic Church has added some unCatholic doctrines to the original body of the Catholic Faith. Acceptance of papal authority would mean therefore accepting those doctrines which were not held by the early Church & which Anglicans believe to be lacking in sufficient scriptural evidence to warrant insistence on their acceptance as "universal & true". In recent times, i.e., within the last 150 years, the RC Church in the person of the Pope, has made Papal Infallibility, and the Immaculate Conception, and the Bodily Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary de fide,that is necessary to be believed for salvation. In addition, the BVM appears to have been raised by the Roman Church to the role of co-mediatrix with Christ, which the Anglican Church regards as being incompatible with the role of Christ as Advocate and Mediator. If then, the RC Church has added erroneous doctrines to the original body of revealed truth it could mean that the Anglican Church possesses a better claim to the description "Catholic" than the Roman Church. At first sight this might seem preposterous but a sober & careful investigation can reveal its validity. Whether the Anglican Church will be able to continue to substantiate such a claim in the face of the continuing erosin of its Faith and Order is, of course, another matter.

It might seem as though the whole question has been thoroughly sifted and examined and that there is nothing more to be said. But unfortunately, that is not so. Ecumenism, the proposals for the unification of the ministries, & the ordination of women to the priesthood, have resulted in a further devaluation of the term "Catholic". In what way has this come about? Ecumenists who are apparently prepared to enter into Church Union [American readers might well read "COCU" here] on the basis that the dissenting protestant ministries of the non-episcopal negotiating churches are the same as the Catholic Priesthood,or to put it in another way,possess equal authority and validity with the Catholic Priesthood,are now advancing the argument that the admission of women to the priesthood as well as the mutual recognition of the ministries of the non-episcopal protestant bodies and the Catholic Priesthood, constitutes an extension, made in charity, of Catholic principles, thereby enabling other Christian bodies to share in the fulness of Catholic Faith and Order. Fine and high sounding words indeed! But what if Catholic principles and Catholic Faith and Order are eroded or abandoned for the sake of a form of church union acceptable to dissenting protestant bodies? There are grounds for the conclusion that that is precisely what is being done. Where is the extension of Catholocism then? It is simply not there. Let it be frankly admitted that the kind of church union being aimed at is nothing more than a loosely knit federation of larger numbers without agreement in the Catholic Faith because it would no longer be held. Even now it is being said by members of non-episcopal dissenting bodies that there will be no need to bring in a bishop for future ordinations in the proposed united Church because a bishop would not confer anything that the ministers of the non-episcopal dissenting bodies did not confer. Thus already, bishops are being regarded as superfluous and unnecessary, which is of course what the dissenting protestant sects have believed all along. The Eastern Orthodox Church,moreover,saw with perceptive insight the great weakness -in fact more than a weakness- in the 1978 Lambeth Conference which sought to preserve an external unity at the expense of internal disunity. On the issue of the ordination of priestesses Lambeth "permitted" such ordinations, and at the same time "permitted" the rejection of such ordinations. Instead of following the line taken at Nicea and acknowledging that the ordination of priestesses was either right or wrong and that the Church must say clearly which it is, the 1978 Lambeth Conference condoned two incompatible practices in the Anglican Church. Consequently the Anglican Church seems to have come perilously close to forfeiting the description "Catholic"; although the Diocese being the unit of the Catholic Church in its earliest organization ante-dating later papal development, it follows that even if some dioceses fall into heresy,other dioceses may not do so. There are signs of this already. To change the meaning of "Catholic" in order that it can bestow an aura of orthodoxy on heresy and schism which were excluded by the term in the early Church must be an example of intellectual dishonesty and verbal chicanery unsurpassed in the history of Christendom. Yet this is what this latest devaluation of the term "Catholic" amounts to. The employment of the term "Catholic" bereft of its inherent meaning in order to include anything and everything desired by a majority vote within its scope, obviously constitutes not only a devaluation but a contradiction of its true meaning.

There are two ways of attaining agreement. One way is for truth and goodness to compromise with or submit to error & evil. Adolf Hitler accused those who refused to comply with his demands as being the war mongers. He only wanted peace,so he said. The other way is to adhere steadfastly to that which is right & true until it is recognized and adopted. The second way was the way of St Paul, St Athanasius of Alexandria - & also of our Lord Himself. It can involve division, dissension, unpopularity and even persecution - those mentioned above experienced them all. It does not mean taking the line of least resistance. But it will triumph in the end, if for no other reason than that truth cannot be proved wrong. It is this fact which vindicates the use of the term "Catholic" in the sense that it possessed at the Council of Nicea and when it was included in the Creeds as a description of the Church.

'ROUND & 'BOUT

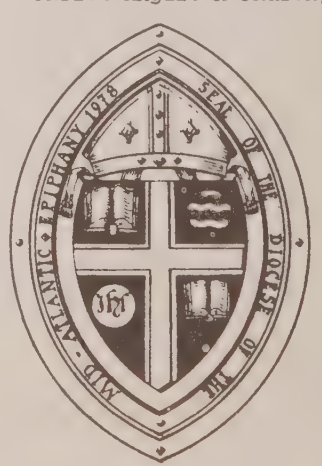
CHRIST Church, New Orleans, with Fr Mark Holliday of Texas, celebrated its Easter Eucharist with the extra joy of having the twin children (born on the Commemoration of Thomas Ken, Bishop of Bath and Wells) of one of its organizers baptized.

ALL Saints' Church, Aiken, South Carolina, announced recently that "the purchase of the church property is assured. The contract for purchase was signed on" the Feast of the Annunciation (transferred).

ST Francis' Church, Fort Scott, Kansas, has called the Rev'd George Theckedath of Ottawa, Canada (curiously, he will be only a stone's throw from Ottawa, Kansas - possessor of one of the USA's best restored and most attractive Victorian business districts), as its Rector.

THE Editor has had his stubby fingers called on the use of the word "priest" as a verb by the Fellowship of Concerned Verbsmen of Newport, Rhode Island. The Editor has called the attention of the members of FCV to the 21st entry in the 3rd column on page 1962 of Webster's New International Dictionary, 2d Edition, unabridged. The FCV advises it will stick by its first salvo.

IF you are having a first Baptism or a first Eucharist or have called a Rector or bought a building or whatever, let us know. A good way to let us know is to put us on the mailing list for your weekly bulletin, but since the Editor's trifocaled (now THERE's a word for the FCV) eyes are about as used up as his stubby fingers, it would be a good idea for you to encircle that "first" very clearly in red or green or the proper liturgical color. We'll try to keep 'Round & 'Bout as a regular feature.



OF your Christian charity, pray for our bishops - William, Dale, William, Robert, James and Peter.

WANTED

A PRIEST for the Anglican Church of St Dunstan in Minneapolis, Minnesota. The parish is two years old and has approximately 60 parishioners, with a good potential for growth since it is located in a large metropolitan area. For futher information please write to: The Anglican Church of St Dunstan, 4800 Dupont Avenue South,Minneapolis 55409, 612-824-3933 or call the Senior Warden, John Fitzimons, at 474-9032.

A CURATE for the Anglican Church of the Incarnation in the Orlando-Maitland-Winter Park section of Florida. According to the Rector, the Rev'd Bruce Medaris, SSC, the parish is looking for a strong pastor to back him up. For further information, call or write Father Medaris at POE 1426, Maitland 32751, 305-645-0065 (office) or 644-6122 (rectory).

A WHITE or black cassock, or alb-cassock, size 51 or 52, by Christ Anglican Church, POB 677, Marysville, Washington 92870.

THE diocesan seal for the Diocese of the Mid-Atlantic States has undergone some slight change since it was initially designed with the addition of the word "States", the now authorized version of the name of the Diocese. Other than that addition, the seal remains the same and is described by its designer:
On a field Sable representing the darkness of this sinful world, a Cross of St George Gules for the Anglo-Saxon peoples and the English Church, fimbriated Argent; between in the first and fourth quarters an open Bible of the last, leathered of the second and garnished Or; in the second quarter an heraldic fountain for the laver of Baptism; & in the third quarter a Plate charged with the monogram IHS of the second representing an Host.

Hence, a black shield with a red Cross edged in silver between two open Bibles also white with gold edges and red leather binding, and a circle with wavy lines of white & blue (= water) for one of the two greater Sacraments, Baptism, & another circle of white with the initials of the Name JESUS in red for the second great Sacrament, the Holy Communion.

OFFERED

FROM St Willibrord's Bookstore,1744 Dayton Avenue, Chicago 60660, another in a series of Position Papers from Traditional Anglicanism. This little 6-page leaflet, The Book of Common Prayer, is available for 15¢ each, 12 for $1.50, 100 for $10.00. No mention is made of postage, but it would be well to include an extra 10-15% for postage and handling.

COMING SOON - the first of the educational tracts from the FCC. Entitled "Death by a Thousand Cuts - What Are They Doing to Your Prayer Book?", it was written by the Rev'd Dr Carroll E. Simcox. Price and date of availability are not yet determined so watch your newsletter for the announcement.

STILL available, and still very pertinent, from FCC is the booklet of the Opening Addresses of the St Louis Congress & the Affirmation of St Louis. The former may be had for $1.00 each, including postage and handling (write for quantity rates); the Affirmation as well as back issues of some numbers of the newsletter are available for 206 postage and handling per item requested (write for quantity rates).

THE Brotherhood of St James, POB 785, Marysville, Washington 92870, offers various services and further information about its own activities for the asking.

NOTA BENE

THERE will NOT be a July issue of the newsletter because our faithful old Olivetti needs a chance to cool off, the Editor's stubby fingers need a rest, & our 2/3s of a gal Friday is taking a well-deserved vacation. The summer directory will follow directly behind the June issue and the next regular issue will be for August.

A REQUEST from a reader: give us "implicit instructions on how to submit candidates for the 'Newsletter'." Implicity & simply, send us the names and addresses of the people you want to have put on the mailing list - and we'll do it!

FROM ACROSS THE BORDER

CRIBBED from The Anglican News (& slightly modified) "How to Start an Anglican Catholic Congregation in Canada" [for "in Canada" read "anywhere"]:

1. Gather together three or more communicants who are determined to adhere to the Catholic Faith and traditional Anglican practice.

2. Write to or phone the nearest Anglican Catholic parish or priest (see your directory) and ask for information and help.

3. Pray. Trust. Stick with it. Others have already done it, and so can you.

We would not have any congregations at all if we had waited until everything was perfect. Both large and small groups have formed congregations, and then looked for priests. And some priests have simply begun celebrating the Eucharist and then gone looking for people.

Faith, determination and persistence will do it.

FCC The Fellowship of Concerned Churchmen NEWSLETTER

Volume II, Number 8 1962 Summer Directory June A.D. 1979

We and our people -thanks be to God- follow no novel and strange religions, but that very religion which is ordained by Christ, sanctioned by the primitive and Catholic Church and approved by the consentient mind and voice of the most early Fathers. ---Elizabeth I in 1563

EXPERIENCE and suggestions from one end of the country to the other have pretty well set the format of the quarterly parish directory. As consistently as possible, it is as follows:
STATE: City, Parish, parish address & phone number; Rector+, rector's address & phone number (if available & different from parish); additional phone number(s). (If there is no resident priest, a lay contact,usually the senior warden, is given.)
The directory will guide you to a place of worship that has indicated affiliation with or strong sympathy for ACC or FCC. You must make your own evaluation after you have made contact. It is as accurate as the Editor can make it with the data at hand, but he does not warrant its correctness or completeness. Send any changes to him at POB 252, Eureka Springs AR 72632.

FCC The Fellowship of Concerned Churchmen NEWSLETTER

Volume II, Number 9 August A.D. 1979

We and our people -thanks be to God- follow no novel and strange religions, but that very religion which is ordained by Christ, sanctioned by the primitive and Catholic Church and approved by the consentient mind and voice of the most early Fathers. ---Elizabeth I in 1563

ALTHOUGH this "news" may be considered a little out of date since the newsletter was not published in July, it will, nevertheless, we feel, be well read inasmuch as it puts "the frosting on the cake" of the bare-bones announcement about the coming into being of the Anglican Catholic Church in the June issue of the newsletter. So that each reader will have a full and complete record of these important happenings, all four of the issuances from the College of Bishops' meetings immediately following Bishop Lewis' consecration are reprinted here verbatim. Elsewhere in the newsletter appears information from the June meeting of the College of Bishops.

MAY NEWS RELEASE

THE Bishops of the Anglican Catholic Church met in College May 26, their first meeting since ratification of the Constitution and Canons of the Church. Five dioceses,more than the required number to bring the Church into existence, have ratified the Constitution proposed last October in Dallas, Texas.

The College issued a proclamation declaring that "the Anglican Catholic Church is legally in existence" & that "the Church has been soundly continued in these lands."

In other business, a Missionary District for Canada was created and the Rev'd Carmino deCatanzaro was appointed its first Bishop. The College issued a call to Provincial Synod to be held in Indianapolis, Indiana, October 18-20.

PROCLAMATION

WE, the Bishops, in formal union with each other & meeting in College under the provisions of the Constitution and Canons of the Anglican Catholic Church for the first time, and having formally ratified said Constitution and Canons in our respective Diocesan Synods, do hereby PROCLAIM AND DECLARE:

FIRST: That the Proposed Constitution and Canons have been legally ratified by the required number of Diocesan Synods of this Church, and the same are now in full force and effect;

SECOND: That the traditional & tested features of the Canadian and American ecclesiastical systems have been retained and will be used in the Continuing Church;

THIRD: That a non-political means for selection of bishops has been devised, adopted, & will be used in the Continuing Church;

FOURTH: That the Church will be generally governed by a Synod of three branches (episcopal, clerical, and lay) under a Metropolitan;

FIFTH: That the apostolic and scriptural standards for the Sacred Ministry will be used for all orders of Ministries;

SIXTH: That the Constitution and Canons now in effect do acknowledge the necessity of the concurrence of all branches of the Synod in exercise of legislation, and that extraordinary majorities are required for the favorable consideration of all matters of importance;

SEVENTH: That the Church has re-established an effective permanent system of ecclesiastical courts for the defense of the Faith and the maintenance of discipline over all her members;

EIGHTH: That the Constitution and Canons proposed by the meeting of the Continuing Church at Dallas have been ratified [by] the requisite number of Dioceses, and since said Constitution does give due consideration to ancient Custom and General Canon Law as well as to the former law of our provinces;

IN the Name of God, and of His Holy Church under the authority episcopal committed unto us, we do hereby declare and promulgate that the Constitution and Canons of the Anglican Catholic Church are now in effect and we do hereby promulgate the same, and we do hereby declare that under His Divine Providence the Anglican Catholic Church is legally in existence and the Church has been soundly continued in these lands.

Done at Grand Rapids, Michigan, this 26 day of May, A.D. 1979.

CALL TO SYNOD

TO all the Bishops, Standing Committees and Synods of the Anglican Catholic Church, Greetings in the Name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ!

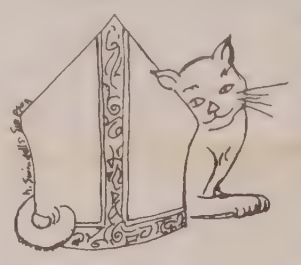
INSOMUCH as it has pleased Almighty God, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, to bless the continuing Church with the foundation of a Constitution & Canons, whereby the defects and abuses of its former governments may be redressed, and the Church soundly reestablished, and

INSOMUCH as the Constitution and Canons proposed by the Constitutional Synod of 1978 have been ratified by the Synods of the required number of Dioceses represented at the Constitutional Synod and especially as we, acting as the College of Bishops, have proclaimed the same to be in effect, now, therefore,

WE, by Divine Permission the Bishops of the Anglican Catholic Church, meeting in College, and being mindful of the great blessings wherewith God has blessed us in our desire to remain faithful to the Faith once delivered to the Saints, hereby CALL a Provincial Synod of the Anglican Catholic Church to meet at the City of Indianapolis, State of Indiana, on October 18, 19, 20, 1979, said Synod to consist of the Bishops, and Delegates and Alternate Delegates of the Clergy and Laity chosen by the aforesaid ratifying jurisdictions, in accordance with the Constitution of this Church, and the Canons or procedures of the several Dioceses, not inconsistent with the same, to complete and perfect the work of unity and holiness begun at the Congress of Concerned Churchmen of 1977, and continued in the Constitutional Synod of 1978, and to do such other acts as may be required by the Constitution and Canons of this Church, or which may be expedient for the Church from time to time.

WE FURTHER CALL upon all faithful Christians in sympathy with this Church to rejoice with us at what God has done among us, & especially invite the leaders of the following Christian bodies to attend Provincial Synod:



Polish National Catholic Church
Orthodox Church of America

AND FINALLY, WE CALL upon the faithful to fast and pray for Provincial Synod, and humbly ask God's blessings upon the Anglican Catholic Church.

DONE this 26th day of May,A.D. 1979, at Grand Rapids,Michigan.
THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS: [Signed in the same fashion and by the same Bishops as the foregoing Proclamation.]

APPOINTMENT

WHEREAS, the Canadian Clergy and Laity have unanimously nominated the Reverend Carmino deCatanzaro to become their Bishop, and

WHEREAS, great confidence & trust have been expressed by our Canadian brethren in the faith & devotion of said Father deCatanzaro, now

THEREFORE, We,the College of Bishops, pursuant to Article III,Section 7, of the Constitution and Canons of the Anglican Catholic Church, do hereby appoint the Reverend Carmino deCatanzaro to be the first Bishop of the Missionary District of Canada.

Dated this 27th day of May, A.D. 1979.
[Signed in the same fashion and by the same Bishops as the foregoing Proclamation.]

THE ANNUAL meeting month of the membership of the Fellowship of Concerned Churchmen has, by action of the Board of Directors, been changed from January to April. The last three annual meetings of the Fellowship have seen one or more members unable to attend because of rigorous weather. The exact date and place of the 1980 annual meeting will be announced, as usual, by the president, at a later date.

FCC's first tract, Death by a Thousand Cuts, or "What Are They Doing To Your Prayer Book?", by the Rev'd Dr Carroll E. Simcox, President of the Fellowship and Retired Editor of The Living Church,is now available through the Fellowship's Arkansas office in Eureka Springs, at a cost of 50¢ each for 1 to 9 copies, 45¢ each for 10 or more. Make your remittance payable to FCC & send your order to: FCC, POB 252, Eureka Springs, Arkansas 72632. The cost of postage and handling is included in the quoted price.

IN THESE yet troubled times, of your Christian charity pray for all our bishops: Dale, James, Peter, Robert, William & William.

FROM A CANADIAN PRIEST

I REMEMBER how tactfully you wrote up the Synod of Dallas with the disagreements there between the factions in the Anglican continuing Church.

Our situation in the Canadian Anglican Catholic Church is as follows. After the Dallas Synod, the Bishops suggested to the priests and representatives from Canada that they set up a Canadian Jurisdiction and elect a Bishop. A meeting was held in Ottawa in January, 1979, attended by priests and representatives of the congregations. A Canadian Jurisdiction was set up, and a simple constitution adopted under which a Bishop was elected, the Rev Carmino deCatanzaro. Bishops Mote & Doren released the priests & congregations to whom they had given pastoral care. Bishop Morse did not do so for the three that looked to him for care, but these three took part in the setting up of the Canadian Jurisdiction and in the election of a Bishop. They have continued to work with all other priests & congregations, and they consider Fr deCatanzaro their bishop-elect.

We now hear that the Bishops in faction A have called for a General Synod to meet in Indianapolis this fall, and that the Bishops in Faction B have called a General Synod about the same time to meet in Arkansas. It looks as though the Church is on the point of being split in two. My attitude, and I think it will be the attitude of the other priests and layfolk in the Canadian Jurisdiction, will be to remain in our Jurisdiction and to consider ourselves to be in communion with all Bishops, priests & layfolk in both factions. Those Bishops, priests, and laity will always be welcome at our Altars, and we trust that we shall be welcome at theirs. I wonder whether there may be man in the United States who while staying with their own Bishop and jurisdiction will let it be known that they insist on being in communion with all Bishops, priests, and laity of whichever faction. I thought you might make this attitude known to the Brethren throughout the U.S.A. . . s/Roland F. Palmer, SSJE
[Father, it could not have been said better. Rather than attempt to paraphrase your message, I have taken the liberty of quoting it as you wrote it.]

WASHINGTON NEWS RELEASE

THE following news release was received from the public relations firm of Deaver & Hannaford, Inc, Washington, D. C., and is quoted verbatim.

ANGLICAN CHURCH IN AMERICA PLANS NATIONAL SYNOD

Marking the 400th anniversary of the first use of the English Book of Common Prayer in North America, bishops of the traditionalist Episcopal movement, now called the Anglican Church in America, are announcing in a pastoral letter this Sunday [the release is dated 22 June] plans for a meeting to adopt a charter and canon law for the church.

The meeting, to be held October 16-18 in Hot Springs, Arkansas, has been called by the Rt Rev Robert S. Morse, bishop of the Anglican Diocese of Christ the King, & the Rt Rev Peter F. Watterson, bishop of the Anglican Diocese of the Southeastern United States. The synod will come a little more than two years after delegates to a September, 1977, Congress of Episcopalians in St Louis concluded that the traditionalist movement, rather than the Protestant Episcopal Church in the U.S.A., represented Anglican continuity.

Since then, "The Anglican Church in America movement (originally called 'Concerned Episcopalians') has been growing rapidly,attracting Episcopalians concerned about what they see as the secularization of the P.E.C.U.S.A.," according to Bishop Morse. The Anglicans estimate their membership at more than 50,000 in 35 states with nearly 100 parishes or congregations-in-formation. It consecrated its first four bishops in Denver last year.

About the October synod, Bishop Morse said,"We are carrying out the St Louis mandate to continue the church we all love. The past two years have been a time of great growth for our movement and, with the church's legal structure which the Hot Springs meeting will provide, we shall be able to continue to be what we have always been: Catholic, Apostolic and Episcopal Christians."

According to Bishop Watterson, "We find the constitution and canons put forward by some of our brethren unacceptable on both legal & theological grounds. Our best lawyers have arrived at a workable legal framework to help us to move forward in our mission to all orthodox Episcopal Christians in America."

In the same pastoral letter, the bishops announced that the Anglican Church's first seminary, St Joseph of Arimathea, will open in Berkeley, California, this fall.

[Editor's Note: Enclosed with the release was a Pastoral Letter, dated 24 June, the essence of which is reported in the release.]

JUNE NEWS RELEASE

IN A further effort to bring our readers up to date,even though the news may be somewhat dated for some, we reprint here a news release from the College of Bishops' meeting in New Jersey 20 June, and the text of the two formal actions taken thereat.

The Bishops of the Anglican Catholic Church met in College today at Christ House, Sparta, New Jersey. The Rt Rev William F. Burns, Bishop Ordinary of the Diocese of the Resurrection, was named Vicar General to minister to those parishes not now a member of, but desirous of affiliating with, the Anglican Catholic Church. The College issued a writ of election for a Bishop Coadjutor in the Diocese of the Mid-Atlantic States and named the Rt Rev C. Dale David Doren, D. D., the Prime Bishop of the College.

In other action, the College appointed Dr Robert Heterick its Clerk, Mr John Metz its Treasurer, and Mr Andrew Stahl & Mr Michel LaRoque its senior & junior Canonists. Committees on pension and insurance, a church seal, and standard forms were constituted. The College established an Ecumenical Commission and appointed Bishop Doren episcopal visitor to the Diocese of the Southwest.

The Bishops collegially prepared a pastoral letter to be read throughout the Church summarizing many of their actions taken during the last two College meetings. The College is scheduled to meet again on September 14 and 15 in the Diocese of the Mid-Atlantic States. Regular College meetings in January, April, July and October will commence following the Provincial Synod this October in Indianapolis.

A PASTORAL LETTER

TO THE well-beloved in Christ in the Anglican Catholic Church, greetings.

[The first three paragraphs of the College of Bishops' Pastoral Letter cover the promulgation of the legal existence of the Anglican Catholic Church; the call to Provincial Synod in Indianapolis in October; and the appointment of Father deCatanzaro as Bishop-elect of the Missionary District of Canada -- and are not repeated herein.]

The Provisional Constitution adopted at Dallas provides that in the selection of Bishops nominations may be submitted by the vestry of any parish, by a majority of the clergy in any Diocese or by any Bishop. The Bishops respectfully request that nominations be sent to the Clerk of the College of Bishops, Dr Robert C. Heterick, 234 Craig Drive, Blacksburg, Virginia 24060, as soon as possible.

The College of Bishops granted a request from Bishop Doren and his Standing Committee for permission to elect a Bishop Coadjutor for the Diocese of the Mid-Atlantic States. [See "Writ"]

Bishops Mote, Burns, & Lewis are pleased to announce that they have appointed Bishop Doren to be Prime Bishop of the College of Bishops, recognizing his self-sacrificing labors for his people.

The Bishops, mindful of our Lord's High Priestly prayer that "all may be one," & of the almost universal desire of the clergy & people of the Anglican Catholic Church for closer relationship with brethren in other Catholic bodies, are in the process of forming an Ecumenical Commission. We are hopeful that in every Diocese the names of ecumenical leaders will be submitted to the Bishops for appointment.

The Bishops,with the advice of their Chancellors,urge all members of the Church to review their wills, to make certain that money they wish to leave to the Anglican Catholic Church will not,through omission,be left to the Protestant Episcopal Church.

We are aware that since the days of the Apostles the Church has never been free of problems. We can hardly expect to be free of problems in the Anglican Catholic Church; but we are certain, & we wish to assure the faithful, that if we sincerely seek after our Lord and His righteousness, and fervently pray for the guidance of the Holy Spirit,we can serve as instruments of His Peace.

Please pray for your Bishops, as we know that we are vessels of clay.

[Signed by Bishop Doren as Prime Bishop and Bishop Ordinary of the Diocese of the Mid-Atlantic States, and by Bishops Mote, Burns, and Lewis, as Bishops Ordinary of their Dioceses.]

VICARIATE GENERAL ESTABLISHED

WHEREAS, the College of Bishops of the Anglican Catholic Church have declared that five Dioceses legally have been established [in] this Church by ratifying the Constitutions and Canons; and WHEREAS, the College of Bishops is aware that there are individual congregations and Clergy not part of constituent member dioceses or jurisdictions of the Anglican Catholic Church and that many of said congregations and Clergy have appealed and petitioned unto us in the capacity of our exercising the Office of the Metropolitan for episcopal oversight & administration by this Church, and said congregation and Clergy have expressed their intent to become an integral part of this Church;
NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, We,the College of Bishops of The Anglican Catholic Church, do hereby assigned such congregations & Clergy to the patrimony of the Office of Metropolitan of this Church, & do appoint our well-beloved Brother in Christ, the Rt Rev William Francis Burns, Bishop of the Church and See of the Resurrection, as our Vicar General and/or his designee to provide for the episcopal oversight & administration of such aforesaid congregations & clergy, with the purpose that they may become members of a constituent diocese or future diocese of this Church.
Dated this 20th day of June, A.D. 1979.
[Signed by the four bishops as Bishops Ordinary]

WRIT OF ELECTION

WHEREAS, the Diocesan Synod of the Diocese of the Mid-Atlantic States of the Anglican Catholic Church acting in strict accordance with Article IV, Sections (a) & (b) of the Provincial Constitution as adopted in Dallas in October, 1978, & as proclaimed by the College of Bishops as fully ratified in May of 1979, has memorialized the College of Bishops & requested that that College,acting in its metropolitical authority and otherwise to issue a writ of election to the Ordinary & Standing Committee of the Diocese of the Mid-Atlantic States in accord with Article I, Section I, and Article II, Section B, of its Diocesan Constitution as conformed to the Provincial Constitution to call for the election of a Bishop Coadjutor; and WHEREAS, it appears entirely appropriate to do so;
BE IT THEREFORE resolved and decreed that the College of Bishops of the Anglican Catholic Church, acting in both its Metropolitical Authority, and as a Corporate body, hereby does issue to the Ordinary and Standing Committee of the Diocese of the Mid-Atlantic States no later than fifty days prior to the Provincial Synod authority to call a special election synod for the purpose of electing a Bishop Coadjutor for said Diocese which special election synod shall meet no more than forty days after the meeting of the Provincial Synod & no earlier than seven days after said meeting but within the requirements of Article II,Section (b)(3) of the Constitution of the Diocese of the Mid-Atlantic States.
Dated this 20th day of June, A.D. 1979.
[Signed by the four bishops as Bishops Ordinary]

Volume II And if it seems evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve; September
Number 10 but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord. ---Joshua 24:15 A.D. 1979

SAINT Paul wrote to the brethren in the Church at Corinth some words which seem to have a very real applicability to the Anglican Catholic Church -- to its people, clergy and lay: Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong. (I Corinthians 16:13)

AS Christ's soldiers and servants, we failed badly under the orders to "Watch ye!". For many years there was evidence of the growing apostasy of "Our Church", but we wouldn't believe that "they" would ever "sell us down the river".

WE couldn't conceive of the Church yielding to pressure to abandon her scriptural stand on the remarriage of divorced persons. Even when we saw our canon law ignored or circumvented by some bishops to oblige Church members (we can hardly say "Christians") of wealth & influence, we could not believe that "they" would be able to change that law in General Convention -- but, "they" did.

WE didn't believe that we would live to see the day that bishops of the Church would favor a policy of "abortion on demand", not for women of the streets, but for women, yes and for adolescent girls, of the Church. They excused both of those departures from Christian morality by telling us that we must consider the "human values" involved. What about the "human values" of the millions of fetuses involved -- murdered with the blessings of those apostate "Fathers in . . ." (No! I won't blaspheme)?

MANY of us didn't believe that "they" would dare to deliberately destroy our beloved Book of Common Prayer. For even us older ones it spanned our lifetime in the Church. It was older than many Churchmen. In it we found our form of worship and our theology stated in beautiful,dignified, understandable language.

"THEY" have not only vulgarized the language of our worship, but "they" have weakened, where "they" have not denied, its doctrinal content. "They" even tampered with the wording of the Lord's Prayer and the Creed until so great a groundswell of protest reached them that "they" reneged to the extent of providing us poor ecclesiastical peons with a choice as to which form we will use (if brainwashed parish priests permit us to choose).

"THEY" didn't quite dare eliminate the Sacrament of Holy Confirmation, but they could, and did, reduce it to an awkward addendum to the Episcopal rite of Baptism (& are taking that basic Sacrament from the parish priest so that he becomes less & less the representative of God to his people).

WE could not imagine our historic communion abandoning the tradition of all Catholic Christendom by the creation of priestesses. We knew, and thought "they" did, that St Paul ruled, "Let the women keep silent in the churches." Surely they could never get past that ruling by the Apostle from whose writings so much of our theology is derived -- but "they" did!

"THEY" just about deposed the Holy Apostle from the Episcopate. "They" must please the militant feminists who are very much alive, and even more vocal, today. All that St Paul can adduce is what he wrote two millenia ago. The women's rightists can create disturbances in diocesan offices and conventions. St Paul won't be heard from again until "they" stand before the judgment seat of the Divine Head of the Church to give account of their stewardship of office. St Paul will witness against them.

YES, we failed as watchmen. Some wakened in time "to stand fast in the Faith" - more laymen than priests, more priests than bishops, took a stand against those apostasies. They stood at Minneapolis, in diocesan conventions, in district & deanery & parish meetings. The sad truth is that by then it was too late to stand fast in the defense of our Faith, of our Church, and of our way of worship. We failed to realize, as we do now, that apostasy does not go away when it is ignored -- it just gets bolder.

"QUIT you like men." That's where we are, or should be, now. Thank God for those men who took their stand early, who were astute enough to recognize what was happening & to know that the day for fighting apostasy from within the ecclesia (which it now controls) is long past. Many of us woke late. We didn't want to admit, even to ourselves, the extent of the evil which has befallen our beloved Church.

THERE are many who are still "on the fence". Further departures from the doctrine, discipline and worship of the One, Holy, Catholic and Apostolic Church are looming on the horizon. Those departures may bring some off on our Lord's side of the fence -- may it be soon and may they be many!

"BE strong" -- "Be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might." The future of the Anglican Catholic Church promises no sinecures. We can take to ourselves what our Lord promised to His Apostles: "They will put you out of their Synagogues" ("they" have already done that to some). The time will come that whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service" (and that may not be so far off as we'd like to think).

MARTYRDOM (even our minor martyrdom) requires a strength that is superior to the strength of apostasy. The Son of God gave that strength to a mighty host of martyrs beginning with St Stephen -- His Apostles down to this day. He gives it to each of us according to our needs as we ask for it -- to stand or fall in His service in His faithful Church.

[The above was written "in his pajamas", according to the writer's report, by a retired priest in rural Arkansas.]

REPORT FROM NASHVILLE

FROM the Open Meeting at Nashville, Tennessee, 7 & 8 August, comes a letter from the Rev'd Frederick E. Preuss II, Rector, St Dunstan's Anglican Church, and convenor of the meeting, which is excerpted here:"The meeting was orderly and its goals were accomplished. The atmosphere of our deliberations was intensely frank while avoiding any recourse to unproductive ugliness. Despite a variety of viewpoints and loyalties, there was a common desire to heal the breach in our continuing Church. The participants represented every diocese save for Mid-Atlantic and Southwest, including people from Connecticut, New York, California, Texas, Indiana, North Carolina, Florida, Colorado, Alabama, New Jersey, Vermont, State of Washington, Tennessee and . . . Ontario. In addition, we received letters of support from [16 states]. The only bishop in attendance was the Rt Rev'd James P. Mote . . . although a telegram was received on the day following the meeting from Bishops Burns & Lewis,expressing their regrets for not attending because of other commitments. The complexion of the body was a good cross section of the entire Church. . . . Tapes of the full conference are available from the Rev'd Charles A. Dinkler, 32 Pearl Street, Mystic, Connecticut 06355.

IT was moved & adopted by those present and voting . . . with one dissenting vote, that:

THIS body desires to have the synods planned for Hot Springs & Indianapolis postponed for at least six (6) months; advising the Standing Committees of all seven dioceses of this desire, & further, that prior to the synods being convened efforts be exerted to solve the differences now existing which are causing division & that all six bishops meet together informally toward that end. Finally, that no further action be taken by either side to widen the gap between us and that no episcopal consecrations be performed without the consent of all six bishops.

(Appended to this motion is the following resolution):

WHEREAS, we here present love all our Bishops, and

WHEREAS, we are dismayed and hurt, both individually and as members of Christ's Church, by the fact that our Bishops have been unable to meet together, resolve their differences, and work together, and

WHEREAS, we believe that the four Bishops consecrated at Denver are definitely our original college of Bishops and said college should not be fractured, be it therefore

RESOLVED, That we urge that our four Bishops consecrated at Denver meet together to resolve their differences, including differences regarding the two Bishops subsequently consecrated, and be it further

RESOLVED, That to help in establishing that certain spirit of unity in Christ among our Bishops, an Ad Hoc Liaison Committee, consisting of one layman and one priest assigned to each Bishop with whom he is compatible, be formed. It is understood that the 12 members of this [committee] will elect a chairman & communicate with each other, and when appropriate, with all of us here present, by letter, telephone, or personally, to report progress with regard to bringing our bishops together.

[Father Preuss notes that "a committee has been selected and the members of it will be contacting the respective Bishops as soon as these notices are delivered.]

ORDINATION TRAINING DISCUSSED

THE question of training men for the Priesthood of the Anglican Catholic Church:

THE first thing that should be done is to evaluate the Candidate.

HOW should this be done? Do we start with family, education, job, friends, accomplishments and other material criteria such as financial and social status, age, past bad habits, obvious mistakes and so-called black marks?

CAN we accept an instant conversion, and an emotional call "to serve the Lord"?

ON the other hand are years of attending church regularly, Christian service in the Church and a seemingly exemplary life enough to make a priest?

AGAIN is the attractive aspect of a 6'2" virile male, with an engaging smile and mellifluous baritone voice a necessary attribute to enter Orders?

FINALLY, is a "Generalist" by nature and experience more beneficial than a multi-linguistic philosopher and biblical scholar to the Ministry of the Church?

WHEN some combination of the above is applied and a candidate is named, what does the Church do with him in his training to prepare him for the Priesthood?

WE can't treat a mature thirty-five-year-old the same as an Arts graduate.

CERTAINLY, Church History, Old & New Testament studies, Philosophy and Psychology of Religion must be studied in the first two years after which the mature student should be made deacon regardless of a degree. The candidate who came out of University should, after his second year, go and work in the secular world for a full year. (This does not mean to say he gives up his practising of his faith nor helping with the work of the Church for a year.) It will test his calling. It will make him more aware of a society that needs Christ's reconciliation of man. It will cause very practical questions to arise.

THOSE questions are to be partially answered in the third year (hopefully).

THEREFORE in this year we see: 1) Pastoral Psychology and Behavior;2) Applied Religious Psychology;3) the use of the Liturgy and liturgical year teaching and preaching; 4) Religious Education Practices & Biblical references to explain how man's spiriual needs can be filled; 5) parish visitations where applicable to class studies; 6) an assortment of professionals showing psychiatric, psychological, sociological applications and musical, artistic and political understanding; 7) parish administration; 8) term essays on the theory of years I and II as used in year III.

AT the end of year III mature students would be priested and deacons made of the others if found acceptable. Third year deacons would write a set of exams after the fourth year.

UNDER item 8 the essay marks would be averaged with an assessment of students in the other seven areas. An outside professional assessment would be made. A staff assessment would be made. A self-evaluation would also be considered which should include reading habits, devotional life, development, continuing doubts, suggestions, goals, health,ability to cope in all areas, particular interests developed while training, continuing interest, additional training needed, weaknesses and strengths.

THE accepted mature student now a priest should still remain a vicar for a year responsible to the bishop of his diocese and in association with an archdeacon or a senior priest appointed by the bishop. The younger priest, who would be 25 or 26 at this point, after passing his diaconate exams for the priesthood should, preferably, be an assistant for at least one year and a vicar for a minimum of two years.

SUCH a program creates personal stability in the priesthood & should be instituted on a Churchwide scale. Married or not,every candidate, during his training, should have one year in residence at the training school.

MINIMUM stipend and benefits should commence at the time of ordination to the diaconate, & merit as well as seniority should be known before he accepts ordination. Each new priest should be given a car grant, a cash grant and a housing allowance proportionate to living costs when he is posted.

I have written this for laymen to consider as well as the hierarchy of the Church. It is meant for action.

SO far I have seen no publicized program on this aspect of the Church. If the Church wants strong parish priests & not congregational puppets, true leaders with authority and not malleable "Milquetoasts" feeding the egos of whimsical wardens, start now! [The foregoing was written by a Canadian priest and, if nothing else, ought to generate some serious thinking about the future of the continuing Church.]

A WARDEN'S VACATION REPORT

ON our recent vacation a couple of weeks ago, we had the opportunity to visit the famous Norwich Cathedral in Norwich, England, whose boys' choir is famous throughout Europe. We went expecting a spiritually uplifting worship service and message. Instead, we were forced to sit through the Church of England's Alternate Service 3, which combined the worst aspects of PECUSA's Trial Liturgies. The sermon was preached by one of the deans of the Cathedral and we were treated to a political diatribe on President Carter's lack of leadership in the energy crisis and an entreaty to sister Anglican Communions to recognize the rights of women to become priests. And people wonder why so many leave the Established Church! A subsequent visit to the Shrine of Our Lady of Walsingham assuaged most of our bruised feelings, and was actually the high point of the whole trip.

GOD love you and be with us all over the next critical months.

PASS THE PEACE!

It used to be "Pass the butter," at table following Grace.
Now, in church, I'm exhorted to mutter:
"Pass the peace," with a public embrace.

This contrived, artificial instruction
(theatrics of kiss and care) is disturbing interruption to quiet devotion and prayer.

In His house and down on my knees, traditional worship is sweet;
shake my hand at the door, if you please,
and remember my name when we meet.

But spare me mechanical clutter, the staged affection en masse . . .
I seek His Bread, not butter;
His the Power of Peace to Pass!

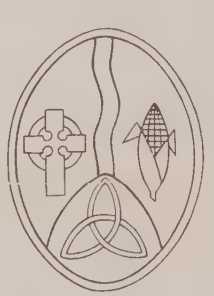
CATHOLICISM & MODERNITY

JAMES Hitchcock (his earlier books, Decline & Fall of Radical Catholicism and Recovery of the Sacred, mark him as a spokesman of some stature for traditional, moderate Roman Catholicism) in his newest book, which is subtitled (appropriately enough for loyalist continuing Churchmen) Confrontation or Capitulation?, speaks directly to traditional, moderate Anglicans albeit it is written for his fellow Roman Catholics. In an all too familiar Litany for Anglicans, the book's blurb says that Dr Hitchcock's book analyzes such "dominant factors of the present critical situation" as "the flight from a sense of religion's relation to eternal life; the loss of a sense of history; the emergence of a gross individualism . . .; the substitution of totalitarian, soi-disant 'progressive' political ideologies for the discipline, dogmatic certitude, and dedication of a putatively outdated religion; the illusion of pluralism whereby an antireligious consensus muffles the independent witness of the Church; & the triumph of a bureaucracy which emphasizes innovation, flexibility, and a noncredal 'problem-solving' approach to religious issues." [Dr Hitchcock, are you sure you weren't writing about PECUSA?] Catholicism & Modernity is published by Seabury Press, 815 - 2nd Avenue, New York City 10017, at $12.95. If any diocese, deanery or parish is interested in bulk purchase, contact Franklin Dennis at the above address. In any event, get your hands on a copy if for no other reason than to read about the incident reported beginning in the middle of page 145.



IN charity, pray for the "whole state of Christ's Church".

OFFERED

THE third in a series of position papers, "You Might Like to Know", from St Willibrord's Press, 1744 Devon Avenue, Chicago 60660, is now available. The little folder, subtitled "The Anglican Catholic Church Is . . .", sells for 15¢, 100 for $10. It is an excellent, in-a-nutshell approach to the continuing Church and would be a good piece to have available to give to visitors and inquirers. It would be a good idea, right now, to write for St Willibrord's current booklist - be sure to tuck in a dollar to cover postage; for pamphlets, 35¢ postage.

FROM the Fellowship: Fr Simcox's "Death by a Thousand Cuts" or "What Are They Doing to Your Prayer Book?" In quantities of ten or more they are 45¢ a piece, including postage and handling; in lesser quantities, 50¢ a piece. Upcoming is a pamphlet with the intriguing title of "Witchcraft, Priestesses and the Domino Effect", written by Fr Robert C. Harvey, Rector of St Timothy's, Charleston, South Carolina, and author of The Holy Slice and A House Divided. The pamphlet is at the printer's presently and price and availability will be announced in the near future.

FROM Hillspeak's Operation Pass Along you may request not only used copies of the 1928 edition of the Book of Common Prayer and the Hymnal, 1940, but other books about the Church as well. The service operates on a first-come, first-served basis; books requested and not on the shelves at the time are listed in a "wanted" file and the request retained for a year. Send your requests to: Operation Pass Along, Hillspeak, Eureka Springs, AR 72632. There is no charge, but reimbursement of postage expended is appreciated.
[For "1,000 Cuts" (see above), make your remittance payable to FCC & mail to: FCC, POB 252, Eureka Springs, AR 72632.]

WITH A caveat ("We have not tried to be scrupulous as to purity of heraldic tradition, at least partly because none of us knows anything about that; mostly, we just wanted to signify what we stand for"), the Deanery of the Missouri Valley, Diocese of the Holy Trinity, sent the emblem shown with, in addition to the foregoing caveat, the following: The seal shows a silver river (we have rendered the Big Muddy in silver - heraldic license)flowing across a field(take that literally, please) of green. The corn denotes God's bounty in this area, for which we are grateful. The Celtic cross denotes our Anglican heritage. The symbol of the Diocese of the Holy Trinity on a field of purple for our beloved Bishop, James, completes the seal. [The deanery seal was done by a parishioner of St Aidan's, Des Moines, Iowa, and in a subsequent issue of the newsletter, we'll present the seal of that parish -- along with a similarly delightful description written by the Dean of the Missouri Valley]

HITHER & YON

INADVERTENTLY we were treading on the toes of Christian World, the excellent weekly newspaper published in England (which is having its own financial difficulties at the moment that will,pray God,be resolved ere too long), by using "'Round and 'Bout" for our wrap up of happenings in the continuing Church. So, hither and yon, here is what is happening around and about!

IN a lengthy, and generally sympathetic, interview in The Herald-Telephone, Bloomington, Indiana, Fr David Belden, Rector of Good Shepherd, Bloomington, and St Mary the Virgin, Evansville, asserted that "schism is not new to the Anglican Church . . ." & compared the present to the IV Century schism precipitated by Arius and his followers in rejecting the doctrine of the Trinity.

WITH the formation of the New England Franciscan Fellowship, four groups of Anglican Franciscans are active in the continuing Church. To get information about them, write to the address closest to you: 1) Third Order of St Francis, St Mary's Church, 2290 S Clayton, Denver 80210; 2) The American Greyfriars, POB 396, Old Chlesea Station, New York 10011; 3) The Anglican Province of Our Lady of Guadalupe, POB 36096, Dallas 75235; 4) The New England Franciscan Fellowship, c/o Dean T. Steward, 24 Ledgewood Estates, Ashland, New Hampshire 03217.

NOT yet (so far as we know) a parish, but actively working in that direction is the Anglican Fellowship of the North Country, based at Schuylerville, New York. For further information, write or call POB 426, Saranac Lake 12983 (518-891-4272) or David Bullard, RD, Schuylerville 12871 (518-695-3765).

FROM the newsletter of Holy Cross, Webster, New York: A church will be successful if the head of the church is Jesus Christ and everyone acts that way.

THE Anglican Church of St Thomas of Canterbury, Roanoke, Virginia, received 40 large 1928 BCPs from Christ Episcopal Church, Marion, Virginia, given "to their departed brethren with love & in the hope of eventual reunion."

ACTIVELY developing a diocesan library, the Diocese of the Midwest has provided Operation Pass Along, Hillspeak, "a revised & enlarged bibliography." The library is located in Coshocton, Ohio. The Southwest Diocese applied in person.

ALL SAINTS', Janesville, Wisconsin, is the happy recipient of a 75-year-old altar, originally in St Peter's Lutheran Church.

FROM "The Angelus" of St Mary the Virgin, Evansville, Indiana: The precious gift of the continuing Church which God has made available to us can only be purchased at sacrificial cost. We cannot give only of our surplus, but sacrificially. If we do not, the pearl of great price, the continuing Church, now being held out to us will be taken away.

"WITCHCRAFT, PRIESTESSES AND THE DOMINO EFFECT" (SEE COLUMN 2 ABOVE) IS NOW AVAILABLE FROM FCC - 1 TO 9 COPIES 60¢ EACH; 10 OR MORE 50¢ EACH.

Volume II Number 11 — And if it seems evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve; but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord. ---Joshua 24:15 — Fall 1979 Directory

SOME explanation is necessary for the Fall Directory of loyalist parishes published by the FCC. It is not a directory of the Anglican Catholic Church or the Anglican Church in America or any other church body. The parishes listed herein requested that they be listed by responding to an inquiry directed to every parish or congregation of which the editor had any knowledge (at least two inquiries to those parishes which did not respond to the first). If your parish or congregation is not listed, no response was received by the FCC Newsletter. The listing is within a format established by the editor of the newsletter & is based on information furnished by the parish. Within an alphabetical lisiting by states and provinces intermingled, each parish is listed by city, & if there are two or more, alphabetically within the city. The information shown: parish name, mailing address, telephone number(s) (up to three) and the diocesan affiliation, coded as follows: Canadian Jurisdiction (CJ); Christ the King (CK); Holy Trinity (HT); Mid-Atlantic States (MA); Midwest (MW); Southeastern United States (SE);Southwest (SW); and the Vicariate General established by the ACC's College of Bishops (VG). The symbol () indicates that the parish furnished no such information,declared itself independent of any diocesan affiliation, or named a diocese not listed above. Some additional information is available on individual parishes & may be obtained by writing FCC at POB 252, Eureka Springs, Arkansas 72632 or calling 501-253-9701 (8 a.m. to 5 p.m.) or 253-9800 (after 6 p.m. and on weekends).

FCC The Fellowship of Concerned Churchmen NEWSLETTER

Volume II And if it seems evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve; October
Number 12 but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord. ---Joshua 24:15 AD 1979

OCTOBER is a good month to make a contribution to the newsletter if you have not yet done so this year. While the Fellowship has pledged to underwrite it, the production and postage costs are a drain on the FCC budget. We've no idea that the newsletter will be self-supporting, but it should bear some of its own load. How much of a contribution? You be the judge. The only guideline we have is the one devised by our friend Jane down in New Orleans: "I had in mind $13.00 per annum ($1.00 for Christ and $1.00 for each Holy Apostle)." As we noted in April when we first reported Jane's proposal, the newsletter would thrive on such a diet.

BISHOP MORSE TO FATHER PREUSS

THANK you for your letter of August 13 regarding the meeting held in Nashville on August 8, 1979. As you know, I have just returned from a two months absence.

The decisions of the Nashville meeting have my approval. I am grateful that many clergy & laity of the Church are concerned with the tragedy of the divisions among us. Therefore, in this late hour, I feel that it is urgent that we act upon the Nashville resolution. I will be happy to meet with the other three original Bishops consecrated at Denver if a climate of trust and reassurance can be established. This would include three important conditions.

1. That the Hot Springs meeting and the Indianapolis Synod be mutually postponed.
2. That the establishment of "The Patrimony" initiated by the other bishops for work in the Diocese of the Southeast and the Diocese of Christ the King be officially terminated and that the communicants that have been encouraged to separate themselves from the parishes to which they belonged be officially instructed to return thereto.
3. That it is understood that the first meeting will only include the four original Bishops consecrated at Denver & their assistants.

Dear Fr Preuss, I would appreciate it if you will communicate this to the other Bishops immediately, and ask them to send me their written consents to this request. I would press the urgency of time in this matter. We must give at least a month's notice to the hotels in Hot Springs & in Indianapolis of our cancellation.

Thank you, again, for your vision and good will.
With every good wish and blessing,
Yours in Christ,
s/+Robert Sherwood Morse

REPORT TO & FROM ENGLAND

THE Administrator of The Shrine of Our Lady of Walsingham, Walsingham, Norfolk, England, visited Anglican Catholic Churches in the United States and Canada in the late spring & early summer. Following is the report of that visit, addressed to "the people in Britain", according to Father Carefull. Despite its point of reference, the report has much to say to the continuing Church.

WHAT has led so many thoughtful and committed Christians to leave the Episcopal Church? It is essential to reach the right answer if any true evaluation of the situation is to be made. It is necessary to appreciate the background very thoroughly because it is peculiar to North America and has little counterpart in the United Kingdom.

One might begin by saying that secession is an all too familiar part of the American scene: the first colonies were secessions from England, the setting up of the United States after the War of Independence was but the culmination of a process lasting 150 years. Secession has never ceased: the lure of the frontier, the riches of the west, have continually beckoned Americans to leave home and make a new life elsewhere. Understandably, sects have flourished and we may be pardoned, at first, if we ask if the ACC is just another one to add to a seemingly endless list.

There is some truth in this argument but by no means the whole truth & it would be highly misleading to base one's attitude to the ACC upon it because the Episcopal Church has been remarkably free from schisms in the course of its history; hitherto one group broke away in the 19th Century and it was small and insignificant. No other is known, so far as I am aware.

Suddenly, however, a major disruption has occurred but you soon learn that it hs been looming for at least a decade . . .

Since the early 60s it seems the zeitgeist has blown with peculiar force in the Episcopal Church. It blew here, of course, and we remember how "Honest to God" was full of it, how priests would forsake their ministry to go and do social work, how unfashionable it was to believe in God transcendent. "My kingdom" has suddenly become a thing very much of this world. In America always everything goes to the uttermost and the zeitgeist attained gale force. In consequence there was an assault made on the Creeds and upon Christian morality. This has now come to a victorious conclusion. Bishops and others now openly proclaim their disbelief in God incarnate; it is no longer necessary to preach the indissolubility of marriage; sexual deviation & perversion is understood to be quite natural. All of this over the last decade or so has provoked a powerful reaction among both clergy and laity. Many have simply ceased to be Episcopalians. It is estimated that during this period some two million people out of a total of four million have ceased to attend church. Of these many have become Orthodox -a more viable alternative in the USA than in England, some have submitted to Rome, but the majority have simply lapsed. This last group is the most significant because church going booms in America.

In the midst of all this turmoil over faith & morals, the Episcopal Church, in common with other parts of Christendom, saw fit to issue a proposed new Prayer Book. In spite of its undoubted merits it seemed to many to contain too much that bore evidence of the prevailing liberalism. It was seen as a threat to the prevailing orthodoxy of the Church and it therefore encountered very strong opposition.

The flash point came over the decision to permit priestesses to minister in the Church. Some thought it imperative to leave and did so, others decided it would be better to remain in the Episcopal Church and resist the liberal advance from within.

This report is now concerned with those who left . . .

Some eighteen parishes were visited but in many instances other groups joined in so that contact was made with, perhaps, half a dozen more. The experience was remarkably uniform. In every instance I met diligent priests and devoted people. The priests in most cases had left behind a church and a salary. The people were prepared to do without the comfort and convenience of a church building so services were often held in their houses. There was ample opportunity to talk to the congregations and -more important- listen to what they said. Often enough what I heard went something like this . . .

"Father (it's a layman speaking because this is essentially a lay movement), I felt completely let down, betrayed. My Church was no longer teaching the Faith. It seemed to be going crazy. I wasn't so bothered about women priests like some are, but I was so bewildered that bishops could deny the Resurrection. I stopped going to church. Then one day I saw a small advert in the paper: "Anyone interested in the ACC please contact Mrs A at such a place". I did so and soon we were a dozen folk meeting together in our homes to say Morning and Evening Prayer on Sundays. Eventually a priest was able to come to us and now you see us as we are. We want you to understand, Father, that we have not left the Church; the Church left us."

That statement, or its equivalent, I heard repeated from beginning to end of the tour. The ACC has come about as a result of long years of increasing disillusionment with the Episcopal Church. The priestess issue was the occasion for the disruption, the real cause goes far, far deeper and, given the American background, I consider it inevitable.

I have already referred to the diligence of the priests & the devotion of the people. In neither case do I speak lightly or conventionally; I found both remarkable. Here are Christians very much in earnest to whom the faith means everything. I found no anger among them, but I did perceive the deepest anguish; none left the Episcopal Church without great searching of heart but so many said, "Now we feel at home again." To begin with their claim "We have not left the Church; the Church has left us" I thought the typical utterance of the schismatic. When my tour ended I no longer thought so: I considered it a striking way of speaking the sober truth.

The ACC is conservative in many ways & this is understandable. There is a reluctance to consider liturgical reform at present, great stress being laid upon the 1928 American Prayer Book. Curiously there is also a tendency to adhere to discarded R.C. ceremonies - but the ACC is not alone in that!

People have said that politically it is very right wing. This I found to be a gross exaggeration.

Fingers of scorn have been levelled at the bishops who, it is said, cannot pull together. There are real problems here and I think it fair to say that the bishops so far consecrated are essentially parish priests. Given time and patience there is no reason the tensions should not be resolved and, in any case, the problems are nothing like as acute or scandalous as those confronting the Episcopal Church.

There is a problem, too, over the ministry. Full-time priests are hard to maintain so there are many part-timers who have secular employment. Priests are scarce and many congregations go without for months on end. My visit to the congregation at Salt Lake City was the occasion of the third Eucharist this year. Training for the priesthood also presents difficulties. Where can a man be trained? There seems no lack of candidates but the doors of Episcopal seminaries are closed to them.

Yet another problem concerns litigation. Decisions from the law courts are awaited determining the ownership of church buildings now used by the ACC but still, it is claimed, the property of the Episcopal Church. Much will depend upon the outcome but I find it hard to resist the conclusion that the Church will be the healthier without the heavy impedimenta of property.

What of the future? Will the Church continue to expand? What are the hopes for reconciliation?

Answers to these questions can only be tentative. Hitherto growth has been slow but steady. There are some 35,000 communicants in the ACC and probably as many, if not more, sympathizers remaining in the Episcopal Church who, for one reason or another, have not seen fit to leave as yet. Should the demoralization and secularization continue to advance in the PECUSA then it is hard not to imagine a steady flow of new members. For priests the choice is hard. For those with wives and families it is hazardous to leave behind an assured income and many have come to an accommodation with their consciences. I found great confidence everywhere about the future, often it was heartening to discover that the ACC appeals to those of no denomination, so new ground is being covered.

It is impossible to resist the conclusion that despite many difficulties the ACC is here to stay. The generosity of its members, their deep and sober conviction, their loyalty to the faith are qualities against which the gates of hell shall not prevail. "Father, I've got the most wonderful people" was a testimony heard right across the continent from almost every priest I saw.

Reconciliation is impossible for years to come. The ACC has challenged the whole concept of the Anglican Communion as adumbrated in the latest documents to emerge from the Lambeth Conference. The bishops envision an amalgam of provinces as the ecclesiastical counterparts of the British Commonwealth in which rival concepts of ministry can co-exist. At all costs the concern must keep together and that cost, it seems, must include the truth.

It is time, therefore, to applaud those who have the courage to witness to traditional Christianity, to declare our unity with them and repudiate those who are preaching another gospel.

A PLEA FOR UNITY

WE WENT to Minneapolis in September, 1976 with hope and came away in deep despair, because we had witnessed the destruction of our beloved Church.

We went to St Louis in September, 1977 with great expectations and we left with a sense of spiritual uplift and personal dedication. We left with the Affirmation of St Louis. Now we had hope.

We were told how to start new churches; how to build altars & make kneelers; how to acquire candlesticks and altar bread and chalices.

And we did! All the little people across the country, who could not tolerate the heresies and false doctrines of PECUSA, left the stone buildings and the altars, and the stained glass windows. Parishes started to spring up all over this great land.

We met in Masonic halls, in funeral parlors, in empty stores, & in private homes. It really didn't matter, because the Church is not a building. The Church is the congregation of the faithful. It is people, like you and me.

We gave up a lot to form this Anglican Catholic Church. We left behind many dear friends. We left treasured associations of a number of years. We left altar guilds & choirs, vestry meetings and church suppers. But it didn't matter, because we were the Church.

And we gave up time. The fishermen left their nets; the housewives left dishes in the sink; the commuters tried to catch earlier trains; the factory workers gave up their overtime, in order to give precious hours toward establishing new congregations. Many dedicated priests gave up their salaries, and their pensions, and had to work two jobs, in order to survive.

We gave up time with our families, & in some cases, alienated family ties. Our friends didn't see us as often. Our friends in PECUSA didn't see us at all, and they shook their heads. They said, "Why are you wasting your time with these foolish notions? The new Prayer Book isn't so bad. You get used to it, after a while. As for women priests, we can't see anything wrong with them. Didn't the Lord create male and female equally?"

But it didn't matter what anyone said. We knew we were doing the right thing. We couldn't compromise with our faith. So we continued to sacrifice our time, our money, and our talents, as our Lord would have us do.

Then we traveled to Denver in 1978 with renewed vigor, and a great sense of pride,because now we would have Bishops. We would have shepherds to lead and guide us. We would be a truly apostolic Church.

But something happened after that magnificent historical event in January, 1978. Some said that we moved too fast;some thought that we weren't moving fast enough. Some believed that we were not ready for Dallas, and that we were not prepared to vote on a constitution.

Personality clashes entered into the conflict, & bitter words were printed about one another. The Anglican Catholic Church developed into an armed camp, with each side thinking it was completely right.

Certainly, the Devil has played a large part in all this. We have all had our own selfish interests. When we listen to the Devil, we can't listen to our Lord's word. We can't hear that still, small voice of God.

We may be sure that the Churches in Ephesus, and Corinth, and Galatia,had to strain sometimes to hear our Lord's word, too & that St Paul became discouraged at their "hardness of heart".

And so, we have come through Minneapolis, St Louis, Denver, Dallas and now the faithful have gathered together in Nashville in August, 1979.

We have come from all parts of the nation to renew our faith in God, and in one another. We have come together in one place, with very differing views, as did our founding fathers in 1776, to pledge our lives and sacred honor to a most just cause.

The Anglican Catholic Church must continue as the One, Holy, Catholic & Apostolic Church. All of us have made mistakes, because founding a Church was very new to us. All of us have "erred and strayed from His ways like lost sheep, and have offended against His holy laws."

It doesn't matter what has happened in the past. We must work and pray for unity in our Church, so that "we may be all of one heart and of one soul," - and "may with one mind and one mouth glorify our Lord, Jesus Christ".

[The foregoing was written by a Churchwoman in the Northeast. Following are extracts from various resolutions and open letters that have been written in the past few weeks expressing dismay, consternation, outrage at the confusion rampant in the Anglican Catholic Church.]

VOICES IN THE WILDERNESS

FROM Good Shepherd, Woodbury, New York: We . . . write to express our outrage at the disunity in the Church . . . It is essential that our original unity in the Spirit of St Louis be maintained, so we can provide a home for so many poor souls that need us so much. These will only come if our house is in order.
FROM the Deanery of New England (Diocese of the Holy Trinity): The disunity among the bishops of the Movement is a shame and a scandal causing despair among the faithful. . . . We, as clergy of the Northeast, consider all six of you to be our bishops, and we will continue to pray for all of you as bishops of our Church.
FROM St Anselm's, Sequim, Washington: We . . . hereby petition: I. That this diocese eschew further constitutions and canons until the whole continuing Church can, unitedly, participate in the same. That if there be an assemblage of persons in Arkansas,it devote itself to daily recitation of the Litany from the Book of Common Prayer,with suitable meditations upon the great danger we are in by our unhappy divisions. II. That this diocese remain in unity with the whole continuing Church . . . III. That actions affecting the unity of our people,such as the rejection or adoption of constitutions & canons for the provincial Church, or the changing of our official name, be taken, not by a few -be they bishops or privy-councils- but with the previous knowledge and consent of all our people . . . The above petitions . . . are spoken, not in arrogance, but in heart-felt love and in great anguish of spirit.
FROM the Church in Massachusetts: We, the members of St Alban's [Harvard] and St Botolph's [Boston] Churches, are distressed by the disagreement & wrangling going on among our Bishops. We are so concerned that we feel we must write this letter. We humbly ask you . . . to correct the situation, otherwise the lack of leadership and general malaise in the Anglican Catholic Church will preclude growth and cripple us . . . The people are confused, bewildered & frustrated by seemingly unimportant issues.

HITHER & YON

NOT ALL is doom and gloom. For news of the continuing Church in an upbeat mood,read the following,gleaned from parish bulletins, and the like.
FROM All Saints', Janesville, Wisconsin: (20 August) Our building fund was launched two weeks ago with two cucumbers and one green pepper from Mollie's garden. (28 August) So far we have been able to save approximately $3,000 & we now have a building fund to which the Christian Projects Commission has contributed.
FROM Canada's Anglican News: The Rev Bruce Crawford of Hamilton, Ontario, was ordained to the diaconate on 30 June, by the Rt Rev William F. Burns, in historic St Mark's Church, West Orange, New Jersey.
FROM Christ Church, Columbus, Ohio: On Sunday, 22 September, our faithful Acolytes will be recognized at a Choral Evensong . . . Several new Acolytes trained by [the Acolyte Master] will be inducted.
FROM Holy Apostles', Glendale, California: The vestry . . . at its June meeting unanimously approved the application of Donald Ashman to study for the diaconate.
FROM Good Shepherd, Oklahoma City: The time has come, as it had to sooner or later (and we thank God it was sooner) to say farewell to our quaint little "chapel" . . . and move into more commodious quarters. Last Sunday should have proved the point beyond doubt to all present as we overflowed into the hall and the adjacent office.
FROM "The Advocate": The parishioners of St Thomas of Canterbury (Philipsburg, Pennsylvania) and St Alban's (State College) have been invited to share in the celebration of the Feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary . . . with the parishioners of St Barbara's PNCC at St Barbara's.
FROM Holy Trinity, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania: The Rev'd Father Charles Hedelund [has been] professed & clothed in the habit of the Third Order Regular of the Society of St Francis . . . at St Mary's, Plano, Texas, and given the professed name of Dominic Giles.
FROM Good Shepherd, Abingdon, Virginia: As of the printing of this bulletin (26 August) Father and Mrs [A. Fraser] MacCammond are having the moving van unload and are moving into their new home on Circle Drive.
FROM a letter from a Loyalist in Virginia: Our Senior Warden says we will have a building within a year. I think him over sanguine, but he has consistently proved me mistaken on financial matters.
SEND the FCC Newsletter your parish bulletin - we will try to keep "Hither & Yon" an upbeat part of the newsletter, not in a spirit of pollyanaism necessarily but in an attempt to show by example and precept that the continuing Church continues to grow and flourish.

THE CHANGE in banner, above, may seem to be a trifling thing, but 'tis done to point up a most important principle. By whatever name, this publication, if one can so honor it with such a designation, is a labor of love performed on off hours on borrowed equipment in a borrowed office. Its paid staff consists of 2/3s of a young woman who maintains the mailing files, fills the orders for tracts and sees that the newspiece is mailed out as expeditiously as 2/3s of a person can achieve; the volunteer staff now consists of a beat-up, raunchy, tired and retired Marine with trifocals, a bald head, ratty beard and four stubby fingers that peck away at the typewriter keyboard. (No, Virginia, this is not typeset.) There is not the time nor energy, & quite likely not the talent, to develop news such as the late Mr Kipplinger used to do for the Washington newsletter or as the tornado-energied, redoubtable Dragon Lady does for The Christian Challenge. There is just time enough to comb through parish and diocesan publications (& other esoteric sources) so that you in Sequim may know what you all in Charleston are doing, i.e., an exchange of news. Voila! The Fellowship of Concerned Churchmen News Exchange.

FROM A PRIEST IN IOWA

ALLOW me to endorse Sterling Rayburn's call for unity (FCC Newsletter, March '79) within the Anglican Catholic Church of North America [sic]. As an Anglican priest of 27 years standing who has served parishes in Canada, England and now in the United States, I have always considered myself to be both "Catholic" and "Reformed", and I have detested the extremes of the "spikes" and the "prots" in the Church of England, the Anglican Church of Canada and the Protestant Episcopal Church. I have not left the latter body of apostate bishops and clergy to join another religious fad. As I understand our glorious Anglican heritage the Church of England became "Protestant" at the Reformation in order, as Bishop Wilberforce pointed out, that "it might become the more truly Catholic." It is essential that we distinguish carefully between the adjective "catholic" & the noun "catholicism". Alain Besancon, director of studies at L'Ecole des Hautes Etudes in Paris, points out in the Spring, 1979 issue of Daedalus Journal "The noun 'Catholicism' is a 17th century neologism. Before that there was only the adjective 'catholic', which was applied to the Church to denote its universality. In the 19th century, 'Catholicism' comes to mean the opposite of Catholic, since it refers to a socially distinct milieu, and defines the boundaries of a life style and way of thinking "rightly". While problems are developing within Christian society, it is also shrinking of its own accord, by imposing as a norm for affiliation no longer faith but the mores, customs, language & ideas that prevail within it. This further contributed to the 'sectarian' drift of the French Church."(p 25)

May these words of Monsieur Besancon be a warning to the leaders of the Anglican Catholic Church of North America not to turn it into merely another "sect" no matter how "high church" in ceremonial and liturgy. To be Catholic in the ancient accepted sense of the word was to hold fast to the doctrine, teaching and practice of the blessed apostles themselves. It meant to believe in "Mere Christianity" as C. S. Lewis loved to call the Holy Catholic Faith. The Christian Faith, if it is to preserve its character, must be, and must be seen to be, essentially the same as the faith of Christians of the past. What we believe & practice in our own day must not be different in kind from the beliefs of a St Paul, a St Augustine, or John Donne, John Keble and Charles Simeon.

In the expression, "I believe in the Holy Catholic Church", the reference is not to any man-made institution but that Body of the Lord Jesus Christ for which He gave His own precious life blood. Let the bishops of our Church never forget that the flock committed to their pastoral charge belongs to the Lord of the Church & not to them. For this one reason let them set an example of charity towards each other.

The Anglican Catholic Church is both "Catholic" & "Evangelical" as the greatest Anglicans of the past have always taught. Our Church affirms in its Articles of Religion, & in the Homily appended to it, the great biblical doctrine of justification by faith or, better worded, by "grace alone" in the most unequivocal terms. Our eucharistic liturgy has rightly been interpreted by Gregory Dix in The Shape of the Liturgy as founded upon and expressing that doctrine. He wrote: "As a piece of liturgical craftsmanship it is in the first rank - once its intention is understood. It is not a discordant attempt at a catholic rite, but the only effective attempt ever made to give liturgical expression to the doctrine of 'Justification by Faith alone'." (p 672)

Our Church likewise affirms the character of the sacraments as means of grace and as "generally necessary to salvation". Our Church affirms in its Articles that Scripture is "God's Word written" and that it contains "all things necessary to salvation", "so that whatsoever is not read therein, nor may be proved thereby is not to be required . . . so that it should be believed as an article of the Faith." Our public worship also is scriptural throughout. Likewise our Church pays undoubted deference to Tradition, accepting the Creeds, paying respectful attention to the first four General Councils & reverencing the "godly and decent order of the ancient Fathers" & taking care not to overthrow unnecessarily any true and valuable element of pre-Reformation belief or practice. Yet the supremacy of Holy Scripture is fully safeguarded by the acceptance of the Creeds not on their own authority but because they may be proved by Scripture.

Our Church defines the Church visible in terms of the preaching of the pure Word of God & the due ministration of the sacraments. Likewise our Church maintains the character of the Holy Catholic Church as an outward & visible society which values every external form which can act as a vehicle and sign of unity and continuity with the Church of the ages. It preserves with the utmost care the historic episcopal ministry &, while it has an explicit and binding doctrine of episcopacy, it refers in the Preface to the Ordinal to its continuous existence in, and reverent estimation by, the Church from the Apostles' time, and on that ground, makes provision "to the intent that said Orders may be continued and reverently used and esteemed in the Church of England" and its daughter Churches overseas.

Our beloved ACCNA thus holds together in one body of Christ both the Catholic and Evangelical traditions because both traditions are firmly based upon & derived from the teaching of Holy Scripture. If ever our Church were to deny the objective character of the sacraments or refuse to tradition & Creeds their due place as the expression of the Church's teaching authority, or to treat the outward institutional life of the Church and its ministry as a thing indifferent, it is certain that the "catholic" element in the ACCNA would be driven out. Similarly, if ever our Church were to depart from the doctrine of justification of faith in Christ and by God's grace alone, or to reject the supremacy of Holy Scripture, or to deny the necessity for personal conversion and saving faith in Jesus Christ as man's only Lord and Saviour, then the "evangelical" element would equally certainly be driven out.

Let us pray to the Lord of our Church that none of these will happen. Let us pray to our Saviour that the great body of Anglican Churchmen will hold fast to the full and balanced Anglican position neither looking to Geneva nor to Rome nor to Moscow but solely to Christ Himself. Let us hope as well as believe that the "catholic" and "evangelical" traditions will be able to continue to live together in one body and that we may all attain unto the stature of a "fulness of Christ". This, I believe, is the only justification for the existence of ACCNA. God has called us to this historic vocation in order that the Holy Spirit may lead us into fuller apprehension of the Truth which is Christ Jesus, until it pleases our Lord to make us perfect and we come in the unity of faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto full-grown men, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ. [The Rev'd Professor E. L. Hebden Taylor of Dordt College and Priest-in-Charge of St Anselm's, Sioux Center]

SYNOD & MEETING

ALTHOUGH the Synod of the Anglican Catholic Church in Indianapolis, 18-20 October, and the meeting of the Dioceses of Christ the King and the Southeastern United States in Hot Springs, 16-18 October, will be matters of history by the time you receive this newspiece, our deadline is such that we cannot give you any information about either in this issue. We will report to you, in the December issue whatever information is furnished to us from either body by its press officer, or by observers at either or both.

FROM A PRIEST IN ENGLAND

IT IS plainly obvious to any discerning Christian that the forces of evil are increasingly on the rampage during these latter days. They are brilliantly deployed under Satan, the arch-strategist, whose primary aim over the centuries has been to split and finally to destroy the Church of Christ.

On the other hand we have our Lord's categorical assurance that the gates of hell shall not prevail against His Church. Without condemning outright, however, the Roman Catholic and Anglican Churches, no one can deny that many bishops & priests have fallen victim to the wiles of the enemy, & that the Churches themselves have fallen (and are still falling) into grievous error and wickedness. It is hard to see how these Churches, either separately, or in any conceivable combination, could be regarded as "true" without undergoing some very radical process of repentance and renewal. Of this there is as yet little sign.

Is the Orthodox Church in any different case? From information now received it could well be the case that in Orthodoxy will be found a faithful remnant representing that visible unity expressly commanded by Christ. If so, it follows that all attempts to unite along contemporary ecumenical lines are delusive & that the only way forward is to rebuild upon the true remnant foundation (if such there be), i.e. upon Christ Himself as visibly present in the world.

In this event it must further follow that so-called breakaway Churches (however well justified in their action, such as the Anglican Catholic Church) would best serve the cause of Christ by seeking genuine re-union with the Orthodox Church - or such remnant within Orthodoxy which remained incontestably "faithful and true".

In this way one can visualize a renewed worldwide Orthodox Catholic Church which alone may have the spiritual strength and authority, in the days to come, to check the onslaught of Satan and finally to destroy his evil work in the Name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Meanwhile, the time is short and could indeed soon run out! [The Rev'd Eric Inglesby, MA, RN Retd (C of E), Gloucestershire]

FROM A PRIEST IN CANADA

THIS may interest you and perhaps you would like to put it in the News Letter. It would correct a number of misstatements made about the Canadian loyalist church which have appeared in other papers from time to time.

On September 22 the continuing Anglican Church of Canada, also known as the Anglican Catholic Church of Canada held a Synod in Winnipeg, Manitoba, under the chairmanship of Bishop-elect Carmino deCatanzaro. Bishop Mote was present as an observer, and gave his blessing, and Bishop Morse sent a letter conveying his blessing on the Synod and regrets that he could not be present. The key resolution which was adopted is to the effect that as the continuing Anglican Church of Canada we continue to be in full communion with all parts of the continuing Episcopal Church in the United States although not part of that structure. This is the historic position of our Church. The Canons of the Anglican Church of Canada prior to 1965 (when uncatholic changes were first made by General Synod) are still our Canons. The Synod also adopted the Declaration of Utrecht with a view to restoration of Communion with the Polish National Catholic Church, and making secure our communion with Utrecht. All Bishops, priests and laity are welcome at our altars if they accept the principles of the Affirmation of St Louis, and we hope to be welcome at theirs.

ANOTHER example of impure, heraldrically that is, art from the Dean of the Missouri Valley who sent us the device reproduced in the September issue. As with the seal for the Deanery of the Missouri Valley, Father Louis Falk sent us a description: . . . the seal for St Aidan's shows the stag, St Aidan's symbol, with a Celtic cross denoting his having come to Northumbria from Lindisfarne to rescue the Faith from the pagans in the North of England. The silver cross is placed protectively within the stag's antlers to commemorate St Aidan as defensor fidei pretiosae long before Henry claimed a similar title. Half the background is a field of purple for St Aidan the Bishop (and signifying the preservation of Apostolic Order in the ACC). The remaining field is white for St Aidan the Confessor (and for the preservation of the Catholic Faith in the ACC).

FROM the Senior Warden of All Saints', Janesville, Wisconsin: Set your course, trim your sails - and reach for the wind.

Just a few sailing phrases I acquired during brief sailing encounters last summer while crewing in regattas for a friend. Putting aside scientific explanation, a sailboat acquires its fastest speed, ironically, while sailing into the wind at a 45° angle. This sailing position is called "reaching" and it seems to me to be analagous to our church work.

All of us want the Anglican Catholic Church to grow because we are its pioneers. I think we have witnessed that when we are faced with the largest task against the greatest odds, we work the hardest and accomplish the most.

What does it mean to be Wisconsin's first? It means that our course has been chartered; it means that we must trim our sail & speed to establish other parishes within this area where practical - even though against overwhelming odds . . . how many people have even heard the good news of an Anglican Catholic Church?

I believe we should set as our goal one new parish each year. We have Madison, Milwaukee & Rockford as easy targets. Our mission is to encourage [those] who no longer attend church or who feel disenfranchised to return to the continuing Church. Our desire is to become evangelists and seek out any non-Churchmen to affiliate with our Church. It can be done. In less than 2 years the State of Michigan has grown from one parish to seven - including a Bishop.

How do we accomplish the same task in Wisconsin? We utilize personal contacts and publicity. We organize a committee to establish a long range modus operandi for each of these potential cities. Yes, then we trim our sails and reach for the wind in the Name of Christ and His Holy Catholic Church.

REPORT FROM CALIFORNIA

WE HAVE recently completed an extended trip, generally west of the Mississippi River. What was to be only a facet of our journey - to visit Anglican Catholic Churches & other loyal Episcopalians en route - became one of the most pleasant, memorable and inspiring portions of our trip. Together with visits to missions in San Antonio, the Christ of the Ozarks statue and Hillspeak in Arkansas,& attending a performance of the Passion Play in Spearfish,South Dakota,the trip became almost a religious pilgrimage! . . . The continuing Church is obviously a grassroots movement of the laity -few priests (and fewer bishops) are available to shepherd those who wish to remain members of Christ's One, Holy, Catholic & Apostolic Church. Despite a dearth of clergy, small groups of laymen are gather "in His Name" for corporate worship. Where a priest is unavailable for weekly celebration of Eucharist we found laymen doing an excellent job of leading Morning or Evening Prayer, Spiritual Communion, &c. At one home (in an area where no such congregation is available) we joined the family in Evensong.

Actual facilities for worship were of less importance than the opportunity to gather in His Name. Congregations are worshipping in dance studios, private dining rooms in restaurants, Seventh Day Adventist or Lutheran Churches, mortuary chapels, &c. Some congregations were fortunate in their acquisition of altar furnishings, communion vessels, vestments and other basic necessities. For others, necessity became the mother of invention, & dimestore oil & vinegar cruets, sugar & creamers, &c. became usable cruets, bread boxes & lavabos. A goblet bought for 25¢ at a garage sale proved to be sterling silver & combined with a calling card plate became chalice and paten! We were impressed by the faith & daring displayed by the various parishes. Though few in numbers, some had dared (walked in faith) to call a full-time priest, others were planning to acquire their own church buildings. At no time did we hear frantic appeals for financial support . . .

From one and all we received a most cordial welcome, and were most happy to be able to join a Christian community in praise & worship of Almighty God. Hospitality included supper at a rectory, a parish luncheon & rectory blessing, an all-parish Easter Day dinner, "breaking of bread" and fellowship following service, & finally, a request by the last congregation on our itinerary to discuss with them what we had seen & heard, what feelings & opinions we might have formed through our visits. This summary is a result of their request that we write these down & perhaps find some way to communicate this information to others.

Everywhere we went we found a great thirst for news of other congregations (how they were faring, how they handled various problems)as well as a willingness to share what they had learned, what worked for them, and a real interest in what is happening in other areas of the Church, particularly the West Coast. We feel there is a great need for some type of communication among the various congregations-whom, we suspect, sometimes feel they are voices "crying in the wilderness".

We also noted great concern over the lack of unity in ACC and the actions of some ACC Bishops - . . . There was some feeling of having jumped from the frying pan into the fire! We hope the threat of further division in ACC does not weaken the continuing Church. Having witnessed the real unity of spirit and endeavor at the St Louis Congress, we pray some common ground can be found to unify all loyal Episcopalians.

P.S. Upon our return to our home parish, we were happy to find continuing evidence of God's blessing of our mission. New families have joined our fellowship and worship, & numerous material items have been consecrated during our absence. The second Sunday after our return, to the great joy of the whole parish, the service included not only the consecration of a baptismal shell and a new fair linen, but also our first baptism! Anticipating the second annual celebration of our patronal festival . . . we pray God will send us a godly priest to build upon this foundation. LAST CHANCE - last chance, that is, to contribute to the care & upkeep of The Fellowship of Concerned Churchmen News Exchange for 1979. If you haven't sent in a contribution so far this year, now is the time to do it. There is no set subscription "rate" for the News Exchange, but a News Exchange reader in Louisiana long ago suggested that $13 seemed a reasonable figure. Her rationale was: one dollar for Christ and one for each of His Apostles. Whatever amount you send, it is tax deductible.

HITHER & YON

FROM St Luke's, Lancaster, Ohio: You are cordially invited to attend the installation of the Reverend Father Dominic Giles Hedelund, T.O.R., as Rector of St Luke's Anglican Church . . .

FROM The Anglican Fellowship of the North Country (Schuylerville, New York): On Saturday . . . we shall meet at St Stephen's Church, here in Schuylerville,to celebrate Holy Communion and to attend to some happy business over a potluck luncheon . . . After renewing our friendships we will get down to some very interesting business. We have the use of St Stephen's, which is a lovely little stone building furnished with an ancient pipe organ which will provide our music and where you will find our Prayer Book in the chestnut pews. . . . Father Nelson Chowenhill has left the Diocese of Albany to join the Anglican Catholic Church and to serve us informally as our Fellowhip's own pastor.

FROM All Saints', Janesville, Wisconsin: As you know, our parish is selling popcorn as a building fund project. The popcorn is home grown in Jefferson, Wisconsin. It is packaged in two-pound bags and sells for $1.25 per bag (giving us a 70 cents profit). We have sold 12 cases so far - it practically sells itself. Ask your friends, neighbors (even if they are not your friends), and fellow employees. Remember - what's more American than baseball and popcorn. That reminds me of an excellent popcorn recipe with which to stuff your Thanksgiving turkey. Merely mix two cups of our unpopped corn into your normal raw dressing; stuff your bird and cook until done, which John says is indicated when the wings are blown off.

FROM Christ Church, New Orleans: We have long been aware that this parish must have a priest if it is to grow . . . We must have a priest - it's that simple. All of which brings me to this paragraph of great and most important news. Our delegates, while at convention,met four viable candidates for the post of Rector of this parish! These four men have been passed upon & recommended by our Bishops as being thoroughly orthodox in the Anglican Catholic disciplines of worship, doctrine & tradition. In this connection,I have appointed a pulpit committee to bring them one at a time, to New Orleans, to meet with us, say Mass, and to let you get a good look at them.

FROM St Martin of Tours, Walnut Creek-Clayton-Concord, California: Make it a rule of life never to miss church on Sunday & not to come too often without a friend or loved one or neighbor.

THE ACC SYNOD

THE Anglican Catholic Church has both constitution and canons. After three days of intense and diligent work at the First Provincial Synod in Indianapolis, October 18,19 & 20, delegates from all dioceses which had ratified the provisional consitution during the past year, including a group of adherent parishes from the southeastern United States [and elsewhere] called the Patrimony, discussed, debated,amended and finally approved all articles of the provisional constitution and some of the proposed canons. Remaining canons were provisionally approved, subject to final adoption at the next Provincial Synod.

Of particular interest . . . may be the final resolution of the name of this part of Christ's Church. The name Anglican Catholic Church, adopted at the Dallas synod, was as many of you know, controversial. Many felt that the name 'Catholic' would discourage evangelical Christians from associating themselves with the Church. Some undoubtedly associated the word 'Catholic' with the Roman Catholic Church, and were concerned that the name implied that the movement would be dominated by the so-called high-church faction. Some objected that there was no territorial definition contained in the name. Others had been satisfied with the name 'Anglican Church in North America', which had been the temporary denomination given to the movement after the St Louis Congress, and which had been used for almost a year at the time of the Dallas synod.

Most of these fears and/or reservations about the name 'Anglican Catholic Church' seem to have been assuaged or diminished after having used the name for a year. Some of the strongest spokesmen in favor of retaining this name (including Mr Perry Laukhuff, prominently associated with the St Louis Congress) admitted that although they had objected to the name originally, they now find it satisfactory. A delegate from Virginia told the group that for pastoral reasons in his heavily evangelical area that the name 'Continuing Episcopal Church' is being used. It was decided to retain the name Anglican Catholic Church as the official and legal name, & name of primary use, but to allow the use of 'Anglican Church in North America' & 'Continuing Episcopal Church' in areas where it is pastorally advisable. A less than ideal solution, perhaps, but probably very Anglican.

It is also illustrative of the Synod's attitude of affirming our genuine community as the Body of Christ. Among the lay delegates, alternates and visitors; among the clergy & bishops there was a pervasive feeling of Christian charity and understanding, which prevailed in spite of sometimes very lively debate and vigorous disagreements. There was a palpable attitude of Christian love and concern which seemed to suffuse the work done at the Synod, and a clear determination to keep always in focus that we were, indeed, about our Father's business.

Our bishops, Doren from the Mid-Atlantic and Visitor to the Southwest, Lewis from the Midwest, Burns from Resurrection and Vicar of the Patrimony, & Mote from Holy Trinity demonstrated a genuine collegiality (which is not the same thing as uniformity) which gave strength and unity of purpose to the clergy and laity at the Synod, as it surely will to the whole Church. These are strong, committed & prayerful men who are mindful of the differences in expression of worship, and who are determined to lead the Church as pastors.

In addition to approving & adopting the constitution & canons of the denomination [sic], the Synod examined prospective candidates for bishop,in order that dioceses,as they are formed,might have an approved "pool" from which to draw in their selection of bishops. This was done in a closed session of the Synod in order to maintain confidentiality of the responses of the priests who were interviewed. The responses were such, however, that at the close of the examination a resolution was adopted to allow the confidentail tapes of the interviews to be distributed to dioceses. Again, these priests did not all think alike regarding expressions of worship, but it was clear that they are all men of strong belief in the principal doctrines of the Christian faith and in Anglican tradition. From among this list, one was later selected as candidate for Suffragan Bishop by the Patrimony.

Another matter which was dealt with by the Synod was that of the relationship of the Canadian parishes, who had been included in the Diocese of the Midwest, & had elected a Suffragan Bishop, Fr Carmino deCatanzaro, who has not yet been consecrated. Fr deCatanzaro addressed the Synod after a resolution had been read & adopted allowing the Canadian diocese complete autonomy. In his address he assured the Church of the intention of the Canadians to remain fully in communion with the Anglican Catholic Church, and that the Canadians would work closely with and alongside the American Church for the same goals.

One of the things which has concerned us [all] almost more than anything else is the availability of sound Anglican Catholic clergy. It is natural and should be expected that any "new" movement will attract a certain number of people who may have "hidden agendas",or who just couldn't get along where they were, whether they were former Episcopalian clergy or ministers of some other denomination, & for whatever reason. Clergy problems are not, of course, confined to [us]. It was an affliction of the early Christians, and the early history of the Episcopal Church in this country is full of such difficulties. It was extremely encouraging to us to see and talk to the many clergymen of this Church who came to Indianapolis who are men of sound faith and commitment. We were able to talk with several who are willing to take precious time from their own parishes to come to St Louis. The vestry is now working out details of securing one or more of these priests to come to Holy Apostles on a regular basis. We have tentative commitment from one to come of the fourth Sunday every month.

In light of some of the controversy surrounding the provisional adoption of a constitution in Dallas in 1978, it probably is important to note that very little of substance was changed in the final version adopted at Indianapolis a year later. Some editorial corrections were noted, & a canon was added having to do with Deaconesses and Lay Ministry. And it is probably important to observe that, despite the hundreds of hours (and thousands of dollars) spent by the drafting committee, & also by the delegates, that it is not a perfect document. But it is very good. It strongly affirms our Christian faith and doctrine, our commitment to the traditional family, & to traditional Christian morality. It provides us with a strong and orderly base upon which to build. We have overcome many difficulties during the past two years; the Lord being our guide, we shall prevail. [The above report was written for "The Courier", the parish newsletter of the Church of the Holy Apostles in St Louis, Missouri, by Helen Hitchcock, a delegate to the Provincial Synod.]

THE DENVER G C

THE 66th General Convention of the Episcopal Church was held in Denver from Sept 8-20, 1979. This is a rundown of the actions taken there.

The two major concerns had to do with the Book of Common Prayer and human sexuality. First, the Church has a new official prayer book. However, both House of the Convention acted very pastorally by saying that "The Book of Common Prayer of 1928 is a rich part of the liturgical heritage of this Church, & that liturgical texts from the 1928 Prayer Book may be used in worship, under the authority of the bishop as chief pastor and liturgical officer -". The accompanying guidelines will help the various congregations of the Church to make a gradual transition to the new book.

The stance of the Church on the matter of the ordination of practicing homosexual persons can be summed up by this phrase of the resolutions that passed both Houses. "We reaffirm the traditional teaching of the Church on marriage, marital fidelity and sexual chastity as the standard of Christian sexual morality. Candidates for ordination are expected to conform to this standard. Therefore, we believe it is not appropriate for this Church to ordain a practicing homosexual, or any person who is engaged in heterosexual relations outside of marriage."

In the Church Pension Fund:The Convention urged a study of retirement options for the clergy,& certain increases in pensions. A pension plan for lay employees will begin in 1980; all units of the Church were urged to participate in it.

Ecumenical Relations:"The visible unity we seek is one eucharistic fellowship." The Convention recommended a conference with Roman Catholic leaders,recognized COCU as the place for dialogue with nine other Church groups and called for more dialogue with Lutherans. It called for the beginning of conversations between Episcopalians & Jews and the Islamic community in order to bring about better understanding.

Evangelism: The Convention reaffirmed the need for evangelism, renewal and mission at all levels. Urged Church people to both try and understand the forces causing urban blight, and how to deal with them.

Liturgics: Authorized Lesser Feasts and Fasts and a list of 12 tasks for the Standing Liturgical Commission.

Ministry Development: Hispanic ministry is to be expanded; approved in principle regular support for theological education.

National-International: Commended Church efforts in support of refugees, urged continuing work. Deplored upsurge of Ku Klux Klan and Nazism in the U.S. Urged continuing effort to bring peace to northern Ireland. Opposed again capital punishment. Asked all Church people to practice responsible energy, for consumption and family planning and recommended responsibility in planning Church meetings & functions. Endorsed the Equal Rights Amendment. Opposed the peacetime draft for military purposes, & urged an ongoing draft counseling program. Established a 12-member Joint Commission on Peace and noted with thanks the 1979 Arab-Israeli peace treaty. Supported the establishment of a free and independent Palestinian state.

New Dioceses: Two approved, in California and Louisiana.

Social and Personal Concern: Encouraged both the Engaged Encounter and Marriage Encounter movements. Directed continuing study and development of Church views on human sexuality. Asked the U.S. to develop more flexible systems in education of the deaf. Reaffirmed opposition to any laws denying or abridging individual rights to reach informed decisions in the matter of abortions. Urged development of and support for programs to advance the well-being of older people. Ordered the Executive Council to design & implement a program of racial justice in the Church. Asked each diocese to form a committee on alcoholism.

Stewardship: Established a commission to study and report on stewardship to the 1982 Convention.

HOT SPRINGS MEETING

THE Joint Synod of the continuing Anglican Dioceses of Christ the King and of the Southeastern United States was conducted October 16-18, 1979, at the Arlington Hotel in Hot Springs, Arkansas. . . . The Liturgical highlight of the meeting was a Solemn Pontifical Mass of St Luke the Evangelist on 18 October. . . . It was somewhat ironic that the principal Eucharist of the Joint Synod occurred exactly one year after the divided constitutional convention of Dallas.

The first evening of the Joint Synod was spent in listening to a lecture by Dr Thomas Barnes of the University of California on the History of Canon Law & Church Order. Following the seminar, three workshops were conducted. . . The topics of these were: "The Constitutional Dilemma and Canon Law"; "Theological Education and Ordination Standards"; "Church Insurance & the Pension Dilemma".

Wednesday morning 17 October featured an open forum discussion on the problems of the continuing Anglican movement. Each person who had registered as a delegate, alternate or visitor was given an opportunity to sign up to speak if he or she so wished. Actual legislative deliberation began on Wednesday afternoon & continued until mid-day on Thursday. The Synod banquet on Wednesday evening was addressed by Bishop Morse.

The jointly-prepared Canons were overwhelmingly approved by the clerical and lay delegates of each diocese. A special method of dealing with the proposed Canons on the floor of the meeting was the source of some misunderstanding on the part of certain visitors. It was felt by the two Standing Committees that it was not desirable to have lengthy debate on each proposed Canon, therefore a special set of rules was adopted which provided for a vote on each proposed Canon without debate. It was intended that if any of the proposed Canons were voted down the deliberation would return to that Canon after all Canons had been presented & open it for full debate. Although this approach may have seemed to stifle spontaneous expression, the two Standing Committees were of the opinion that it was undesirable to get bogged down in fruitless debate at the beginning and thus unduly enlongate the meeting.

Following the Synod, the Standing Committees of the two dioceses met and at that time Bishop Watterson offered several conditions and proposed changes. He wanted a name change; he requested that the continental United States be divided between the two dioceses along east-west lines; that mutual criticism end; that bishops should not communicate with other dioceses without the blessing of the local diocesan; and that the rector of every parish be considered a Bishop's Vicar. When these requested conditions and changes were submitted to the Standing Committee of Christ the King, our diocese met separately and decided that it simply could not accept them. The Standing Committee of Christ the King then returned to its meeting with the Standing Committee of the Southeast and it was mutually decided to return home and await further deliberations of each group.

On Friday and Saturday, 26-27 October, the clergy and Standing Committee of the Diocese of the Southeast met in Atlanta, Georgia, with Bishop Watterson. It was concluded there upon reconsideration that the Canons adopted at Hot Springs should be ratified & promulgated.

Our Bishop made it abundantly clear throughout the Hot Springs Synod in both public and private conversations that he did not wish to close the doors of negotiation with the ratifiers of the Dallas Constitution. His one condition was that the activities of the "Patrimony" be discontinued. He continually expressed his great personal sorrow over our unfortunate constitutional differences with those who prefer the Dallas Document.

ONE PRIEST'S REACTION

I THANK our Heavenly Father that Hot Springs and Indianapolis are in the past (we are still one Anglican Catholic Church), and that we . . . are back worshipping at the "home altar" again. I am beginning to think that St Luke's Anglican Church is the only sensible church within our Anglican Church, and that the best people are within our congregation. Both the Hot Springs & Indianapolis Synods were disappointing to me, but since I am both a perfectionist (where Christ's Holy Church is concerned) & an idealist, my evaluation of them should probably be taken with a grain of salt.

COLORADO PROPERTY RETURNED TO DIOCESE

THE property of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Central City [Colorado], has always been held in trust by the Diocese of Colorado, and it must be returned to the diocese.

That was the ruling of District Judge Winston Wolvington of Gilpin County on Oct. 12. The suit, in which the diocese successfully sought to recover the historic mission property, seized by dissident members of the congregation in 1977, was tried in Central City, Oct. 10-12. Robert Tabor Booms, vice chancellor, represented the diocese.

"We have a favorable decision, and we're delighted with the result," says Booms. He notes that the contest was "relatively amicable".

History of the suit goes back more than two years.

In June, 1977, members of the church, one of the oldest in Colorado, decided to incorporate. In September of that year, the Rev William Buck, then vicar, left the Episcopal Church. Factions in the 20-member congregation polarized; some wished to "secede; others remained loyal. The secessionists, possessing the key, locked loyalists out of the building. In December, a deed was recorded, purporting to transfer the church property to the new corporation, then controlled by the secessionists. Thereafter, the group amended the articles of incoporation to take St Paul's out of the Episcopal Church.

The diocese filed suit to regain possession and title.

As time went on, a building-sharing arrangement was worked out between the two parties. The Rev Billy Grissom of Denver is now the Episcopal vicar and has been holding services for the loyalists on Sunday evenings. The secessionist group has met Sunday mornings.

[From the Episcopal Church's Diocesan Press Service (#79338). Fr Buck is now Rector of St Mary's Anglican Church, Plano, Texas. Volume III Number 1 — And if it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve; but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord. -- Joshua 24:15 — January AD 1980

MORE from the Courts - not particularly amusing reading, but you need to know what is happening, and how what has happened is being reported. The following is taken verbatim from the Episcopal Church's Diocesan Press Service.

NEW YORK - Members of two congregations who voted to secede from their dioceses in the Episcopal Church have been ordered by courts in late November to return the property to their respective dioceses.

In a decision monitored closely by other disaffected parishes, Roanoke Circuit Court Judge L.L. Koontz Jr,ordered the 132-year-old Ascension Church on property in rural Amherst, Va., returned to the Diocese of Southwestern Virginia.

Judge John Brooks Jr, Denver District Court, ruled 29 November that the disputed property of St Mary's Church in Denver belongs to those members of the parish who voted not to secede from the Diocese of Colorado in 1976.

Ascension's parishioners had voted 59-44 last May to split from the diocese in a dispute over the Church's General Convention decision in 1976 to permit the ordination of women to the priesthood, and other issues.

In the Denver decision, Judge Brooks ruled that the Episcopal Church is a hierarchical church and that St Mary's Church is a subordinate part of that hierarchy.

His decision came three years and one day after the parish - valued at $450,000 in 1974 - became the first in the U. S. to secede from the Episcopal Church following the 1976 Convention. Its then-rector, the Rev James O. Mote, was later consecrated bishop in the newly-formed Anglican Catholic Church where he is now Bishop of the Diocese of the Holy Trinity.

In adopting the "polity theory" put forth by the diocese's attorneys, Judge Brooks said that the Episcopal Church in the Diocese of Colorado,through its appropriate judicatory body, the Diocesan Executive Council, had decided that members of the current loyal vestry were the rightful successors to the pre-schism vestry of the original parish, and that the court accepted as "final and binding" the Council's resolution to the effect on 14 December 1976.

"This court may do so without deciding any ecclesiastical questions," the judge said.

The Council's resolution stated that the diocese "does not approve or recognize the action taken by St Mary's Church to withdraw from the Diocese of Colorado, supports those members of St Mary's Church who voted against such withdrawal, and affirms its ecclesiastical ties and its rights with respect to the nonprofit corporation known as St Mary's Church."

Judge Brooks noted that religious corporations are not the same as commercial corporations. "The courts may delve into the inner workings of ordinary corporations with impunity," he said. "Not so with religious corporations. Civil courts may not decide, for example, ecclesiastical considerations."

Plaintiffs in the case were Bishop William C. Frey and the Diocese of Colorado, plus the vestry of the loyal St Mary's parish. Defendants were Bishop James O. Mote and the vestry of the secessionist body.

The defendants are expected to appeal the decision.

In the Amherst case, Strother Smith, the attorney for the Anglican majority, vowed to appeal the decision all the way to the Supreme Court if necessary. He acknowledged that the court's ruling would discourage future splits from the Episcopal Church. "Some who are not as fully convinced as others, will say, 'If we can't take our property with us, we'll just grin and bear it and stay.'"

The Diocese of Southwestern Virginia won a similar court victory earlier in 1979 over dissidents in Clifton Forge who tried to take the parish property out of the Episcopal Church.

LAY READER'S SERMONS

FROM the Rector of the Anglican Church in Birmingham: . . . I've heard much concern with the need for Lay Reader's Sermons to be produced and distributed on a regular and ongoing basis. We, in Alabama, are in the process of organizing a deanery and have as our first goal doing something about that! I would appreciate it if you would insert something to this effect in your News Exchange. I would ask all interested senior wardens, lay readers and priests throughout the movement to contact me. We need both a market and contributors for what we intend as a self supporting work, involving both fees and compensations.

[Those who are interested in the matter should write: The Rev'd William J. Marvin, 3824 Asbury Place, Birmingham, AL 35243. It should also be remembered that the Rev'd Alan Rosenau, POB 2015, Hot Springs, AR 71901, through his Pilgrimage Publications, already offers lay reader's sermons to those interested. It is possible, too, that at a later date the Fellowship of Concerned Churchmen may offer lay reader's sermons.]

HITHER & YON

FROM the Anglican Church of the Incarnation, Maitland, Florida: The Holy Catholic Church recognizes but two postures as proper for prayer - kneeling or standing. The ancient custom was to stand except for very special penitential prayers. This is still acceptable. The BCP directs that people shall kneel for the General Confession, and to receive the Blessing, and otherwise is silent as to their posture. If it is possible to kneel comfortably the Anglican custom favors this for most of the prayers. If the nature of the floor or ground makes kneeling difficult, standing is also acceptable (with bowed head) for these. Sitting is not an acceptable posture for prayer in the Worship of the Church, & is permissible only when the physical condition of the person requires.

FROM the Church of St Dunstan, Minneapolis: . . . it was our parishioners' unanimous choice to call the Rev'd Thomas McDonald of Anaheim, California, to serve as St Dunstan's Rector. All of us feel especially thankful and many times blessed because Fr McDonald has accepted our call & will be joining us as our full time rector . . . from the middle of January on.

FROM Good Shepherd, Abingdon, Virginia: The suggestion has been made that the Patronal Feast of St Andrew . . . may have a strong Scottish accent, in which case the Rector will wear a kilt - a sight to behold!

FROM St Aidan's, West Des Moines, Iowa: The newly adopted Canon Law of the Anglican Catholic Church requires that each priest celebrate or attend the Holy Eucharist on each day for which a Collect, Epistle and Gospel appear in the Prayer Book. This is a good rule. One wishes we could have a daily celebration at St Aidan's, if only the exigencies of a secular job and a borrowed chapel would permit it.

To comply with the Canons, we are scheduling celebrations for St Andrew's Day, the December Ember Days, St Thomas' Day, St Stephen's Day, St John's Day and Holy Innocents' Day. We would like to have these celebrations take place in the homes of members of the Parish. A sign-up sheet is enclosed. Please write in your preferred date for a "house Mass" at your home and drop the sheet in the basket at the next Sunday Eucharist.

FROM Holy Apostles',St Louis:On Sunday, 25 November, the episcopal visitor to our Diocese of the Southwest, the Right Rev'd C. D. D. Doren, Bishop of the Mid-Atlantic States, presided at a service of Confirmation and [celebrated] Holy Communion. At that time Kent and Michael Vesser both received the apostolic rite of Confirmation, thereby achieving the status of communicants in the Anglican Catholic Church. As the first 2 members of this parish since its foundation to receive confirmation, they are our pioneers. We devoutly hope that Kent and Michael will be followed by many more who will re-affirm and strengthen their faith in confirmation, a rite with apostolic character and with historic Anglican emphasis and meaning.

FROM the newsletter of the Diocese of the Mid-Atlantic States: The Thanksgiving service at the Church of the Ascension, Centerville, Va., was a red letter day. Or more specifically, a red cassock day. For the first time, the choirs, senior and junior, were wearing their new vestments.

ALSO from the Mid-Atlantic newsletter: A health insurance plan, for the clergy and other diocesan employees, was instituted on 1 October. Our particular thanks to the DMAS Pension and Insurance Committee for reviewing so many candidates before selecting the plan chosen. Incidentally, the Diocese of the Midwest has joined the DMAS in this plan. Two pension plans are also available for the clergy of the Church; one the traditional, fixed-return kind and the other, a rather unconventional kind intended to beat inflation. Parishes interested in providing a pension plan for their priest should contact the diocesan treasurer for details.

FROM "The Boston Stump": How best to deal with disturbing news of political squabbling amongst the leadership of the Church: PRAY ALL THE MORE.

YET again from the Mid-Atlantic newsletter: It is with great joy that the Diocese of the Mid-Atlantic States announces the Ordination to the Diaconate of Emile Jean Michel LaRoque . . . in the Church of St Charles the Martyr, Annapolis, Maryland.

FROM St Charles the Martyr, Mount Dora, Florida: An open letter to members, friends and associates . . . a favorable vote was cast on Monday evening [12 November] -153 to 7- to withdraw from the Southeastern Diocese of the Anglican Catholic Church and to enter the Antiochian Orthodox Christian Archdiocese as an Anglican/Western Rite parish.

CHANGES OF ADDRESS AND OTHER MATTERS

UNDER the postage rate used by the News Exchange (the cheapest for which we can qualify),we get no forwarding or notification services. The onus is on you, the addressee, to keep us advised of a current address. We have no way of knowing if you are even getting the newsletter; all we know is that it leaves Eureka Springs in a mail bag. Since we do not want to print and address a quantity of newsletters that go nowhere but the trash bin of some post office, we are going to start mailing on the premise that if you want to receive the News Exchange you will let us know - either by an encouraging word, an encouraging check, or both, some time during the year. At the end of the year we will go through our records and drop those addressees from whom we have heard nothing -check, chit, chuckle or chewing out- during the year.

The purpose of this hard-hearted procedure is not just to reduce the size of the mailing list for we would be delighted if every Anglican Catholic were to request receiving it, but simply to assure ourselves that there is some vestige of interest in the Fellowship of Concerned Churchmen and its activities on the part of the addressee.

Having said that, let us now encourage you to send us parish mailing lists and other sources of names and addresses of potentially interested folk. We will send them a sample copy which will indicate to them that if they are interested in continuing to receive the News Exchange they must tell us so.

Subscription "rate"? Still voluntary; still a tax-deductible contribution. Our current rate-setter is from Texas: "Enclosed is my check for $15 to help the Fellowship. I am so grateful for your support, witness, & information, which I get from few sources in these sad times for our beloved Church. The idea of $1 for our Lord and $1 for each of the Apostles is lovely! The extra $2 can be for the Fellowship, God bless it!"

Thank you, Mrs Tex! Anybody care to join her?

OFFERED

An Anglican Catholic Calendar was in preparation in the Diocese of the Holy Trinity in late November. DHT hoped to have it available in early January. If you are interested in such a Calendar, query the diocese right away and let the editor know how many you will want. The price was not fixed at the time of this writing because the number to be printed had not been set. Get in touch now with Mrs Lois Perry at St Mary's Church, 2290 S Clayton, Denver, CO 80210.

FROM "THE PILGRIM"

Subtitled: "an occasional letter in and for the orthodox Christian mission" and written by the Rev'd Alan Rosenau, Rector of St Chrysostom's, Hot Springs, Arkansas, and Vicar of Mountain Home, Arkansas, and Greenville, Mississippi:

I am a priest, therefore I am. For this poor servant of God it remains a very radical matter. I cannot "boast" of the calling. If it were possible to recount all of its terrors and triumphs, you would know that boasting is not in order. May all our boasting be only in the Lord Jesus! Still, I assert the priesthood against its detractors, because it remains important in the purposes of a loving God that there should be, some, priests. (There are many more collars than priests.)

The conditions of a priest's sinfulness say something about his vocation, although it is among the most definite (& narrow) of Christian callings. I am not a man who can develop close relationships with more than a fairly small number of persons. Sometimes by flat denials of "opportunity", my pastorate has reflected this. Others seem capable of a much wider scope in ministry. Even priests must seek under God to know themselves. It is objective that a priest will administer God's Holy Sacraments, teach and preach the Word of God (which entails studying to know the same), and that he will pray for his people. This last is easily said, but it is worth underscoring since it is not a platitude but a practical necessity. For how many is a priest responsible? He cannot get by without regular prayer for each and every one of them. The relative impossibility of faithfulness in this office points us beyond these thoughts to even more fruitful considerations of the Holy Spirit's work in priesthood. Apart from Him, the vocation is not only impossible, but dangerous.

I cannot find in Scripture or Tradition a model for priests of the Fuller Brush man: one constantly calling upon his people (& others) just to be there, or more often to sell something, or joke folks out of bequests. The place for the communion to be together in the first place is church. A priest will be available to his people, & when there are needs to be met by the Church's gifts, he will bring them. It is extraordinary, though, that folks both in and out of the Church, with otherwise antiactivist sentiments and very strong ideas about priestly piety, want a priest to be scurrying always hither and yon, staying "in the public eye". Why? On what basis? If he has not immersed himself in God's Word, if he has not interceded & pleaded for each of his flock, if he has not allowed the Holy Spirit to pray and grow in him, he had best not open his cell door. This priest is grateful indeed that his dear people (even so widely scattered in the present dispensation) understand this.

As Paul said, so might we say in one voice who are leaders in a movement toward missionary orthodoxy: I am as I am. This is no buffer upon spiritual growth: not at all. It is a damper upon self-interested striving that does not serve our Lord. I relish rest and quietness, and take a bath most days. I cannot, as yet anyway, pray truly for 800 or even 300. Neither can any of us do all the good we hope to do. Which brings us again to our focal point. Priesthood is a gift; Christian Faith itself is a gift of God. We must will the development and exercise of gifts, but the developer in fact is the Holy Spirit of God. Let it be a comfort that we do not know how to love, to live, to be the Church. A priest, it stands to reason, does not even know, really, how to be a priest, notwithstanding the clear instructions that are set out. So he must daily offer his life; he must abandon himself in trust to the living God. In return he receives the gift - as it is given forth - of his vocation. He can never create a community. He is not going to save souls, heal bodies, deliver sinners, establish the Gospel. But among the communion of which he is priest and part and leader, God does all of these things.

Perhaps the central labor of the priest, as for all Christians, is to believe in Him whom God has sent: Jesus Christ. If we should begin to sound out and make practical the power of that verb BELIEVE (viz. trust), we should know with certainty the breaking of oppression, the freedom and equity for which we have longed. (See Hymn 545.)

This is why the future of the Church is bright with expectation! We are a movement toward and into the Kingdom of God. We know we cannot make it without ceaseless succor and inspiration of God Himself. So we have stopped striving. We have begun to drop our defenses, pretenses, histrionics, hyperbolics and "images". We may say now: I am who I am. By the grace and wonder of the one God, I am a priest. Doing "all that I do", I still wake up each morning aware that I have been at most a useful servant, & have "done" nothing more than to accept the love of God to be alive, be present unto Him, & give a portion (may it increase forever) of what I have been given: of what we have been given in the Church and in Christ Jesus.

["The Pilgrim" is sent out quarterly. To get on the mailing list send your request, along with a little folding money, to: Pilgrimage Publications, POB 2015, Hot Springs, AR 71901; or call 501-624-6236 for further information. Says Fr Rosenau, "God willing, we are going to say and sing what helps and heals. We reach out to embrace and be embraced by those whose interests are the same - interests to which God shall, and does, add His invincible power."]

AN OPEN LETTER

NOT written as an open letter but one to a friend, an "on-the-fence" Episcopalian, by an Anglican Catholic priest in New York:

Dear ----

You have been in my thoughts several times since we spoke on the telephone a few days ago.

Apparently, like many Episcopalians, you are in a quandary as to whether you should "stay or spring". This is a natural feeling in all of us when faced with change. Can you imagine the second thoughts of our ancestors as they tossed and turned in their beds the night before they left their native lands, their homes and relatives to embark on a voyage to the New World; a new world of opportunities, but, a strange world of new customs, language and culture? But, deep down, they felt that they were doing the right thing for themselves and their descendants.

We are living in an age that is feeling the "shock waves" of the protestant revolution in Europe and the English reformation. Devout men who were intent on correcting abuses in the Catholic Church were swept away by others who were determined to "throw out the baby with the dirty water". By picking and choosing isolated scriptural texts (known as heresy) they introduced doctrines and practices that did not resemble, in any way, the Faith delivered to the Apostles, passed down to their immediate successors and which exists today in communions like the Anglican Catholic Church.

In making any decision as to where you & your children belong, you must ask yourself the question, "Does the entire Church (not just the parish) profoundly and unequivocally accept the entire Bible as the inspired Word of God; does it accept the teachings of the early Church Fathers, of the Creeds and of the seven Ecumenical Councils.

Do you have any guarantee that your next rector will not be anti-1928 Prayer Book, homosexual, a non-believer in the Bible, Creeds and Councils, or a "priestess"?

The last General Convention of PECUSA has sealed the doom of the Prayer Book & the Faith it teaches insofar as that communion is concerned. As Prayer Books wear out & no new ones have been printed, where will parishes "loyal to the Prayer Book" get new ones? They will, obviously, be forced to subscribe to the new book.

Unlike the aforementioned ancestors, you are not being called upon to leave home & hearth for a new world; indeed you are being asked to stand firm with the old that bears witness to the true Faith that has resisted error and heresy since the Apostles went forth to teach the Gospel of the Resurrected Christ.

It is a theological axiom that every human being is given a conscience by God. It is a sin to go against one's conscience. The disturbance that you feel in your soul is your conscience which is pulling you in the direction of the unchanged, unadulterated Faith and the desire to hang on to the familiar surroundings of a formal church building with its beautiful stained glass windows and all the other trappings that go to make up an attractive edifice. But, it is not the Church. The Church is the Mystical Body of Christ which is made up of all true believers. It has bled many times over the centuries as the result of heresies, schisms and sin, but, thanks to loyal men and women who listened to the Holy Ghost, it has been preserved, intact, to the present day. As our Lord said, "Let him who has ears, listen."

This evening as I celebrate Mass, I will remember you; that God will give you the Grace to arrive at a decision that will be for the good of your immortal spirit and for those you may influence.

Sincerely in our Blessed Lord,
Stephen+

WHETHER under the name of the Federation of Independent Priests (FIP) or Traditionalist Episcopal Priests (TEP) is unclear to News Exchange at the moment, but in any event in Atlanta on 19-20 November, a group representing some 600 priests "who are upset at the changes brought about . . ." met and issued the following statement for publication:

We (a group of) Priests of the Episcopal Church, loyal to the ancient traditions of the Apostolic and Catholic Faith, as enshrined in the 1928 Book of Common Prayer, have met here in Atlanta, firmly convinced of the rightness of our cause.

We hereby proclaim encouragement and support to all the faithful in the Episcopal Church, both clergy and lay, who are committed to the propagation of the historic doctrine and worship of the Episcopal Church.

We stand firm in our opposition to those in high authority who would misuse authority to suppress those who in good and clear conscience wish to continue the devout traditions of our Anglican heritage.

We take this stand in light of the recent authorization made by the General Convention at Denver to continue the use of the texts of the 1928 Book. We are agreed that we will continue to proclaim fearlessly our convictions in our several parishes, and we call upon those of similar convictions to join us.

SPRING
AD1980

HEREWITH the Spring 1980 FCC directory of loyalist parishes which have requested listing in the NEWS EXCHANGE. The list is a matter of initial information only. For complete and up-to-date information, call or write the parish in which you are interested. Some additional information is available from the NEWS EXCHANGE. Call 501-253-9701 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. or -9800 after 6 p.m. and on weekends. Diocesan identification is indicated as follows: Canadian Jurisdiction (CJ); Christ the King (CK); Holy Trinity (HT); Mid-Atlantic States (MA); Midwest (MW); Resurrection (R); Southeastern United States (SE); Southwest (SW); and the Patrimony of the Anglican Catholic Church (P). The absence of diocesan identification indicates that the parish did not furnish the information, declined to list diocesan affiliation, is a "free" church, or is in a diocese other than those listed above. The listing that follows is based upon information furnished NEWS EXCHANGE by representatives of the dioceses and/or parishes concerned; no claim of accuracy, completeness or currentness is made or is implied. THIS NEWS EXCHANGE is unusual; it consists of only two articles. They are of interest and importance both to Anglicans and Episcopalians, and should be read carefully and thoughtfully.

JURISDICTION

TO: All Bishops, Standing Committees, Clergy and Laity of the Continuing Church
SUBJECT: Jurisdiction

I presume to write this letter because my sources (who do not wish to be named or involved) on the subject of jurisdiction are excellent and are from the Old Catholic and Orthodox Churches.

I am told by the Orthodox that the Episcopal Church has never understood nor properly taught jurisdiction. Because of that weakness in the Church from which most of us have come, it is understandable that few of us understand the subject. However, it is important to us to understand what we potentially have and what we may lose if we are not careful.

There are several important elements that must be present in a consecration to make it of unquestioned validity:

1) There is the vertical element. This means that the Consecrator(s) must be unquestionably valid Bishops in the apostolic line back to the Apostles. This element was present in Denver through Bishops Chambers and Pagtakhan. However, this element alone does not make a Bishop of unquestioned validity because even the Vagantes Bishops have this element present in their consecrations.

2) The consecration must take place in the presence of the Clergy and Laity that will be subject to the consecratee. This element was present in Denver. These two elements alone do not make a Bishop of unquestioned validity, because again, the Vagantes Bishops may have this element present in their consecrations.

NOTE: Out of the first element has come the concept of having three consecrators to insure proper Apostolic Succession. However, although this is nice to have it is only necessary to have ONE PROPER consecrator WITH JURISDICTION. Jurisdiction must be present beyond the Diocese, representing an entire branch of the Church.

3) The most important element is a horizontal element called JURISDICTION. In Denver, Bishop Pagtakhan brought this element to the consecration, because not only is he a Diocesan Bishop, but he was here representing the Philippine Independent Catholic Church, & this was subsequently further reasserted by the House of Bishops of the PICC. Bishop Chambers could not impart jurisdiction because not only was he retired, but also as later publicly voiced, he did not have the approval of the House of Bishops of the Episcopal Church. Bishop Pae, though possibly having jurisdiction, repudiated his consent. This jurisdiction was given ONLY through Bishop Pagtakhan. Without recognized jurisdiction there is no Catholic Church of unquestioned validity.

4) The final element necessary for a proper consecration in Denver was the consents from all the Dioceses of the Continuing Church, and that was present.

In recap, the essential elements for consecration of unquestioned validity in the Catholic Church are: 1) Apostolic Succession; 2) An open consecration; 3) Jurisdiction, i.e.: the majority of the Bishops consenting without repudiation; 4) Diocesan consents, which can be linked to consents by the Bishops.

There are some questionable or possibly invalid Old Catholic bodies that are such because they broke from their consecrator from which their jurisdiction was derived.

Doing that they changed their status from an unquestionably valid jurisdiction to a vagante status.

We must demand that our orders have unquestionable validity for potential recognition by the Old Catholics, Eastern Orthodox, Roman Catholics, and the Church of England (or better).* The orders of the PICC come from the Anglican Church, The Polish National Catholic Church, and the Archbishop of Utrecht himself. They are of unquestionable validity and recognized by the East & the West. As Secretary Bishop of Missions, Bishop Pagtakhan represents an autocephalous Church of 36 dioceses! Bishop Pagtakhan is commissioned, as a missionary, to extend the jurisdiction of his Church.

I doubt if many of us were aware of much of this at the time of the Denver Consecrations. We exist today WITH JURISDICTION through Bishop Pagtakhan, as an extension of his missionary effort, until we can be recognized as a properly constituted branch of the Church. Therefore, our proper approach is to get a constitution & set of canons which Bishop Pagtakhan can present to the General Assembly of the Philippine Church. This should be done when they meet in May 1980. It would be a political mistake to miss this timing. The assembly, which meets every three years, can approve our constitution & canons and accept us as a "Sister Church", thus fully establishing our jurisdiction within ourselves as an autocephalous Church. In that status Utrecht can accept us into the Old Catholic Communion, or preferably, in full intercommunion. This is what Bishop Pagtakhan offers in contrast to what PNCC potentitally offers, ie: absorption.

We are in danger of losing what we have. The original four Bishops are not in collegiality. Bishop Burns was consecrated without the consent of Bishops Watterson and Morse (no majority, no jurisdiction) and in spite of the request of Bishop Pagtakhan to wait for collegiality before consecration. No bishop had the right to consent without consulting Bishop Pagtakhan to see whether he would agree or not to sharing with another the Apostolic consecration given to him. Subsequently, Bishop Lewis was consecrated under similar conditions.

Bishop Pagtakhan has the power to restore unquestioned validity to all our Bishops. If collegiality could be achieved, Bishop Pagtakhan could be asked to restore unquestioned validity, & if he is willing to recognize them, Bishops Burns & Lewis could be given unquestioned validity. If all this were done, our Catholic Communion status could be restored. Time is short.

Yours in Christ,
William S. Musgrove, Senior Warden, St Therese of the Child Jesus

* The Lambeth Conferences of 1920 & 1930 described adequately the requirements for consecration or ordination of unquestioned validity. in 1930 RECOGNITION was received from the Old Catholics in the Bonn Agreement granting full intercommunion between Anglicans and the Old Catholics. The Eastern Orthodox, Constantinople 1922, Jerusalem and Cypress in 1923 proclaimed Anglican ordinations as valid as Roman Catholic and Armenian. In 1930 the Patriarchate of Alexandria proclaimed that Anglican Priests joining that Patriarchate were not to be re-ordianed. In 1936 the Church of Romania recognized Anglican ordinations without qualification, as did Alexandria.

The International Anglican-Roman Catholic Commission (IARC) has recommended that Anglican Orders be recognized by the Roman Church since they now have better information on the subject than was available in the time of Leo XIII in 1895.

ANOTHER POINT OF VIEW

KEEN interest has developed lately, among continuing Anglicans, in the concept of 'jurisdiction'. This is not surprising. Enough time has now passed since the trauma of our separation from former brethren, and since the Denver consecrations, for us to begin to reflect & to ask important questions concerning the legitimacy of our position. This development is probably healthy.

The concept of 'jurisdiction', for Anglicans, is closely connected in its application with those of 'faith' & 'succession', as the trifold tests of whether a particular religious body is a part of the true Church of Christ. Where the faith of the apostles is maintained and taught, where the ministry is that which has always been recognized as deriving its authority from the apostles & where the body is no mere intruder into the territory occupied by an older society which itself maintains the apostolic faith and ministry, then the body must be acknowledged as a rightful part of Christ's Church. /1

Jurisdiction, then, involves the authority of Christians otherwise true to Catholic faith and practice, with ministers validly ordained in apostolic succession, to function as the Church in a given territory. With regard to the clergy, it is a serious error to regard jurisdiction as some sort of ". . . gift or power superadded to the gift of orders". /2 Properly understood, jurisdiction is not an addition to the gift of Holy Orders, but a limitation on its exercise. It amounts merely to defining the territory in which a bishop or priest is authorized to function as such, so long as he remains true to the essential principles of faith, order and morality of the Catholic Church. /3

The ancient notion of jurisdiction was strictly geographical: one bishop for one city. /4 No bishop could function in another bishop's diocese without permission. The same was true for lesser clergy. This remains the "pure" concept of 'jurisdiction', but the events of Church history have made it impossible in our day to use the concept in pure form. Differences of faith divide Christians into separate Communions. Thus we have separate jurisdictions among the various portions of the Church Catholic. Often Roman, Anglican and Orthodox jurisdictions exist today in the same geographic territory. This is tragic, but unavoidable so long as doctrinal differences divide us.

Within Anglicanism, the jurisdictional issue is that of who has the authority to act as the Anglican expression of the Church Catholic within a given geographic area. With the emergence of the continuing Anglican movement in the U. S. and Canada, existing side by side with the altered bodies still calling themselves "PECUSA" and "The Anglican Church of Canada", the question of jurisdiction in these areas takes on a note of more than usual interest.

As applied to individual clergy, the principles of jurisdiction under normal circumstances are clear enough. Every bishop (or lesser minister) receives at his ordination (if it is sacramentally valid), competence to exercise in its fullness the ministry of his Order. This competence, which is permanent as a result of the indelible character conferred in ordination, is referred to as 'habitual, ministerial jurisdiction'. /5

Under normal circumstances, a minister's 'actual ministerial jurisdiction', or lawful exercise of his ministry, is limited to the sphere or "theater of operations" to which he is canonically assigned. No bishop or priest is ordained simply to be turned loose to wander throughout the world, ministering when, where & to whom he pleases. To avoid such anarchy, the Church in her canon law has always insisted that ministers be ordained with an assignment to a sphere in which they have authority to minister. The area within which one has canonical authority to minister normally sets the limits of a cleric's actual jurisdiction.

As applied to various spheres of activity wider than that of an individual cleric, the question is that of what entity has authority to govern the ecclesiastical affairs of (e.g.) a parish, a diocese or a province. Who can appoint clergy to their posts, take order for ordinations & consecrations, apply the sanctions of ecclesiastical discipline, etc.? Whose actions, in other words, are those of Christ's Church, possessed of mission from Him through His apostles and their successors, as opposed to the self-appointed and empty actions of mere individuals acting on their own? Whose actions on earth can be relied upon to be bound in heaven?

This question, in our day, is that of how to tell whether a body claiming to act as the Church is in fact the same body which preceded it as beyond question the Holy Catholic Church acting in that region. Here the principles are those already given above: fidelity to apostolic doctrine, maintenance of apostolic order, and continuity of mission with any previous lawful pastors in the territory involved.

The extraordinary (but not historically unique) element in the situation of the Anglican Catholic Church is the need to determine whether the pastors with whom in many places we have parted, having at one time been lawful pastors, had in fact become unlawful ones. Can jurisdiction, in other words, be lost? And if it can, what steps are needful and proper for the faithful in the affected territory to continue and reconstitute legitimate jurisdictional authority?

Surely no one will agree that, once having been a part of the Church Catholic, it is impossible ever to depart from it. Here we have no less an Anglican authority than Bishop Pearson:

"There is a power within the Church to cast those out which do belong to it . . . Again, a man may not only passively and involuntarily be ejected, but also may by an act of his own cast out or eject himself, not only by plain and complete apostasy, but by a defection from the unity of truth . . ." /6

Those who have been among us can thus depart from us. And if the apostasy is that of the ruling body of the province, what then?

The 3rd Ecumenical Council, that at Ephesus in A.D. 431 faced this question. In dealing with the matter of a province whose governing authority embraced Nestorianism, the Council ruled that the faithful remnant in such a province were no longer subject to the apostate authority, but would receive and recover jurisdiction by submission to a Catholic and orthodox bishop willing and able to provide oversight, thus remaining in the Church. /7

Again at Utrecht in 1633, when the majority of the existing legal Chapter had become Calvinist, Archbishop Rovenius proceeded to re-form & reestablish a Chapter with men of his own appointment, calling the reconstituted body by the name, "Vicariate", as the old "Chapter" continued to exist. At the time, almost a century later, when the Vicariate faced the need to ask the Bishop of Babylon to provide the episcopate for the Province of Utrecht, they obtained an opinion from the formidable Van Espen and the other canonists of Louvain that Archbishop Rovenius' actions had been entirely licit under the prevailing circumstances, and that the Vicariate possessed the jurisdiction of the Chapter at Utrecht. /8

Surely, the opinions, decisions and actions of Bishop Pearson, of the Council of Ephesus and of the Chapter at Utrecht are of interest to continuing Anglicans.

Clearly then, jurisdiction can be lost. It can be forfeit by heresy, by abandonment of the apostolic ministry, and/or by renunciation of those moral principles which derive inevitably from the essential doctrines of the Church. Those who do these things lose their authority to act as the Church: their actions become empty, bound neither in heaven nor on earth. /9 When the perpetrator of such actions is a ruling authority of a province, whether it be a Nestorian Archbishop in Asia Minor, a Calvinist Chapter at Utrecht, or a Secularist General Convention of PECUSA, then the jurisdiction of that authority is lost, & its acts bind no one. The faithful of such a province who would remain within the Catholic Church must then seek episcopal oversight, if it can be found, by a Catholic and orthodox bishop willing and able to provide it. And they are free to re-form and reconstitute the institutions by which the jurisdiction of that province is to be administered, provided this is done in conformity to Catholic doctrine and apostolic order.

These considerations are of primary importance in the dispute currently wracking Anglicanism. They are precisely the considerations which were "ducked" at Lambeth 1978 by a confused and cowardly assemblage of bishops. But this issue was not "ducked" by the Anglicans assembled at St Louis in September, 1977. There the "continuing Anglican movement" made precisely the claim that: ". . . the Anglican Church of Canada and the Protestant Episcopal Church in U.S.A., by their unlawful attempts to alter Faith, Order and Morality . . . have departed from Christ's One, Holy, Catholic and Apostolic Church." /10

Those assembled made the additional claim that they constituted "continuation of Anglicanism" on the North American continent.

Our claim at St Louis was precisely that the "PECUSA" assembly, through its legislative process, departed so radically from essential elements of the apostolic mission of the Church Catholic that the jurisdiction of the province, the authority to act as the Anglican expression of the Catholic Church in the U.S. can no longer be claimed by that assembly, nor by those who continue to acknowledge and subject themselves to its authority. While retaining its outward name, "PECUSA" as now constituted became in fact something other than what it was before. And we claimed that we are the continuation of what PECUSA was before its name was reapplied to a drastically altered entity. Thus we legitimately exercise the jurisdiction of the Anglican province in the U.S., and we do so precisely by having separated from that new entity still using PECUSA's name, for only by such separation could we continue in the faith, order & morality of the Catholic Church. This issue is not settled by headcounts, any more than (at one time) was that of Arianism vs. orthodoxy; it can be determined only on the basis of conformity to apostolic mission.

If our claim at St Louis was false, if the "PECUSA" authorities had not departed the Catholic Church and thus forfeited the Anglican jurisdiction in the U.S., then our separation was grave sin, and the act of Bishops Chambers and Pagtakhan at Denver was equally grave sin. There is nothing admirable about trying to create a "competing ministry" within a legitimate jurisdiction. Such acts have always been condemned by the Church. Folks who say to us, "You ACC people are admirable in your stand, but I can still find a legitimate home in 'PECUSA'," simply make no sense. To paraphrase C. S. Lewis' famous dictum from another context: the principles involved here do not leave that option open; they were not intended to. Either the "PECUSA" authorities lost jurisdiction and we have it, or we were schismatic from the start. Either we have the jurisdiction as the essential continuation of what "PECUSA" once was before she became something else, or else we don't have it all, never had it, were and are incapable of receiving it from anyone, and are in fact nothing but intruders in another jurisdiction, the classic "splinter" operation, and the Holy Spirit is not at work among us. /11

But of course our claim was not false. The "PECUSA" rulers and their followers did indeed depart from the Church Catholic, & we were indeed faced with a most extraordinary situation. For we had come to a point where certain ministrations were needed among us for the Church to be able to fulfill her apostolic mission. These ministrations were not to be had unless Bishop Chambers, to whom we had submitted, were to act as by his consecration he was both empowered and committed to do. Was he without jurisdiction to act because he was retired? Just the contrary; at his consecration he received habitual jurisdiction to exercise the fullness of the episcopal office, & thus actual jurisdiction to act under any circumstances where faithful Christians would be cut off from things needful for their spiritual health were he to refrain. Bishop Chambers' own statements in his letter to Bishop Allin of May 23, 1978 confirm this interpretation of his actions. /12 The point is that, acting metropolitically and as senior bishop at Denver, Bishop Chambers acted with jurisdiction by every possible relevant tenet of Catholic doctrine and discipline. /13

There can be no question, therefore, that in the consecrations of Bishops Doren, Morse, Mote and Watterson, the Anglican jurisdiction in the U.S., formerly held but then forfeited by the faithless "PECUSA" assembly, was duly continued, and the claim made at St Louis recognized. The "Denver 4" thus began their episcopate with full jurisdiction as well as with apostolic succession, and with full authority to exercise the one and transmit the other.

C. B. Moss sums it up: "Jurisdiction cannot exist where there is not the right faith." /14

We would only add that "right faith" in this context must be understood to mean those elements of Catholic Faith, Order and Morality which are of the esse of the Church. If the rulers of "PECUSA" had not been sufficiently apostate so as to forfeit jurisdiction, then we were wrong to separate from them, and must return at once for the good of the Church and the salvation of our souls. But if "PECUSA" was indeed apostate to the extent we know she was, then our jurisdiction to be the Anglican expression of the Catholic Church in North America was claimed at St Louis, sealed at Denver, and will continue as long as we are faithful in our official, corporate acts and formularies to the Faith, Order and Morality of the Catholic Church.

NOTES

1/ C. B. Moss, The Christian Faith, pp 259-260 /2/ T. T. Carter, The Roman Question, pp 88-89, as quoted in V. Staley, The Catholic Religion, pp 113-114 /3/ The matter of "recognition" (by other Catholic bodies) is entirely a different issue from that of 'jurisdiction', and one clearly of the bene esse of the Church rather than of the esse. It seems an increasingly nebulous matter, as the 20th Christian Century wears on, just who recognizes whom, and in what sense. Suffice it to note that Anglicans have separated, with some trenchance, the question of our claim to authority to act as a part of the true Church from the issue of whether some other particular Communion "recognizes" that claim. /4/ Moss, op cit, p 261 /5/ F. It is further the duty of the bishops of the province themselves, and of the neighboring metropolitans, who are orthodox, to see to his total deposition from the episcopate. Canon 3: If any of the clergy in town or country have been deposed by Nestorius or his adherents on account of their orthodoxy, they shall receive their office again. Generally, all clerics who adhere to the orthodox and ecumenical synod shall in no way be subject to the apostate or apostacizing bishops. /8/ C. B. VARIETY is the name of the game for the current issue of NEWS EXCHANGE. Where the February issue confined itself to one subject and only two articles, we will try to cover the waterfront both in types of news and sources of news in this issue - some may be old hat, but we hope some of it may be quite new. Communication is still very much a problem in the continuing Church so that quite often NEWS EXCHANGE is the last to learn about an event (that is a not-so-subtle plea to all our readers, be they appointed communicators or not, to send in any news that can be exchanged for other news). Above all, don't assume that we already know about it, or that somebody else will tell us.

CONSECRATION FRANK RUSSELL KNUTTI, most recently Vicar of the Church of St Augustine of Canterbury, West Palm Beach, Florida, in the Patrimony of the Metropolitan of the Anglican Catholic Church, was consecrated 12 January 1980 "Assistant Bishop in the Vicariate General of the Patrimony . . ." at the First Evangelical Lutheran Church in West Palm Beach. Bishop Knutti was born 20 August 1906 in Shepherdstown, West Virginia, the son of John Gottlieb Knutti and Georgia Elanor Eddy. He is a graduate of the Episcopal Theological Seminary in Kentucky at Lexington, was ordered deacon in June 1954, and priested a year later by the Right Rev'd William Robert Moody, III Bishop of Kentucky. Bishop Knutti married Elaine Ruth Burnside on 21 November 1942. He held cures in Kentucky and Pennsylvania before moving to Florida.

THE shield of St Botolph's, Boston, depicted to the left, so far as is known, has never been rendered professionally in any artistic medium outside the printed page. It is a basic shield of alternating waves in silver and blue upon which is superimposed a black chevron with a cross at its peak. The waves represent the water that was about his dwelling, according to the Rev'd E. E. Dorling, who designed the arms more than half a century ago. The chevron is the old heraldic charge by which the medieval armorists symbolized a builder. The cross at the top of the chevron indicates that St Botolph's building was sacred. St Botolph, an eighth century Saxon monk and abbot who established a Benedictine monastery in a marshy wilderness about 100 miles northeast of London, is the patron saint of Boston, England, for which Boston, Massachusetts, is named. More than 60 churches in east central England, including the church in Boston, whose tower is the highest in the country, were named for him. There is no other church in our Boston named for him, and there had been none so named for over 100 years.

HITHER & YON A MONTANA Churchwoman writes that things are moving out in the Big Sky Country. A devoted Churchman has placed ads in Flathead Valley newspapers and in a separate action a group 100+ miles south of Flathead Lake has met to study forming a congregation.
FROM Yonkers, New York: Please let me suggest that the logical name for our Church is the one contained in our -now only our- Book of Common Prayer: the Protestant Episcopal Church; I trust you'll pronounce that word correctly: the Pro-TEST-ant Episcopal Church. Why hesitate? It's been handed to us.
FROM Cochabamba, Bolivia: In South America the first traditional conservative Anglican-Episcopal service in keeping with the spirit and ideals of the Anglican Catholic Church, to the best of our knowledge, was held 4 June 1978 in LaPaz, by a lay reader who now lives in Ecuador. Reports from North America speak of the Anglican congregations there being very fluid and subject to change. We note the situation here in South America must be even far more fluid indeed. However, the most important steps have been taken in that Anglicans wishing to keep their Holy Faith unchanged and true have met in prayer. . . We ask you to pray for the faithful here in South America that one day the Church will be organized here as a bulwark against modern humanism and other unholy worldly changes . . . [A separate list included shows that meetings have been held in nine cities and five countries in South America. -Editor]
FROM Philadelphia we have a report that some 35 were present for the first service of the Church of the Holy Sacraments and "about 2/3s have made pledges".

ORDINATIONS ON the Feast of the Conversion of St Paul, in St Augustine's Anglican Catholic Church, Pflugerville, Texas (Diocese of the Southwest), Thomas Raney Collins, a former Methodist minister and now a communicant of St Mary's, Plano, and Br Thomas James, TOR (Donald Lee Edens), a Brother Regular in the Franciscans of the Southwest, were ordered deacons by the Episcopal Visitor to the Diocese.

ELECTION AT the Synod that followed the ordinations reported above, Robert Condit Harvey, 64, most recently Rector of St Timothy's, Charleston, South Carolina, and presently the President of the Foundation for Christian Theology and a member of the Board of Directors of the Fellowship of Concerned Churchmen, was elected, on the first ballot and by a 2/3s majority, Bishop of the Southwest. (A biography of Father Harvey will be printed in conjunction with the reporting of his consecration - see "Coming Events".)

INSTITUTIONS ON 26 January 1980, Roderic B. Dibbert, 51, most recently Rector of the Church of St George the Martyr in Chicago, was instituted as Rector of St Mary's Church, Akron, Ohio, by the II Bishop of the Midwest.
ALSO by the II Bishop of the Midwest, on 13 December 1979, the Rev'd Pavel Soucek was instituted as Rector of the Church of St Mary the Virgin, Evansville, Indiana.

RECEPTION IN Holy Apostles', St Louis, in the late fall, Thomas McDonald was received into the Anglican Catholic Church by the Prime Bishop. Father McDonald is now the Rector of St Dunstan's Church, Minneapolis, Diocese of the Midwest.

COMING EVENTS ON 8 March 1980, at St Mark's Lutheran Church, in Roanoke, Virginia, William deJarnette Rutherfoord, 61, will, God willing, be consecrated Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of the Mid-Atlantic States. (Father Rutherfoord's biography will be printed at the time of the reporting of his consecration.)
THE consecration of Robert Condit Harvey (see "Election") is scheduled to be held, God willing, in Dallas, Texas, on 12 April 1980, at the Greek Orthodox Cathedral Church of the Holy Trinity.

FRANCISCANS A REPORT: On 17 October 1979, the eve of the Provincial Synod, the Third Order of St Francis in the Diocese of the Resurrection met in the chapel of St Mary's Roman Catholic Church in Indianapolis for the Offices of Clothing and Profession. The Right Rev'd William F. Burns, Bishop Protector of the T.O.S.F., Resurrection, received the Professions of Fathers Pavel Soucek and Philip Lisuzzo, and Sister Vonny Boarts, and clothed Fr Larry Snyder as a novice. The Right Rev'd James O. Mote, Bishop Protector of the T.O.S.F., Holy Trinity, and a member of T.O.S.F. himself, participated in the ceremony and gave the Great Blessing of St Francis.
After the ceremony, the Franciscans in Indianapolis met, with letters of encouragement and support from many who could not be there, for the purpose of unifying their efforts and organizing on a Provincial level. Brother Juniper, O.S.F., Father Dominic Giles Hedelund, T.O.R. and Fr (now Bishop) Frank Knutti, were present. . . all three Orders are now represented in the ACC, as two sisters in Denver have taken vows as Poor Clares.
FROM Father Hilarion, T.S.F.: Quite a number of people have asked about the New England Franciscan Fellowship. . . First of all, to explain what we are, I must say what we are not: We are not another Franciscan Order. We are, instead, a fellowship of people who are members of a Franciscan order. . . All one needs to do to be a member of the NEFF is to first of all be a member of one of the already existing Franciscan groups and then request membership in the Fellowship as well. . . we do not want to be in competition with those orders for members; we want to support and serve them. What do we do? We get together from time to time to worship, to discuss the Franciscan life, to support each other in matters concerning living up to the Franciscan vocation, and to undertake projects of various kinds. We plan to publish a quarterly or a semi-annual review entitiled The New England Franciscan (see "Offered"). New York: Our Anglican Fellowship was organized in May 1979. Our supporters number about 35 families and we are growing. . . On Saturday, 19 January, we inaugurated our Sunday School . . . Fr Nelson Chowenhill . . . is our Chaplain. Though we are neither a mission nor a parish, Father Chowenhill is prepared to offer Baptism, solemnize marriages and help our families at the time of death. Father Chowenhill is equally available for preparing persons for Confirmation. . . We are, then, well organized. Our broad objectives include the founding of missions and parishes when need and opportunity bid us to do so. More immediately, it is our purpose to provide a spiritual resource for believing Anglicans who are alarmed by the disintegration of the Episcopal Church.

FROM Incarnation, Maitland, Florida: Our Vestry has found us a place, centrally located, where we can "get it all together". The last details are being ironed out, and there is a hope that we can have it ready for us by the end of February. We need special contributions to get chairs, kneelers, and many other things we will have to furnish, but we know they will be provided. Praise the Lord for His bounty, and support the building fund of your parish!

FROM The Anglican News (Canada): The congregation of Holy Faith Church, Peterborough, who have been traveling about 40 miles to Mass in Cobourg each Sunday for the past year, now have their own chapel . . . where Mass is said each Sunday . . .

FROM St Andrew's, Tallahassee, Florida (and under the somewhat misleading title, "On Chruch Growth" - for the parishioners of St Andrew's most certainly do not need a crutch, no matter how they spell it!): Have you ever heard someone in our church remark (unthinkingly): "St Andrew's is not growing"? The answer to that is:"Well, we have quintupled our size in a little over two years." Now that is solid growth! I wonder what other congregations (without a rector) could make that claim? Small YES! Stagnant NO!

FROM St Peter's, Albuquerque (a note from a parishioner): We started out 1 December 1977 with 29 communicants and now have 128 plus about 40 children. At our second confirmation this past December we had 14 confirmations and three received.

ALSO from St Peter's (the parish newsletter): The Building Fund closed the year of 1979 in a blaze of glory. On 13 December we were able to purchase a $10,000 "T" Certificate. This higher rate of interest will make our money work for us.

THE congregation of St Augustine's, Pflugerville, Texas [Editor's Note: We know it really is Austin - but who is going to type Austin when he can type Pflugerville?], "is walking on air (they haven't managed to walk on water yet) over the thrill and excitement of being in their own marvelous old country church building. . . The quaint old German-style frame building was formerly St Elizabeth's Roman Catholic Church, located in the predominately German farming community just north of the city of Austin. Bishop Doren consecrated the building on his episcopal visitation in the fall. (With a grateful tip of the biretta to The Southwest Anglican)

OFFERED THE NEW ENGLAND FRANCISCAN, a Franciscan miscellany of articles, poems, prayer, devotional writing, news, pictures, and anything else you may fancy, to be published, God (and your pocketbook) willing, in January or February, and thereafter, again God willing, two or three, or perhaps four, times a year. For the first issue, we will print as many as we can with the money in hand. Send us $2 for the first issue, or more if you want to underwrite the project. We will send you the first issue. [Editor's Note: Since we are late in getting this "ad" published, the first issue may be sold out, but try anyhow.] We would also welcome articles, poems, pen and ink drawings, photographs; in fact anything that you think might be of interest to Franciscans. Write to: The New England Franciscan, The Rev'd C. David Burt, Editor, POB 428, Harvard, MA 01451.

FROM the Anglican Catholic Book Store, POB 5461, Evansville, IN 47715: Holy Week, $3; Tenebrae, $3; A Manual for Priests, $9; People's Anglican Missal, $10; Altar Anglican Missal, $125; no mention of postage - add 10% to cover postage and handling.

BY The Anglican Press, 8131 S.W. 124th St, Miami, FL 33156: Our Church Times, a combination teaching tool and space (on the back blank page) for a parish newsletter, order of service, and the like, with emphasis "on the basic teachings of the Church". The Anglican Press is a non-profit religious corporation serving the Church on an independent basis. Bundle rate for the Times is 6¢ per copy, with a minimum order of 25 copies per week; single subscriptions are available for $6 per year (Canadian and foreign, $7). A bit of serendipity is the cartoons of Fr Fred Pope whose wry humor shows up in The Anglican Digest occasionally.

FROM the Episcopal Book Club: The Old Catholic Movement, by C.B. Moss, one of the most trustworthy theologians and historians of the Anglican Communion. The Old Catholics comprise small national Churches which, at various times, separated from the Church of Rome and are in communion with the ancient See of Utrecht (and, since 1932, the Church of England). Moss' book is important because the man in the pew all too often thinks that theology is for theologians and history for historians and both make dull reading - not so when C. B. Moss writes about them. Too, the book speaks well to the situation of the continuing Church and is, therefore, of particular interest to Anglican Catholics and to those who are considering such a move. Order from: EBC, Hillspeak, Eureka Springs, AR 72632, $5.50, paperback, including postage and handling.

FROM African Palms, POB 575, Olney, MD 20832, for palm crosses made "in seven mud villages in the Diocese of Masasi in Tanzania where the income for each mud hut is about $55 a year. . . When Christians in the U.S.A. purchase these palm crosses, the Christians of Masasi gain added hope & encouragement and a real sense of brotherhood with their fellow Christians on the other side of the globe. . . The palm crosses are well made. They have been used in England for the past 10 years and here in the U.S.A. for the past three years and in Canada for two years. Last year they were used in Australia for the first time. Those parishes which have bought them have been well pleased. . ." Order from the address above: $6 for 100, $3 for 50 (minimum order). WANTED COMMUNION vessels and altar copies of the Prayer Book (Canadian) for Holy Faith Church, Peterborough, and other parishes now being organized. Mass vestments and church furnishings of all kinds would be most welcome. For details and shipping instructions: The Anglican News, 295 King St, West, Cobourg ON, Canada K9A 2N4.

ALL SAINTS' Anglican Church, Muncie, Indiana, is looking for: "altar furnishings of any kind - chalice, paten, candle holders". For further details: Mrs Max E. Stults, Indian Mound Farm, Rt 1, Box 51, Farmland, IN 47340.

BELATED, but nonetheless heartfelt, thanks to all who sent NEWS EXCHANGE, its editor, his long-suffering spouse, and our two-thirds Girl Friday Christmas greetings. We treasure them all.

EXCERPTS FROM our New Zealand correspondent who sends us items from Maoriland every now and again (and delights an editor's heart [yes, they have 'em] by writing: "Should you wish to use any extracts, please feel free to do so, but I do not send it in the expectation that any of it should be published. Also feel free to amend and re-write if you think fit"!): "If there is one word today that is dismissed, undervalued, explained away and watered down, it is the word 'Catholick'. Yet this word is the key word embodying the qualities (if adhered to) that justify the existence of the Anglican Church and the acceptance of its claims, for it embodies the Divine authority and Truth which alone give the Church of God a valid claim for universal acceptance and allegiance. . . There seems to have been a deliberate attempt to persuade Anglicans to ignore or disregard the fact that the Anglican Church and its Ministry is an entirely different Church and Ministry, built on entirely different principles from the non-episcopal protestant bodies and their ministries, and this ecumenical blindfolding seems to lie at the root of the morass in which so many Anglicans appear to be bogged down today."
[It may be a New Zealand boot, but it sure fits! -Editor]

FOR ANY ACC BULLETIN IT comes from the Church of the Good Shepherd, Oklahoma City, but it would look good in any parish bulletin: "Wasn't the crowd at Sunday evening's service terrific? Lets have more and bigger crowds. Invite a friend or a neighbor, even a stranger, to come worship with us. If you have asked them before, ask them again. There are still many folks in our area who do not have a church home. Lets work harder and let some of those people know where we are and WHY we are - then we'll have an even bigger crowd for next month's Communion."

LETTER I have recently been put on the mailing list for your NEWS EXCHANGE (I think it was because I bought a few of your pamphlets). I want to request that I stay on the mailing list. . . I am presently a rather wobbly Episcopalian, who wants to go back to church, but am not sure which church I should be going to. [Emphasis added -Editor]

GRADUATE THEOLOGICAL UNION LIBRARY 1962

WILLIAM deJarnette Rutherfoord, 61, a priest since 1965 (ordained by the III Bishop of Southwestern Virginia), was, on the Saturday before the Third Sunday in Lent, and in St Mark's Lutheran Church, Roanoke, Virginia, consecrated Bishop Coadjutor of the Mid-Atlantic States in eventual apostolic succession to Charles Dale David Doren, 64. He was born, 4 March 1919, in Roanoke, the son of Julian Hamilton Rutherfoord and Willie Edmondson Penn Rutherfoord. He attended the New School of Social Research, Virginia Theological Seminary and the Corcoran School of Art. Bishop Rutherfoord was married, 9 August 1944, to June Ernestine Grant, and they have two children. The Bishop's first cure was in Richlands, Virginia, and thereafter he held cures elsewhere in Virginia and in Georgia. He is the author of two books, Crusade, the Story of the Bible for Catholic Children and Giants of the Animal World. The Bishop will continue as Rector of the Anglican Church of St Thomas of Canterbury, in Roanoke.

SERMONS FOR LAYREADERS

FATHER Robert C. Harvey, the Rector of St Timothy's, Charleston, South Carolina, and Bishop-elect of the Southwest, has been sending weekly sermons to lay readers in 14 parishes during most of the past year (parishes that have been without the regular services of a priest and in need of this help). He expects to continue this service after his anticipated move to Texas, and would be glad to add names --especially of lay readers in priestless parishes-- to his regular list.
Each Monday he sends out by first-class mail a three-page 12-minute sermon on a text from the Prayer Book lectionary. Beginning Easter those lections will be the second set for Morning Prayer. Once each three months he sends out in advance a schedule for each Sunday showing Psalms, Old and New Testament lections and proposed hymns. This service is provided at cost (at present about 50¢ per week). Would-be subscribers may get in touch with Father Harvey at 68½ Queen St, Charleston, SC 29401.

THE BARN OWL

AFTER the winter's hibernation (spent perched over a hot sewing machine), the Barn Owl makes her spring appearance in NEWS EXCHANGE, and-
OFFERS one purple chasuble (given to be passed on), and to make altar and chalice linens for congregations of the Anglican Catholic Church (and asks that you please not ask for linens if you plan to depart for some other Christian body); and WANTS from linen requesters: the name of the Anglican Catholic congregation, its diocese, the name of its bishop & priest) & in the case of the latter, whether he is in residence or a visitor) or the name of a responsible layman/senior warden PLUS measurements of the altar (LWH), chalice (HW of cup), credence table (LWH). Please send her a SELF-ADDRESSED, STAMPED ENVELOPE with your request. There is no charge for linens.
QUESTION? Whooo else would like to be a Barn Owl? Would you welcome a booklet of instructions? Will you share ideas and problems? Former Barn Owls please note: We value past experience. Remember, the Barn Owl gives a hoooot!

COMING EVENTS

THE consecration of Robert Condit Harvey as I Bishop of the Southwest has been re-scheduled to 19 April 1980 to be held, God willing, at the King of Glory Lutheran Church in Dallas, Texas. (It is interesting to note, according to our correspondent, that Father Harvey first had the "calling" for the Sacred Ministry while on a visit to Dallas in 1952. He had not been in Texas since, except to attend the Dallas Synod, yet was elected on the first ballot by a two-thirds majority in both houses.)

ON 2 and 3 May, in Columbia, South Carolina, the Diocese of the Southeastern United States will meet in synod.

ON 9 and 10 May, the annual synod of the Diocese of the Resurrection will be held at Our Lady of Fatima Retreat House in Elmhurst, Pennsylvania.

IN October, in Mobile, Alabama, the Provincial Synod of the Anglican Catholic Church will be convened.

PRESSLEY MEMORIAL FUND

AT the Provincial Synod in Indianapolis, Fraser Barron of the Diocese of the Mid-Atlantic States presented a resolution which acknowledged the financial plight of many Anglican Catholic clergymen, cited the late Ralph Reid Pressley, Rector of the Anglican Church of the Holy Cross in Oklahoma City, as setting "a luminous example for the Clergy of this Church", and authorized "the creation of a Father Ralph R. Pressley Memorial Fund to be administered by the College of Bishops for the support of especially needy Clergy of this Church."
Contributions to the "Father Ralph R. Pressley Memorial Fund" may be sent to NEWS EXCHANGE and will be forwarded to the College.

A WELCOME ADDITION

THE Shield and Sword, formerly published under the auspices of the Episcopal Renaissance of Pennsylvania, emerges with this issue [Volume X, No. 1, 25 February 1980] as the official publication of the Diocese of the Resurrection (New York, New Jersey & Pennsylvania) replacing the Messenger (which was a casualty of the upheaval and move of the Diocese's New Jersey headquarters).
The Episcopal Renaissance of Pennsylvania was one of the founding members of the Fellowship of Concerned Churchmen. Many of its members formed the nucleus of the Anglican Church of the Holy Sacraments.
NEWS EXCHANGE welcomes Shield and Sword to the Anglican Company of Church Communicators in its new role.

THE Mass, An Anglican Catholic Prayer Book for Children. From the Newsletter of the Diocese of the Holy Trinity: As the mother of four small (and wiggly) boys, I am convinced that children derive a great deal of comfort and security from attending the Mass with their families, that children are capable of understanding the Mass at a surprisingly early age and that a child who has been taught what is going on in the Mass is less apt to misbehave during it. In presenting the Mass to children, however, even the best-informed parent can use all the help he can get. Thanks to Berenice Reed, a Mass booklet tailored to the needs of Anglican Catholics is now available.
Not only does the [booklet] explain the actions of the Mass in clear and simple terms, it also gives children ways to participate on their own level and is delightfully illustrated by Wynne Smith. My twins, who are just beginning to read, use The Mass in conjunction with an illustrated children's Bible to follow the service for themselves. The Mass is also an excellent home teaching tool to use to prepare a preschool child for Mass attendance. The Mass, An Anglican Catholic Prayer Book for Children (@ 1979) may be ordered from Berenice Reed, 3116 S Joplin Ct, Aurora, CO 80013. The price, $2.50, includes postage and handling. Mrs Reed has had her booklet privately printed and does not make any profit from it. ---Sally Farrow in Newsletter

ORDINATION

FROM Holy Trinity's Newsletter: The Rev'd Robert Bradley was conditionally ordained by Bishop Mote on the Feast of the Purification to the Diaconate. From a Tulsa (Oklahoma) newspaper: The Rev'd Robert B. Bradley will be ordained to the Anglican Catholic Church (continuing Episcopal) priesthood during a noon ceremony Saturday [16 February] in 1st Lutheran Church. Father Bradley will become the first rector of St Stephen's Parish, Tulsa's only Anglican Catholic parish. He will also serve the Church of the Advent, Muskogee Anglican Catholic mission.
Father Bradley served as the co-pastor of St Francis Xavier Old Roman Catholic Parish in Syracuse, New York, two years. He later was assigned to California, where he served the Diocese of San Francisco as a supply priest. He was inactive in the Catholic ministry for a period before coming to Tulsa. St Stephen's was founded in August 1978 as a mission.

CONTINUING CHURCH IN MEXICO

WHILE the question of women's ordination is not an issue in Mexico (all three of the Mexican PECUSA bishops voted NO in 1976), the issue of the BCP and the proper pastoral role of the bishop is. Questions of church property are not an issue for the Federal Government holds the title to them all (the Church has been connected with the State since 1519). Today there are a handful of priests in Mexico who have been defrocked by their bishops for refusing to go along with the same things that PECUSA has ordained to be so here in the States. The work is concentrated in the areas of Mexico City and the State of Jalisco. It is unusual indeed, but true, to see the village square of such a place as San Sebastian, Jalisco, having a PECUSA parish on the square, the Roman Church down a side street and the continuing Church meeting in a parishioner's home. I know this to be true for I celebrated Mass (in Spanish) in that home last year. The work in Jalisco is being continued by Father Gomez-Camberos who is a retired language teacher and Anglican priest. Father went to CDSP in the 30s and was priested by the saintly Bishop Salinas who was a Nashotah man and who revitalized Anglican work amongst the Mexican people after the difficulties of the late 20s and 30s when the Church was at war with the radicals then in power in Mexico City. Caught between the Roman Catholics (ecumenism is much better now than it was then!) and the radicals of the PRI (led by dictator-president Plutarco Calles), the lot of an Anglican was not easy, but today there is no problem in this area. Father Gomez pastors four parishes in the State of Jalisco, and while he no longer rides horseback to get to them, still the long hours of bus travel over narrow roads are not easy. I know that he and his compatriots would covet the prayers and the offerings any might like to offer. You can write him: Fr Alfonso Gomez-Camberos, Apartado 1-1751, Guadalajera, Jalisco, MEXICO. --- The Rev'd G. D. Wiebe, SSC

WANTED REMEMBER, the Alamo City needs a priest, too. All Saints' Anglican Church (HT) will welcome information and/or resumés from clergy willing to relocate in the Alamo City. Write the Wardens and Vestry, POB 18404, San Antonio, TX 78218.

ST Timothy's Anglican Church, Charleston, South Carolina, is also looking for a priest to fill the vacancy that will exist when Father Harvey leaves for Texas and is consecrated Bishop of the Southwest. Write: Clyde H. Turner, Senior Warden, St Timothy's Anglican Church, 68½ Queen St, Charleston 29401.

ALSO the Rector and Wardens of St Charles the Martyr are interested in corresponding with other Anglican parishes under the title of St Charles. Write: The Rev'd G. D. Wiebe, 730 Blossom Way, Hayward, CA 94541, or Mr Prindible at the address above.

PAST SELECTIONS THE Episcopal Book Club, Hillspeak, Eureka Springs, AR 72632, has a pamphlet listing past books-of-the-seasons still available. To get a copy, send a SELF-ADDRESSED, STAMPED ENVELOPE and ask for "Past Selections".

AN IDEA WHO'S TIME HAS COME THIS being the census year, it would be good to get a better view of our numbers and also to refute the rubbish from PECUSA that there are 3600 laymen and about 65 clergymen in the continuing Church. Put this little blurb in the next NewsX:

Parish: _____
(name, address, diocesan affiliation)

Number baptized:_____ Number at Christmas '79:_____

Number of Clergymen: _____ Number at Easter '80:_____

At the urging of our correspondent, NEWS EXCHANGE will tabulate the results (if you mail them in) and print it in an early issue as well as providing the information to the bishops.

ELECTION ACCORDING to the newsletter of the Diocese of Christ the King, "The most important action taken by the [February 1980] Synod was the election of the Rev. Frederick E. Preuss, II, of Franklin, Tennessee, to be Assistant Bishop to Bishop Morse."

WORTH COPYING AGAIN A NUMBER of good publications and ideas are dropped in NewsX's post office box from time to time. Two worthy of mention this month are a little 3½x5½" folder from The Anglican Fellowship of the North Country and a tri-fold letter-size sheet from the Church of the Holy Apostles in St Louis. The first features a Celtic cross on the cover and the Fellowship name. Inside, three subjects are laid out forthrightly and succinctly: The occasion & general principles of our uniting in fellowship; Specific details of our belief & practice; & Administrative considerations & procedures. On the back are the names, addresses and phone numbers of the Secretary-Treasurer and of the Convener of the Fellowship. The tri-fold from Holy Apostles' presents: 1. Some Historic Notes about Our Parish (and the parish's very attractive logo appears above that), 2. Time and Place of Services and Mailing Address for the Church, and 3. List of Parish Officers, Their Addresses and Telephone Numbers.
Either is well worth copying. For the Fellowship folder write: Dr Clayton Steward, POB 426, Saranac Lake, NY 12983; for Holy Apostles' sheet: Leland Hilligoss, 8225 Parkside Dr, St Louis, MO 63105. In either case, drop in a dollar to cover postage and incidentals.

OF your Christian charity, pray for all our bishops.

ANOTHER GOOD IDEA THE February newsletter of Holy Cross Anglican Church, Webster, New York, carries a page-and-a-half of "1979 - In Review". It is a splendid idea for parishioners because it serves to remind them of what they have done and just how much they have accomplished. Further, it makes fascinating reading for others who have been through or are going through the throes of bringing a parish into being. Here are some excerpts:
January - Holy Cross Church submits offer of $35,000 to purchase Old Bay Road schoolhouse / March - Webster School Board votes to sell schoolhouse to Holy Cross / April - Building Fund Drive over the top! / June - First coat of paint is applied to exterior of church / August - First window opened on south side of sanctuary
Other significant events march across the calendar as the parish takes a moment to look back to where it has been and then buckles down to move ahead.

REFLECTIONS

In ancient lands, in days of old, our brothers knelt to pray
In cave and grotto, dank and bare, without the light of day.
Their persecutors drove them thence because of unknown fear.
They died by lion, club and sword while praying, "Lord be near."

I trust we turn not back again to those dread yesteryears
When Christians were afraid to pray, and shed such bitter tears.
"Beware," I say, "the scene is set, the seed is planted deep.
Our Church has changed tremendously & tares are what we'll reap."

Now those of us who've held our trust in Catholicity
Must stand as one and not give in to this infidelity.
The civil courts may take OUR church and turn us in the street,
But "Praise the Lord", HE is our guide, & we'll find a place to meet.
---Ernest L. Warrington

IN & OUT FROM The Courier of Holy Apostles', St Louis (and in the same issue): Vestry-member and Secretary of the parish, Miss Connie Green, attended the January 25-26 Synod of the Diocese of the Southwest and participated in the election of the first bishop chosen to serve this diocese. //
Even as we rejoice with the Diocese of the Southwest in the election of a bishop, we are informed that our parish will be transferred to another jurisdiction.
At an early January meeting of the College of Bishops geographic boundaries for the dioceses of the Anglican Catholic Church in the United States were further clarified. The part of that clarification that concerns our parish is that the entire St Louis Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area (a territory originally defined by the U. S. Bureau of the Census) which includes the Missouri city of St Louis and counties of St Louis, St Charles, Franklin and Jefferson, as well as several contiguous Illinois counties, will be allocated to the Diocese of the Midwest, presided over by the Rt Rev William O. Lewis, SSC, of Kalamazoo, Michigan.
The logic of this move is apparent and we look forward to an opportunity to welcome Bishop Lewis as our own Chief Pastor and Reverend Father in God.

BRONSON Church has stood for 140 years as a symbol of the "Faith of our Fathers" in a world of constant change. It is this same Faith, as set forth in the historic Book of Common Prayer (1549-1928) which the Anglican Catholic Church wishes to preserve and promote. To this purpose, the parish of St Mary's, Akron, Ohio, was established in November, 1977, as a response to the departure of the Protestant Episcopal Church from the doctrine, discipline, and worship of its parent Anglican tradition. You are invited to participate in this revival of Anglican Catholic faith and practice. May the spirit of Keble, Pusey, DeKoven & others who sought to keep the Anglican Church in the "Faith once delivered to the Saints" enrich and prosper our crusade! Bronson Church, at Peninsula, Ohio, ten miles north of Akron, is owned by the Summit County Historical Society and has not been an Episcopal church since the 1960s. It is used by St Mary's as a "chapel of ease".

FROM YE EDITOR THE Fellowship of Concerned Churchmen will hold its annual meeting in New Smyrna Beach, Florida, on 17 April, with its Board of Directors meeting the previous night. It is a crucial meeting, for the Directors and the members must decide whether to continue, whether there is a legitimate role for FCC to play in the scheme of things, whether there is still a need for it now that Dallas '78 and Indianapolis '79 and, yes, Denver '79 are a matter of history. If it is to continue what should its relationship be with the formal embodiment(s) of the continuing Church? What should its relation be to those who have not formally committed themselves to the continuing Church? To those who remain Episcopalian, but unhappily so? To the unchurched?
Write me! Send your ideas to: Capt Walt Swindells, Editor, NEWS EXCHANGE, POB 252, Eureka Springs, AR 72632.
Do it now! I'll take your letters with me to New Smyrna Beach. And I'll let you know, in NEWS EXCHANGE, what happened.

Volume III Number 9 — "And if it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve; but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord. ---Joshua 24:15 — Summer AD 1980

JUL 3 1 1980

MY DEAR fellow Churchmen,
Some of you have asked for a copy of the sermon which I had prepared to preach at the consecration of Bishop Rutherfoord. I am happy to enclose [reproduced herewith, below] a copy for you. I want also to tell you of some of the things which have been weighing heavily upon me these last months.
A number of you have written to express love and concern for me because you heard that I was ill at the time of the consecration. I was sick, not physically, but sick in heart and soul. I am troubled that our Church is slipping far away from our original goals and the Affirmation of St Louis. Two days before the consecration of my coadjutor, the College of Bishops met to carry on its business for the concerns of the Church. You know well that the College has suffered a great deal of abuse and criticism during these past two years for not finding a solution to the unhappy divisions within the College. It must be evident to all that these divisions are not confined to the College - or that the withdrawal of two bishops and their dioceses has [not] settled the problems confronting us. I shall not minimize my own part in these difficulties for it is well known that my position is one not fully acceptable within the College or in the Church at large.
It is my strong belief that God has called us to be that which the Declaration of St Louis calls "The Continuing Church". In my mind this means nothing less than to continue the purity of doctrine, discipline, faith & worship which we learned to love and live by while we were actively associated with the Episcopal Church. . . Evidentally my opinion as to the meaning of "continuing" is somewhat different from those expressed by the hierarchy of the Anglican Catholic Church.
It was and is my prayer that the soundness of doctrine and the broadness of worship which for centuries has made the Anglican Church what God intended it to be would continue in the Church in which I was made its first bishop. So far that holy anticipation and prayer has not been realized. . .
Many ambiguous words have been used within our Church to convey the broad spectrum of our faith and worship. The word "Catholic", which conveys a certain tone of inclusiveness and is described in the Book of Common Prayer as "universal" has for hundreds of years been erroneously associated with certain practices of ceremony and "high-church" modes of discipline and worship. The word "Evangelical" has also been misapporiated by those who have inclinations toward "low-church" austerity & non-ceremonial modes of worship. It is my belief that the TRUE CHURCH can never be less than Catholic and Evangelical in terms of what those words truly mean.
It is said that but few "low-church" clergy and lay people have had the fortitude to make the break - and that it is only the "high-church" people who have shown any enthusiasm for the True Faith? Where then am I? Am I a high churchman? Where then are many of those who write me letters and speak to me of their beliefs about the Church and their concern for the ACC? In the College of Bishops and to the individual bishops themselves I have felt it necessary to represent the "low-church" viewpoint. My witness, however, has seemingly fallen upon deaf ears. It is because of this that I did not preach at the consecration of Bishop Rutherfoord. I knew of no other way to make my witness. . .
I do not know what the future holds for me or for thousands of churchmen who are looking for soundness of doctrine coupled with a simple, demonstrative Gospel which declares Jesus Christ as the Saviour of men. I know only that somehow, some way I shall continue to preach Jesus Christ and His Salvation in the Sacramental Church that He founded and of which He is the Head. Further, I ask you all to pray daily the prayers found on page 37 of our Prayer Book for the Church and the unity of God's people . . .
God bless you. Faithfully,
Faithfully,

+C. Dale David Doren

THE "MISSING" SERMON

IN THE Name of The Father, and of The Son, and of The Holy Ghost. Amen.
I would not have you think, my brethren, that my speaking to you today is in any way to be received as a formalized treatise on the duties and obligations of a bishop. It is quite true that the Ordinal seems to direct the preacher at a Service of Consecration to follow a set outline of that which the Prayer Book declares to be "necessary to that Order". Yet it is a vain thing to me that we in this latter day of the Christian Era should presume to know what those admonitions may be.
Have we not in our many Churchly doings strayed far from the simple admonitions of Christ Himself when He spoke to the original 12 Disciples - those whom in our jealous guardianship of the Apostolic Succession we call the first Bishops? Of course, Our Lord Jesus did not have the advantages which we have here today: a beautiful church, a fine choir & an enthusiastic congregation. And yet I believe that the quiet, holy Man of Galilee would have used words of a simpler sort - and would have done things in a more simple way.
If we are to give credulity to Holy Scripture we would see that Jesus delivered His Consecration Sermon quite unpresumptuously to a little band of non-descript fishermen, tax collectors and artisans - twelve in number. His words were profound - indeed profound beyond measure. All He said was, "FOLLOW ME." And then He added, "I will make you fishers of men." How simple! How gloriously simple. But, my friends, how difficult, how painful, how impossible that following is! In following Christ we are not given the choice to be ourselves and dwell in our own conceits and devices. To walk the humble path of the Lord is to test our commitment to the utmost. We must empty ourselves. We must become as nothing so that Jesus, Himself Lord, may be magnified. Yes, we find on the lips of the Master these simple words, scalding with intensity and fraught through with clarity, "FOLLOW ME"!
Beloved, I remind you that the Apostles were chosen -as God chooses all of us- not on the merit of WHAT they were, but on the truth of WHO they were. As men, the Apostles from whom we succeed, were rough, basely human - perhaps roustabout men, as filled with all the foibles and weaknesses of body and soul as are we. One was of the bureaucracy - a tax collector. Another was a scribe of sorts. They were led by a humble carpenter! It was not WHAT they were that mattered - for Jesus changed that. It was WHO they were that made the difference. They were men made in the image of God - men called by no one less than God Himself to follow in the Divine Way & to help in a Divine purpose - even the redemption of all men. To them Jesus said, "Follow ME."
In this world we face the brutal fact that men in high places are products of the system -the organization- that elevates them. The high places of the vast world-church of our day is no different. Jesus the Nazarene said, "By their fruits shall ye know them." How can any body which is corrupt, deceitful & ambitious for itself bear fruit of any other ilk? Let us be mindful of this in our own body - the Anglican Church.
Perhaps you will recall Longfellow's unfinished verses concerning Michaelangelo. The great artist, sculptor & architect devoted his long life to his religion. He was the confidant of Popes & Cardinals and as a result became utterly disillusioned by the inner workings of the Church. Longfellow writes that a certain monk, a friend of Michaelangelo, had a dream. Above all things he wanted to visit the city of Rome.
The great artist asked, "What would you see in the Celestial City?" The monk answered, "I would see His Holiness (the chief bishop) and his Cardinals going in their gilt coaches to High Mass." Whereupon the great Michaelangelo, sick to his soul with a church that had then a corrosive concept of what church leadership should truly be, answered the monk, "But men do not go to Paradise in gilt bedecked coaches."
The monk persisted however and said,"I shall see the catacombs, the convents and the churches. I shall see the ceremonies of Holy Week in all their pomp. I shall see at the Epiphany the feast of the Santissimo Bambino at Ara Coeli." To which Michaelangelo replied, "These pompous ceremonies of the Church are but empty show to him who knows the actors of them. Stay here in your convent - for he who goes to Rome may see too much."
The story relates that the monastic cleric continued and said, "I would see further. I would see the painting of the Last Judgment in the Sistine Chapel."
"Ah, yes," thinks Michaelangelo, "the Last Judgment." The great man knew that men, however high their office - that bishops, even the Bishop of Rome among them, were men who were but of clay. They were men made of nothing but dust & worth nothing - until the Spirit of Christ came upon them and enfolded them. Even so in thinking of his painting and the state of the Church (& indeed his own last judgment) Michaelangelo said, "Life hath become to me an empty theatre, its light extinguished,the music silent, and the actors gone. Some day I shall fall down and my last spark of life will be extinguished. Ah me! What darkness and despair. So near to death, and yet so far from God."
Bishops, priests, laymen - the Church -------- so far from God! The Church has not changed very much since Michaelangelo's day. The lack of moral leadership in high places; the failure to teach sound doctrine; the failure of discipline; the emptiness of Faith -hearts without love- may well attest today to a Church "so near to death - and so far from God." What an unhappy picture this is. But we are here today to say that it need not be so. There is a silver lining - a glory to behold- a CHURCH OF WHICH JESUS CHRIST IS THE HEAD.
In this fallen world, infested as we are with sin, wallowing as we do in the mire of human selfishness & base, ungodly gratification - we, the Church, desperately need Christ-filled leaders who can guide us to the Living God of our salvation.
The twelve men, the first bishops, walking with Jesus were given guidance every moment. They were constantly in the presence of the Living Lord. They were in touch with God. He walked with them. He touched their hearts. Those men had nothing. Like their Chief Shepherd, they had nothing but the LOVE He gave them, the Words He taught them, and the Faith He put into them. And they followed Him as their Lord and Saviour.
This is that to which we are called. Such a simple faith it is. We are merely asked to FOLLOW Him, that is all.

THE CHARGE:

This day you, my brother, William Rutherfoord, are called to an awesome, almost impossible,task. You have been chosen by your peers for reasons that are humanly conceivable. Your devotion to churchly things has enabled them to see in you a spark of that which is holy. Your learning & scholarship has attracted their minds, and they trust that you will adequately be a "defender of the Faith". Your outward demeanor is one of sobriety & honor and of good manners. For these things the clergy & laity of this Diocese will be pleased to recognize you as a bishop. There is however, dear friend, a deeper truth for you & for us to mark - for today you are chosen, not of men alone - but CHOSEN OF GOD! Chosen to be a SHEPHERD.
The Gospel has spoken again today (as it has spoken to all bishops since Peter) the words of Jesus to those who would be shepherds. Thrice does the Lord say, "FEED MY SHEEP."

"Feed my sheep" - not with words alone, but with Truth, with soundness of doctrine and discipline and Holy Order.
"Feed my sheep" - not with mere outward regality but with the holy majesty of inward kingship. For it is CHRIST who is King of kings and Lord of lords. We are servants.
"Feed my sheep" - with love - Divine Love, unfathomable, all engulfing love that emanates from Jesus the Christ who is Love.

William, of yourself, you cannot do these things. You are destined for complete, absolute failure if you think that your own devotion will carry you through. Of yourself you can never fulfill this three-fold admonition of Christ to be a Shepherd. Yet, my brother, this shepherding shall be done through you if you let Jesus live in your heart - if you be guided by Him. For you see, William, a true BISHOP is one who knows that he can become a shepherd -chosen of God- ONLY if he is a FOLLOWER, led and guided by the Lord Jesus Christ.
Jesus says to you this day, William, "FOLLOW ME, and I will

I look forward to having you as a brother bishop. Together we must help to build the continuing Church of which JESUS CHRIST IS THE HEAD.
May the Power of the Father, the Love of the Son, and the Wisdom of the Holy Ghost guard, hold and guide you forever. Amen.

MICHIGAN PARISH SECEDES

AT A PARISH meeting on Sunday, 11 May, the congregation of St Paul's Episcopal Church, Grand Rapids, voted unanimously to secede from the Episcopal Church, and to enter into communion with the Anglican Catholic Church.
The congregation now becomes St Paul's Anglican Catholic Church and comes under the authority & card of the Right Rev'd William O. Lewis, Anglican Catholic Bishop of the Midwest. Citing doctrinal & moral reasons for the decision, the rector of the parish, the Rev'd James R. Sharp, said he & his people had concluded they could no longer hold to the historic Faith of the Church and remain a part of the Episcopal Church. The congregawill remain in their church buildings, which they consider their property. Meanwhile, the Episcopal bishop of Western Michigan has filed suit in Kent County Circuit Court to attempt to gain control of the parish property.

LETTER FROM ENGLAND

THERE IS extensive lack of knowledge regarding the position of the Church of England in the matter of the Book of Common Prayer, 1662.
The following is an extract from the Bishop of Hereford's May 1980 letter:
The Alternative Service Book will be published in November, but an Order of Holy Communion booklet is being made available separately from May 1st.
The title "Alternative Service Book" has been deliberately chosen to make its relationship to the 1662 Book of Common Prayer clear. It does not replace the Book of Common Prayer, but provides in one volume the revised version of the series of modern services to which many of us have now become accustomed. It marks the end of a great deal of liturgical experiment that has taken place in the Church of England over the past years, & many will be thankful to have the services bound together in one volume rather than in a number of small booklets. It will be a valuable addition to the liturgical treasure of our Church and I hope it will be widely used.
This is an ambivalent statement!
The Bishop of Hereford obviously likes the "Alternative Services" and encourages the use, but cannot enforce it. There are parishes in south Shropshire in his diocese where the "Alternative Services" are unknown & quantities of 1662 have been purchased. This is a general condition outside the large towns. On the other hand 1662 has disappeared in many London churches, as have the congregations. At the moment there are distinct differences between Town and Country.
The Collegiate churches (universities mainly) use 1662 and the Anglican chant.
The title "Book of Common Prayer, 1662" is protected by Parliament, but the use of "Alternative Services" will continue to increase as bishops bring pressure on clergy.

WORD FROM THE BIRD

THE Barn Owl (tough bird) says:
No measurements - no linens!
No self-addressed stamped envelope - no reply!
No mouse - no lunch!
No charge for linens.
[Editor's Note: We can attest to the correctness of the above ukase. We were invited to lunch, forgot to bring our own mouse and, sure enough, no lunch!]

YANKEE CONCERNED CHURCHMEN

WITH THE adoption of new by-laws, the Concerned Churchmen of New England has adopted an "umbrella" approach (as has the FCC) and "is now a Missionary Society, the purpose of which is to promote the cause of traditional Anglicanism in the New England Area. . . We believe in keeping the channels of communications open between traditionalist Anglicans both within and outside the Episcopal Church. We hope that all traditionalist parishes in New England will want to join, and that for some of them C.C.N.E. may become a kind of surrogate diocese, serving their needs in any number of ways."
According to C.C.N.E.'s by-laws, "Membership is open to people and parishes who have subscribed to one or more of the following statements of principle:
The Evangelical and Catholic Covenant
The Agreed Anglican Principles
The Affirmation of St Louis
The Affirmation of St Augustine of Canterbury
The Atlanta Statement of the Federation of Independent Episcopal Priests

FATHER'S COGITATIONS

FOR THOSE used to attending Morning Prayer Sunday morning as the sum total of their Christian duty, the foregoing might appear overly demanding and cause some confusion. However, the confusion quickly disappears when one understands the historic purpose of Morning & Evening Prayer, and that the Office of Morning Prayer was never intended to be used as a principal worship service. Since the beginning of the Christian Church, the Eucharistic Celebration has always been the principal act of worship. And Holy Scripture tells us that in the early days of the Church all who believed went to the temple together and Celebrated the Eucharist in the homes daily. (Acts 2:42-47)
In addition to the daily Celebration of the Eucharist, there soon developed a system of daily liturgical devotion known as the Divine Office of Canonical Hours. Every third hour, beginning at midnight, an Office was developed as a result of Jewish tradition, Eucharistic preparation & various Vigils kept in the primitive Church. This conveniently divided the day into eight parts of three hours each. Following is a brief sketch of each of these Offices.
Mattins: In the Western Church Mattins is the Breviary Office for the night. It is derived from the Vigils of the primitive Church & was called Vigiliae until the 11th century. The introduction of this Office was possibly caused by the wide spread belief in the early Church that The Second Coming would take place at midnight. It might also have been influenced by Psalm 119:62, "At midnight I will arise to give thanks unto thee because of thy righteous judgments." The Prayer Book Office of Morning Prayer is based on the medieval Mattins with supplements from the Office of Prime.
Lauds: Lauds is the traditional Morning Prayer Office of the Western Church, & is one of the oldest parts of the Divine Office. In the early Church it always included the Psalms of praise (144-150), from which the Office receives its name (laudo = I praise). Due to its early hour, Lauds is usually recited with Mattins. As with all the Offices, Lauds perhaps received some inspiration from the Psalms. "Early in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up."
Prime: Prime is the Office appointed for the first, prima, hour, i.e., 6 a.m. It has a long history going back before the 4th century where it was referred to as altera matutina - Second Mattins. "Early in the morning do I cry unto thee; for in thy word is my trust." (Psalm 119:147)
Serce: Sext: None: Referred to as the "little hours" of the Divine Office, appointed to be recited at third, sixth and ninth hours respectively. The ancient Jewish time for prayer played a considerable part in the devotion of early Christians and probably influenced the development of these Offices (Daniel 6:10; Acts 3:1, 10:9, 16-25). "In the evening and morning, and at noon-day will I pray, and that instantly; and he shall hear my voice." (Psalm 55:18) The Fathers attest to the continuation of this practice.
Vespers: Together with Lauds, Vespers is the oldest of the Day-Hours. From the time of St Benedict (480-c. 550), the Office was recited in the evening, before dark. It was historically celebrated with great solemnity culminating with the celebrant censing the altar. The Prayer Book Office of Evening Prayer has been partly formed on the model of Vespers, with important additions from the Office of Compline. "Praised be the Lord daily, even the God who helpeth us, and poureth his benefits upon us." (Psalm 68:19)
Compline: The last of the canonical Day-Hours in the Western Church is generally recited just before retiring for the night. There is evidence that St Basil (330-379) compiled an Office approximating Compline. As one ends the day as it was begun, in prayer, the words of our Lord Jesus Christ flow ever so reassuringly through the night air: "Father, into thy hands, I commend my spirit." "O Lord God of my salvation, I have cried day and night before thee." (Psalm 88:1)

(To be concluded next month)

COMING EVENTS

ON ST Botolph's Day, 17 June, the Bishop of the Diocese of the Holy Trinity & Fr C. David Burt will take part at high noon in a special celebration at St Joseph's Roman Catholic Church (the only church in the city with a statue of St Botolph) in recognition of Boston's 350th birthday. This will follow by two days the institution by Bishop Mote of Father Burt as Pastor of St Botolph's Anglican Catholic Church.
THE SYNOD of the Diocese of the Mid-Atlantic States will be held 19-21 June at St John's College, Annapolis, Maryland.
THE DIOCESE of the Southwest's Synod is scheduled in Houston, Texas, for 5-7 September.

ORDINATION

ON THE Feast of St Athanasius & in Denver, John Williams was ordained to the Sacred Priesthood by the Bishop of the Diocese of the Holy Trinity.

SEMINARY — The ACC College of Bishops at its meeting in Daleville, Virginia, 6 and 7 March, voted to purchase the Loomis Hospital (a non-profit corporation no longer in operation) in Liberty, New York, off Route 52, in the Catskills foothills. The College of Bishops plans to convert the beautifully located complex of buildings into a seminary, retreat center and church conference center. Anglican Catholics will be asked to help raise the money needed to begin this important work. If the continuing Church is to grow it needs a place to train its postulants. Fr Richard Stevens, POB 775, Liberty, NY 12754 will gladly furnish additional information.

FCC ANNUAL MEETING — LOUIS E. Traycik, a lay Churchman who is prosecuting attorney for Ogemaw County, Michigan, was the unanimous choice of the Fellowship of Concerned Churchmen to be the organization's new president during its annual meeting in New Smyrna Beach, Florida, on 17 April.

The 32-year-old Traycik succeeds the Rev'd Dr Carroll E. Simcox of Hendersonville, North Carolina, former editor of The Living Church magazine, who has served as head of the FCC for the past two years. The traditionalist group was founded in 1973 by leaders of 15 church-related organizations & publications during the General Convention of the Episcopal Church in Louisville, Kentucky. It sponsored the 1977 St Louis Congress of Concerned Churchmen, out of which developed the "continuing Church" movement that produced what is now the Anglican Catholic Church.

"The Fellowship was not formed for the sole purpose of helping to bring forth a church structure that would assure the continuation of Anglicanism in North America," Dr Simcox explained. "One of its primary tasks, according to its own Articles of Incorporation, was to provide for the encouragement & education of Episcopalians and Anglicans so they would recognize the need to hold fast to the Apostolic faith. It is our intention to continue in that work in order to serve faithful Church people wherever they may be."

Dr Simcox was chosen to serve as vice-president of the FCC for the coming year, & will head its editorial board to oversee the publication of religious tracts and educational material. Mrs Dorothy A. Faber of Austin, Texas, editor of The Christian Challenge magazine, was elected secretary, and Capt Walter Swindells of Eureka Springs, Arkansas, managing editor of The Anglican Digest, will serve as treasurer. Other members of the Board of Directors include the Very Rev'd James Parker of Albany, Georgia, provincial vicar for North America of the Society of the Holy Cross; F. Andrew Stahl of Toronto, editor of Comment, a publication of the Canadian Council for the Faith; and the Right Rev'd Robert C. Harvey, Bishop of the Anglican Diocese of the Southwest.

EXCERPTS FROM THE FCC PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE — OUR activities since our last meeting are familiar to you all. There have been no major events such as the St Louis Congress in 1977 and the Dallas Synod in 1978. We have published the FCC NEWS EXCHANGE, we have made a beginning in the publication of Anglican material for education & propaganda, & we operated an exhibit at the Episcopal Church's General Convention in Denver last September.

You may want a word of comment on that. My wife and I had had much experience with exhibits at General Conventions in years past and we operated the one in Denver. We were able to distribute sound literature to deputies and visitors, and many people stopped to talk with us about the Fellowship -- what it stands for, what it does. Thus we were able to present our case to many who are troubled by prevailing trends in PECUSA and may want to check back with us later.

It has been a year and a quarter since our last annual meeting. There has been one interim meeting of the Directors, on October 17, in Indianapolis. At that meeting we voted a contribution of $3,000 to the legal defense fund of Ascension Church, Amherst, Virginia, which was duly made. We discussed also the question which today comes before us all for decision -- whether the Fellowship is to continue in being, and, if so, what changes if any need to be made in policy, program, and perhaps organizational structure. At the October meeting of the Directors there was an apparent majority feeling, not unanimous, that the FCC should plan to continue.

We have need to elect at least three new officers & to elect or re-elect a board of directors -- that is, if we choose to remain corporately alive. There seems to be no point in electing officers before we have made that decision.

Ralph Murphy has served the Fellowship from its beginning, and no organization could have had a more capable and devoted custodian of its resources. He asks that he be relieved of this task, and I have informed him that we shall do this. A resolution of appreciation and gratitude by the Fellowship will most surely be in order.

Mrs Nancy von Klemperer, who also has served the Fellowship from its beginning, as secretary, finds it necessary for personal reasons to retire from this office. She has done her work accurately and thoroughly, and has been a most faithful and helpful colleague. I thank her, for all of us.

I have informed you of my intention to resign the presidency at this meeting. I do this largely for personal reasons, and these do not include any feeling other than that of profound privilege and pleasure in having served for the past two years. And I hope that if the Fellowship continues I may continue in it as an individual member.

And now let us proceed to the business at hand.

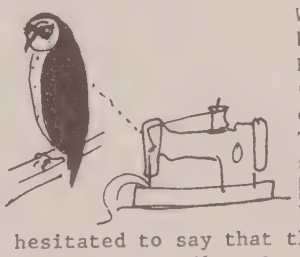
/s/ Carroll E. Simcox

ROBERT Condit Harvey, 64, a priest since 1956 (ordained by the VIII Bishop of Chicago), was, on the Feast of St Alphege, Archbishop of Canterbury, and Martyr, and in King of Glory Lutheran Church, Dallas, consecrated I Bishop of the Southwest. He was born, 9 February 1916, in East Orange, New Jersey, the son of Hamilton St John Harvey and Marion Elizabeth Condit Harvey. He was graduated from Dartmouth in 1938 & from Seabury-Western Theological Seminary in 1956; in 1962 he attended St Augustine's College, in England.

During World War II he commanded a destroyer in the Pacific. Before and after WWII (until he went to seminary), Bishop Harvey was in sales. He founded and was Executive Director (1971-74) of the Company of the Paraclete. A publisher (Canterbury Guild), he has written three books: The Holy Slice, The Restless Heart, and A House Divided. He is presently President of the Foundation for Christian Theology and a member of the Board of Directors of The Fellowship of Concerned Churchmen. He married Suzanne Elizabeth Falter in 1941 and they have four children. Bishop Harvey held cures in Illinois and New Jersey and at the time of his election was Rector of St Timothy's Charleston, South Carolina. He is now living in Austin, Texas, and is Rector of St Augustine's, Pflugerville.

PASS ALONG — HILLSPEAK's Operation Pass Along has the 5-volume An Outline of Christianity to pass along to a parish or diocesan library. The work was published in 1926 by Bethlehem Publishers, Inc, through Dodd, Mead. The "Directing Editors" were Burton Scott Easton, Professor of New Testament, GTS; John H. Finley, former Commissioner of Education of the State of New York; F. J. Foakes-Jackson, Professor of Christian Institutions, UTS; Shailer Matthews, Dean of the Divinity School of the University of Chicago; Francis J. McConnell, Methodist Bishop of Pittsburgh; and Ernest Findlay Scott, Professor of New Testament at UTS. The books appear to be in very good condition. They will be set aside for mailing to the first parish or diocese requesting them (which will be advised of the postage and handling charges, and upon receipt thereof will be sent the books). To put in your bid, write (Hillspeak, Eureka Springs, Arkansas 72632) or call (253-9701, ask for Captain Swindells). Do NOT send any money with your request; only the first request will be acknowledged -- and that promptly. We will let you know in NewsX which parish or diocese received the books.

Pass Along also has a good supply of 1928 Prayer Books. As always, books are passed along on a first-come, first served basis. If you want Prayer Books for your parish, write.



ON the Saturday in Easter Week and in Westboro United Church in Ottawa, Ontario, Canada, Carmino Joseph deCatanzaro was consecrated Bishop for the Anglican Catholic Church of Canada. He was graduated from King' College, Nova Scotia, in 1937, received the Bachelor of Divinity (1945) and Doctor of Philosophy (1957) degrees from Trinity College, Toronto. He was priested in 1942. From 1951 to 1965 he was at Seabury-Western Theological Seminary, Evanston, Illinois (Assistant Professor of Oriental Languages [1951-59] & Professor of Old Testament Literature & Languages [1959-65]). From 1972 until he resigned to come into the continuing Church, Bishop deCatanzaro was Rector of St Barnabas', Ottawa, and Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Ottawa. He is presently Rector of Annunciation, Ottawa.

UNIDLE THOUGHTS OF AN UNIDLE WOMAN — SUPPLEMENTS to the forms that someone brought home from St Louis: (1) Have an official morale builder, a one-man pep club appointed immediately in addition to senior and junior wardens. The responsibilities of this person are to wipe out all negativism within or outside the group; and to nip complaints before they are uttered. Many Anglicans do poorly without the "props" (vestments, sanctus bells, &c) and the MB (morale builder) must prop them up. If a family begins to complain about the long drive, MB must giggle and marvel at how Paul and Silas and Barnabas managed without autos -- and did they haul their vestments by camel or hope to find them waiting in Corinth? If someone starts to say how cold it is, MB must leap up and thank God that the wind isn't blowing. Got it? Some people will feel discouraged to see only 12 people, & MB is delighted because those 12 are all hearty, non-neurotic types who can take the heat.

(2) When meeting with groups or individuals still in PECUSA but wanting out and lacking decisiveness, it is a very poor idea to try to persuade them to join ACC. Episcopalians resist being pushed, pulled or evangelized. I am developing some skill in this in the last month;

(a) once I have their attention, I look every single person in the eye and say it would be very, very wrong to leave their parish so long as they have peace in the pews, and an utterly clear conscience as they make communion; that only when they squirm, try to pretend the 8 a.m. Rite I is the same theology they believe -- only then, can they leave. (Pretty soon at least one won't meet my eye.) I tell them how difficult life in ACC will be -- strange meeting places, borrowed clergy -- that the only beautiful thing we share is a clear conscience before God in our make-do surroundings. And on and on -- all of it true. Then, I stop and don't say a single word for a long time -- 10 slow seconds, 15 seconds (silence and pregnant pauses don't worry me). The first person to speak is the most convicted, and is also the real leader, regardless of who hosted the get-together;

(b) But that isn't all. That's just finding our people. I move right ahead and give everyone a job to help us, assuring them we don't want to upset their parish life, but since they are sympathetic would they mind . . . Then think of a suitable need whether you need it or not, because they need to help from the outside to feel welcome if they choose to leave PECUSA; also, if their consciences need relief.
(3) Find some way to get the names of the lapsed. Occasionally, the local priest will help (to show he's charitable).

OFFERED — A beautifully done "set" composed of: The Apostles' Creed: An Expository Paraphrase, a "Prayer for the Church", and a bookmark, all in an envelope to fit, by The Kingfisher (roosting mate of the Barn Owl). The booklet bears the foreword "having been first published in the Annotated Book of Common Prayer, edited by the Rev'd John Henry Blunt, M.A.,F.S.A., Rivington's, London, 1868, republished here by THE KINGFISHER, Eureka Springs, Arkansas, 1980". The "Prayer for the Church" is the Laudian version of the familiar one found on page 37 of the Prayer Book. The bookmark carries a particularly apt quotation: "It will be better in the next life for the ignorant if they have believed according to the measure of their knowledge, than for those who have known much, but have believed little."
A single set is $3.00; 5-9 sets, $2.40 each; 10 or more, $1.80 each. Postage and handling are included; send remittance with order to: The Kingfisher, Lake Watch, Route 1, Box 44, Eureka Springs, Arkansas 72632.

A NEW "basic listings" of Pilgrimage Publications is available for the asking. Send a #10, or larger, self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Pilgrimage Publications, POB 2015, Hot Springs, Arkansas 71901. Included in the listing are five sets of sermons, a nine-lesson course in "orthodox Christian faith, order and mission", a number of spiritual resources pamphlets, and the like.

A VARIETY of 1928 Prayer Books, large and small pew sizes, pocket sizes, and chancel edition, in a variety of bindings, is available from the Episcopal Bookshop, POB 18056, Louisville, Kentucky 40218. Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a current price list.

REQUESTS for Sermons for Lay Readers by Bishop Harvey are now to be sent to: The Right Rev'd Robert C. Harvey, POB 9993, Austin, Texas 78731, rather than the Charleston address listed in the April issue of NewsX. Also, Bishop Harvey's three books, published by The Canterbury Guild, The Holy Slice ($2.50), The Restless Heart ($4.50) & A House Divided ($2.50) may be ordered from the same address. Prices quoted include postage & handling.

THANKS — TO ALL of you who responded to the Editor's request for your feelings about continuance of the Fellowship and NewsX. A personal acknowledgement of each will be in the mail as soon as possible.

CIRCUIT RIDER'S REPORT — MY usual weekend schedule is to take an early train to Toronto Saturday morning, say Mass at St Anthony's at 11 a.m. We usually talk and eat for two hours afterwards. Then I go by bus to Peterborough for Bible study; stay overnight and say Mass at 8 a.m. Then some members of Holy Faith drive me to Cobourg for a 10:30 Mass at St Mary's. It sure makes the time pass. No priest ever had more wonderful and faithful friends.
[Editor's Note: The foregoing is not reported to point out an exceptional case, but rather to remind us all that this is the norm for our pastors. This letter to the Editor was not intended for publication but came in just at the right time to make the point.]

LETTER TO A BISHOP — I BELIEVE the "Subjectivity" of Priests & Parishes has curtailed the advancement of the Catholic Faith -- even to the extent in some cases of total ecclesiastical introversion.
I believe in a general, happy and loving discipline in the whole Church family.
I believe our impact on social discipline must be based on how we witness our Catholic Faith.
I believe a Congregation witnessing in family Eucharists, and, an acknowledgement of who they are, is essential to growth before there is concern for a building in which to worship.
I believe in a "Oneness" of Bishops and Clergy in the extension of the Kingdom.
I believe I have been through the mill enough to know life in order to be of real help to a congregation entrusted to me.
Now: I believe in episcopal direction but also in episcopal consultation with clergy and laity.
I believe in the Jesuit concept of material needs of clergy.
I believe in continuous outreach or perpetual Catholic evangelism even by informal invitation to come and see and share.
I believe in the Prayer Book as the modus operandi of worship and the private and corporate response of our Faith.
I believe in the proper liturgical observations, Catholic manual acts and the corresponding preaching of the Gospel of Christ.
I believe it is not easy for those who have followed Episcopalian traditions to forget "congregationalist" power.
[Editor's Note to Wardens and Vestrymen: The foregoing was written by a priest seeking a cure. If your beliefs and his are in agreement, write NewsX and I will put him in touch with you.]

HITHER & YON — FROM All Saints', Palatka, Florida: [We were] honored to have Bishop Frank R. Knutti & his wife on his first official visit at which time he confirmed two members of the congregation.
From Good Shepherd, Oklahoma City: (12 March) [we] will have a place to call home -- be it ever so humble . . . it will be ours for a while. As presented and voted upon at the parish meeting last Sunday, the building . . . will be the church home just as soon as it can be made ready for use. (19 March) Don't Miss All the Fun! Work on Good Shepherd's soon-to-be church home is progressing.
From Holy Cross, Webster, New York: I doubt that we can imagine the number of hours it has taken some of our men to plan and create the center aisle. . . Our thanks to the . . . hard working parishioners who spent many evenings and Saturdays at the church to complete this project.
From The Boston Stump: Several gifts have been received . . . All are most welcome. Truly, it is a lift to our spirits to know that we have friends. And, oh my! how we do need the money! The shoe string on which we operate has many a frazzled knot in it.
From The Advocate: A parish is truly blessed when God entrusts care and education of His little ones to it -- such is the case at St Alban's [State College, Pennsylvania]. On Quinquagesima Sunday morning, St Alban's Church School (or "Little Church" as its members call it) took a giant step forward. After the devotions the group divided into two classes. An instructional session for primary school children and intermediate grades is now our expanded educational offering.
From the Editor: Share your parish activities with others -- send your weekly bulletins or newsletters or whatever to NewsX.

FROM THE DIOCESES — RESURRECTION: The 1980 Annual meeting of the Diocesan Synod of the Diocese of the Resurrection will be held May 9 and 10 at our Lady of Fatima (R.C.) Retreat House in Elmhurst, Pennsylvania. . . The Synod . . . will be asked to give final ratification to the new Diocesan Constitution, to pass some Canons to implement some of its provisions, to elect a new Standing Committee and Ecclesiastical Court, to consider the Amendments forwarded from the Provincial Synod for action, and to consider such other business as may lawfully come before it.
MID-ATLANTIC: The Mite Box & Good Friday offerings given to the Diocese last Spring were sent to the Right Rev'd Robert Mercer, Bishop of Matabeleland, Rhodesia, who is a giant among the defenders of the faith.
HOLY TRINITY: The 1980 Synod of the Diocese . . . will be held May 7-10 in Albuquerque, New Mexico, hosted by St Peter's Anglican Catholic Church. Matters for consideration will include reception of new parishes, the election of members to the Standing Committee and Ecclesiastical Court, ratification of those portions of the Provincial Constitution previously provisionally ratified, action on amendments to permanent portions of the constitution, action on amendments to the diocesan canons, and the budget.
The Anglican Catholic Youth Conference will be held at Emerald Valley Ranch near Colorado Springs August 17-23.

OF YOUR Christian charity, pray for all our bishops, priests and deacons -- and for their safe travel.

FATHER FOLAND RETIRES

HOWARD Lane Foland, 71, self-styled "Assistant Janitor of Hillspeak" &, in later years, "Ogre of the Ozarks", retired at the end of April as Director of SPEAK and the Episcopal Book Club and as Editor of TAD. Priested in 1941, Father Foland will continue to live atop Grindstone Mountain at his beloved Hillspeak, the former Silver Cloud Ranch and "choice piece of Ozark real estate" to which he moved 20 years ago on St Mark's Day, after the burgeoning book club and TAD became too large for their quarters at the back of All Saints' Rectory in Nevada, Missouri.

In the acquisition of land for Hillspeak, in the selection of "books-of-the-seasons" for EBC, in the editing of The Anglican Digest, and in implementing Operation Pass Along, the peculiar genius that is Father Foland's has left its mark.

A Kansan by birth and, in later life, completely adverse to stirring off his mountaintop, he gained first-hand knowledge of the country when in his youth he traveled the nation (from Wyoming to Florida) with his parents. It was in Columbus, Mississippi, while he was working on a railroad survey crew, that he "found the Church". He studied architecture at Washington University in St Louis and "flunked everything but swimming", and then went on to win scholastic honors in English at Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio; was graduated cum laude. His seminary was Seabury-Western, which awarded him an honorary doctorate in divinity in 1965. Eight years later, the Episcopal Theological Seminary in Kentucky, at Lexington, awarded him an honorary Doctor of Letters. In between those two, the American Church Union voted him its annual Keble Award "in recognition of distinguished service to God and the Church."

He was a founding member & director of the Fellowship and saw it through to its St Louis Congress in 1977 (which he attended despite his reluctance to leave Hillspeak).

Father Foland has been described as "that rarest of men: a visionary who specializes in making dreams come true."

Today, as he sits in his study in the big white farmhouse atop Grindstone Mountain, with its view "plumb to Missouri", he can see that some of those dreams -EBC, TAD, Pass Along, Hillspeak itself- have come true, and that the others are a lot closer to fruition than if there had not been a Howard Lane Foland, priest and defender of the Faith, hard-working servant of the Church.

"FCC PRESS"

WHAT amounted to the establishment of the "FCC Press", but without such a formal designation, came out of the Fellowship's deliberations at its annual meeting in New Smyrna Beach, Florida, in April. The Rev'd Dr Carroll E. Simcox, retired Editor of The Living Church & two-term president of FCC was designated its Editor and Capt W. R. Swindells, Managing Editor of The Anglican Digest & two-term "veep" of FCC, was named Managing Editor. Presently, three pamphlets, a sermon series (initiated by the Bishop of the Southwest), and NEWS EXCHANGE are products of the "press". Steps were taken at the meeting to add other educational materials to the inventory as soon as they can be written and published.

For the present, FCC offers Dr Simcox's pamphlet on the Prayer Book revision, Death by a Thousand Cuts, or "What Are They Doing to Your Prayer Book?" (now in its third printing); Bishop Robert C. Harvey's pamphlet on the ordination of women, Witchcraft, Priestesses & the Domino Effect; Opening Addresses of the Church Congress (St Louis, September 1977, somewhat dated but a publication every sound Churchman should have as part of his library of the continuing Church); NEWS EXCHANGE, and, most recently, the Harvey Sermon Series.

To order any or all of these publications, fill in the order blank (or, if you don't want to cut up your copy of NewsX, make out your own order) and send it with your remittance to: FCC, POB 252, Eureka Springs, AR 72632.

OFFERED

BY the Anglican Advancement Fund - a taped series, The Anglican Hour. The series starts with an address by Mr Perry Laukhuff on what the Anglican Catholic Church is, and goes on to deal with each of the 12 articles of the Apostles' Creed. Each program is by a different ACC bishop, priest or lay reader. Tapes, either cassette or monaural reel-to-reel, are $10 each; cassettes cover two full programs (thirty minutes each side); reel-to-reel tapes cover one program. Sample copies are available to parish, and other, organizations. Send inquiries & orders to: The Anglican Advancement Fund, POB 1204, Abingdon, VA 24210, and make your remittance payable to the Fund.

BY a Virginia craftsman - "a thoroughly handsome altar cross, of my original design, executed in walnut, which awaits application of the wood finish. Should there be a church group forming, in need of the cross, it will cost them exactly $1.00, plus shipping, and the reason therefor is so that it can be made a memorial . . ." To request the cross and to inquire about other "liturgical furnishings", write: Mr Tom E. Moore, 6105 Brandon Av, Springfield, VA 22150.

BY The Canterbury Guild, POB 9993, Austin, TX 78766: Bishop Robert Harvey's The Holy Slice and A House Divided. Both books are priced at $1.95 each (2 for $3.50), postpaid; and both are available, postpaid, for one dollar each in lots of 10 or more. NewsX is advised that there are a good number available, but a reprinting is not contemplated. Good solid material to give to Episcopalians to help them make up their minds.

BY Mrs Berenice Reed, 3116 S Joplin Ct, Aurora, CO 80013: The Mass, An Anglican Catholic Prayer Book for Children, $2.50 each (see April NewsX for description).

BY Hillspeak's Operation Pass Along: used 1928 Prayer Books. Send your request to: Operation Pass Along, Hillspeak, Eureka Springs, AR 72632; you will be advised of postage and handling charges.

HITHER & YON

FATHER John Bruce Medaris, SSC, Rector of the Church of the Incarnation, Orlando, Florida, has been named "Archdeacon of the East, American Jurisdiction" by Bishop Pagtakhan (Philippine Independent Church) . . . Nine parishes in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Virginia and North Carolina chose Father Medaris as their leader as they withdrew from the Diocese of the Southeast.

BISHOP C. Dale David Doren, Ordinary of the Diocese of the Mid-Atlantic States, has been received into the Sovereign Order of St John of Jerusalem, Knights Hospitaller, as a Prelate in the Grand Priory of America; Fr Maurice H. Freemyer, Rector of St Anthony's Church, San Antonio, Texas, has been appointed Chaplain-General for the Grand Priory of America; and Frs Albert J. du Bois, Senior Priest of the Pro-Diocese of St Augustine of Canterbury, and David Marion-Davis, Rector of St Margaret's, Houston, Texas, have been received as Chaplains.

FROM The Mail Tribune, Medford, Oregon: Fr Will Augsburger manages several careers at the same time. He's an Anglican priest, a registered nurse and administrator of a nursing home in Bandon. His work with the Anglican Church covers four parishes. As a result he travels 600 miles each Sunday, starting with a 7 a.m. Mass in the chapel of St Alban's Home in Bandon. He arrives at St Andrew's in Jacksonville in time for an 11 a.m. Mass & manages to be in Arcata, California, for the 5 p.m. Mass with a stop for lunch in between. His fourth parish in Brookings is under charge of a deacon, but Augsberger sometimes helps out.

FROM The New Tidings (St Andrew's, Tallahassee, Florida) we learn that St Timothy's, Charleston, South Carolina, voted to join the Anglican Catholic Church by 59 to 9.

NEWSX FEEDBACK

THE unbound Anglican Missal, offered in the April issue went to the Church of the Holy Apostles, Glendale, California. According to a report from its donor, it will be bound and "we will see that some needy priest gets it." The Outline of Christianity set was passed along to St Joseph of Arimathea Seminary in Berkeley, California. [Note to those who requested the Missal or "Outline": Your names have been given to Pass Along to add to its request file for the items.]

THE response to the census form was good, but not complete. As soon as the ME has a chance to draw a really deep breath, he will tabulate, and report, the results. Meanwhile, if you've not sent yours in, check the April issue (An Idea Whose Time Has Come - yes, I've been corrected, thank you) & send the information.

A PROPOSAL TO ALL CONTINUING ANGLICANS

WE AGREE: That we are in communion with one another and with all who accept the Affirmation of St Louis as also with all other faithful Anglicans and Catholics. We have in mind those Provinces which have not adopted uncatholic changes, and other Catholic bodies.

That we will refrain from public criticism of the bishops, priests and laity of the other group, and will use our influence to restrain others in doing so.

That all priests and congregations be free to come under the bishops and dioceses of either group.

That as far as possible we avoid establishing parishes in close proximity to those of the other group.

That it is understood that the priests and laity of one group are welcome at the altars of the other group.

Our purpose is to remove the scandal of division which is keeping priests and laity from joining us. We hope this may be a first step toward further unity and that our agreement may be published in such of the media as is available to us. ---Father R. F. Palmer, S.S.J.E., Anglican Catholic Church of Canada

BASED on the work of Leland Hilligoss, a parishioner of Holy Apostles in St Louis, the College of Bishops has adopted a shield & flag for the Anglican Catholic Church. In the medieval vocabulary that heraldry still uses, the arms are blazoned [described]: Argent, a quarter azure, over all a cross gules, in canton, a key, ward up and to the sinister, in bend sinister, surmounted by a crozier, crook up and to the dexter, in bend, both argent." Both for the shield and for the flag . . . the colors and their arrangement are the same as on the shield and flag of [the Church of our former obedience]. St George's cross, red on white, is retained, and the crozier and key in saltire, white on blue, preserve the allusion to Scotland whence came the orders of the American Church.

The key & crozier, with the key on the dexter and the crozier on the sinister, were in the arms of Bishop Seabury. The crozier & key, arranged as we have them, are the upper half of the arms of the See of Nova Scotia, the first in Canada. Nova Scotia's is the usual Anglican arrangement; Seabury probably reversed the positions accidentally. However, Seabury's arrangement is preserved on the reverse of the flag, since a device that is toward dexter on a shield is toward the staff on a flag.

The patterns of crozier & key and the shape of the shield may vary at the discretion of each artist, but the positions and colors may not.

A provincial shield will not include a mitre. That element in a shield suggests that it is personal (and that the person involved is a bishop). ---The Courier

ACC's HOLYROOD SEMINARY

THE site of Holyrood Seminary is about two miles from the center of the Village of Liberty [New York] in a small hamlet known as Loomis. The former privately-owned doctors' hospital which will soon be converted into classrooms, a chapel, library, dining room, kitchen and student bedrooms (as well as guest rooms for visiting lecturers and bishops), was built about 60 years ago as a fresh air sanitarium for wealthy New York City residents suffering from TB. Almost all the homes in the hamlet were built during the same period to provide rather posh housing for the professional staff.

About 30 years ago the sanitarium became a medical hospital, offering quality personal care for both short and long term patients - and a very large number of the young people throughout the county still point with pride to the place of their birth.

Two years ago a larger, partially state-financed hospital opened and pressure from the State to close Liberty-Loomis Hospital proved successful. The building has remained unused since then. Much work awaits. Remaining hospital equipment must be sold. Some partitions must be removed to make better use of space. Interior and exterior painting must be done. A kitchen, suitable for a seminary, must be equipped. A dining room and student lounges and classrooms must be prepared & finished. Student rooms must be readied. A library must be outfitted with shelving and furniture, and book donations must be sought vigorously.

The huge furnaces, the electrical, plumbing and sprinkler systems must all be made operable again. Fire & smoke alarms must be checked & fire equipment made usable for emergencies. Drapes must be made, and carpeting and tile put down. Landscaping, especially along the large front circular drive, must be redesigned and improved. Gutters & leaders must be checked. Insulation and new combination storms and screens must be installed. In the 12 to 14 wooded acres behind the seminary building, some well-planned cutting and trimming must be done. In time, it is hoped that those woods will provide the site of a summer youth camp with a pool and cabins and whatever rustic buildings are needed to provide an enjoyable and educational summer for Anglican youth.

Near the main building, just to the right of the circular drive, is a sturdy six-unit apartment building; each unit consists of a three-room apartment. It once provided nurses' quarters since many of the nurses came from Australia, England and South Africa. If this building also can be bought, it will provide housing for either married students or visiting faculty.

Anglicans throughout the United States must be sacrificially generous if all that is to come to pass. Despite the fact that so many congregations are struggling to find the means to buy or build church buildings, and to meet current expenses, few Anglicans, if any, will fail to realize the importance of having an Anglican seminary where postulants for Holy Orders can be assured of a solid academic and spiritual preparation of Anglican teaching, scholarship and worship so that they may serve the Church in keeping with full Anglican tradition and heritage. [Editor's Note: Accompanying the news release from Fr Richard A. Stevens, Seminary Coordinator, was a letter calling attention to a Whitsunday appeal for funds. The release and letter reached NEWS EXCHANGE much too late to meet that date, but Holyrood, like Rome, will not be built in a day; there will be a continuing need for contributions. Send your contributions to the Anglican Seminary Fund, Holyrood Seminary, POB 707, Liberty, NY 12754. Says Father Stevens, "Gifts are tax deductible and will most certainly be accepted at any time."]

PARISH PROGRESS REPORT

FROM St Augustine's, Pflugerville, Texas: No doubt you've noticed the very fine wall-to-wall carpeting which now covers the nave of our rustic little cathedral. For that exceedingly generous gift, we are greatly indebted to an anonymous donor. Equally striking, you may have also noted the impressive concrete work done by Ross Sterzing and friends earlier this month which produced our new front steps and walkways. With the plantings and the new concrete work, our west end is undergoing a vast improvement.

WHERE DO YOU MEET?

WE have been aware for a long time of some seemingly incongruous meeting places for Anglican congregations, both by report and through actual participation. We've worshipped with fellow Anglicans in funeral home chapels, in a rural Methodist church, in a hobbyshop, in the "catacombs" of an AHEPA meeting hall, & we have had reports of meetings in a ballet practice room, in schoolhouses, in 7th Day Adventist churches, in a barn, and many others. Somehow, neither the actual experience nor the reports sank in until we started looking for a meeting place ourselves. It came down to the ready room of a fire station (to which we were most welcome, but warned that when an alarm came in, all hell broke loose - not really conducive to quiet, dignified Anglican worship) or the lower floor of a day nursery school in which all the furniture is 1/3, or thereabouts, size. We chose the peewee furniture over the fire alarm, but that inspired us to write this little piece and invite you to tell us where you are meeting or have met. Just drop us a line or two (a postcard always does nicely and costs a third less). We'll print some of the more interesting reports in subsequent issues of NEWS EXCHANGE.

FATHER's COGITATIONS

UNDER that somewhat intriguing title in the latest issue of the newsletter from the Church of St Dunstan, Minneapolis, comes the following:

My dear Family: There is much confusion today concerning what kind of service should be held each Sunday within a parish of the Anglican Catholic Church. Because of the importance of the matter, this month's cogitation will be devoted exclusively to that subject.

The Canons of our Church are quite explicit in this area, albeit somewhat confusing to any not familiar with the history of the worship of the Church. Perhaps a good place to begin would be to reacquaint ourselves with the canons involved.

Title XII, Canons 1.01, 1.02, 2 & 3 state that it is the duty of every Bishop, Priest and Deacon to say the Office of daily Morning and Evening Prayer. And further, where possible, such should be done so that the congregation may pray with him. In addition, those canons state that the clergy are bound to celebrate, assist in, or participate in the Celebration of Holy Communion on every Sunday & other day for which a Collect, Epistle and Gospel are provided in the Book of Common Prayer.

Title XVIII, Canon 2, states that every Baptized member of the Church shall pray daily, read Holy Scripture regularly, & attend Divine Service regularly on the Lord's Day, and on other days of obligation (excepting sickness or other unavoidable cause), and resort to the Sacrament of the Body & Blood of Christ (when confirmed) when the same may be had. Canon 2 further states that "The Holy Communion is the chief act of Christian worship. On the Lord's Day and on every other day for which Collect, Epistle and Gospel are provided in the Book of Common Prayer, it shall be the duty of every Priest in charge of a congregation to see that this Sacrament is administered at the time & place at which the greater part of the congregation may conveniently attend."

A paraphrase of the above might read as follows:It is required that Morning & Evening Prayer will be said daily (including Sunday), and the Eucharist will be celebrated every time there appears a proper Collect, Epistle & Gospel in the Book of Common Prayer. Further, it is expected that the congregation will attend the Offices of Morning and Evening Prayer (or read them in the privacy of their homes if unable to attend), and it is required that all attend the Celebration of Holy Communion whenever offered.

(To be concluded next month)

Pray, brethren, for all our traveling pastors.

JUL 31 1980

THE BOARD of Directors of FCC at its annual meeting directed that the format of the Directory be so changed that it would be evident which congregations are formally a part of the Anglican Catholic Church and which are not. To the best of the Editor's ability to cut through the ofttimes confusing and sometimes contradictory reports that come into his cell, he has done just that. There are three groups: 1) those congregations that appear to have a formal tie with the ACC in the United States; 2) those that appear to have such a tie with the Anglican Catholic Church of Canada; and 3) all others which have requested listing in FCC's Directory. No diocesan affiliations are given. Sadly, no meeting information is given, despite repeated requests, because that which is available to the Editor is neither up-to-date nor complete. The information is a point of entry - the minimum necessary to enable a traveler or a new resident to find a continuing church.
Your help in correcting and refining the list is solcited.

THEOLOGICAL UNION

Dear Friends in Mission:

INSTITUTIONS MOVING FOR DEVELOPMENT

Many of our church-related schools, colleges and medical facilities are having to make a basic move--from mission support to autonomy and self-support.

Are they simply being cut loose...left to sink or swim by the big mission agencies?

No. Investigation shows solid programs by National Missions and COEMAR on behalf of these institutions...major efforts to help them develop self-support and grow in service.

Look at these church-related institutions in two ways:

First, they were created in mission, to meet deep--sometimes desperate--human needs.

Schools, colleges and hospitals had to be created from scratch in early America--and the churches played a leading role...fostered such major institutions as Princeton University and Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center in New York...plus hundreds of smaller institutions. Even when public and private funding moved in, some special areas of need remained untouched--for instance, among freed slaves in the South after the Civil War...on Indian reservations...in isolated parts of Appalachia...with Spanish-speaking people in the Southwest...and other minorities.

The picture is somewhat similar overseas, though on different timetables. The churches created 80% of the education and medical facilities in Africa south of the Sahara, and a significant share of the same in parts of Asia and Latin America.

Second, there comes a time when direct mission support and control hampers the real nature and growth of institutions. ...They've become established and need to become self-developing, and the mission of the church needs to swing more of its resources into today's areas of most urgent need--for mission aims to permeate society with the spirit of Christ...making it possible for society through its institutions to meet some needs that mission has pointed out. The trend today involves a number of institutions related to National Missions and COEMAR moving out on their own. Some quick examples:

Latin America

In this area alone, your efforts through COEMAR were largely responsible for one hospital in Mexico and two in Brazil, nineteen secondary schools in Mexico, Brazil, Guatemala, Colombia and Venezuela, dozens of primary schools, and one university--Mackenzie Institute in Brazil, now over 100 years old.

The 1960s began with COEMAR playing a strong role in the funding and direction of these institutions...the 1970s have begun with these same institutions largely independent from COEMAR...finding indigenous bases of support...taking some new directions. Some receive no financial help from COEMAR, and others get modest aid--a top of $8,000 for all Colombian Presbyterian schools. Each situation is considered individually.

The shift was made with specific programs for development and indigenous responsibility...difficult and painful at times...and some issues are still under discussion.

Does this mean an end to COEMAR relationships with these institutions, and others moving on the same course--in Asia, for instance?

In most cases, definitely not. Look for new patterns...greater freedom on both sides...partnership in educational ventures in mission.

The U.S.A.

Not such a different picture emerging here between National Missions and seventeen institutions it has strongly funded and guided. Self-development will be painful...difficult...for some of these schools, colleges and medical facilities. But National Missions has embarked on a strong, three year program to help them determine their future.

The program includes special funding to get development started...creation of local boards of trustees...help in finding new bases for funding ...transfer of property titles from National Missions to the new boards ...closer relationship with synod mission strategy and administration... reevaluation of programs and stronger local and regional involvement.

Examples

Presbyterian Medical Services of the Southwest, Inc., serves mainly rural, low income residents with three clinics, and Embudo, Holy Cross and Guadalupe General Hospitals...is moving ahead with fund development with special aid from National Missions. This year it received $917,000 from the O.E.O for comprehensive health services in a three-county area... receives limited grants for a health development program with Indians... is finding new support from mine workers, service clubs and high school volunteers...is nationally recognized as a pioneer in planning regional health care and services.

Mary Holmes College in Mississippi has reduced its anticipated deficit this year from $300,000 to $120,000 through improved local administration and a better use of facilities...and next year will receive additional aid to students under a federal program.

Wabash Academy in Utah received three modest grants from area foundations late last year...is moving ahead confidently with development plans.

These are some quick highlights, with the institutions moving at somewhat different speeds, with varied plans. ...Now, what next for mission...what are the areas of most urgent need? Don't expect dramatic shifts...but look for pioneering efforts in the same fields of health and education--where people are hurting the most, such as students nobody else is serving, dropouts with potential, adults with limited employment seeking new careers, the mentally retarded...and many others.

EVANGELISM CONTINUES

"Rejoice with us, for many have found their freedom in Christ," a correspondent writes from Miraj, India. The Miraj Christian Church, a congregation started with 20 members, has grown to 2,000 in 75 years--and recently celebrated this anniversary---joyful experience, refreshed commitment--and 112 persons made initial commitments to Christ, helped by the preaching of the Rev. Dr. K. C. Han, a guest for the occasion. Dr. Han is pastor of the largest Presbyterian Church in the world, Young Nak Presbyterian Church in Seoul, Korea, with nearly 8,000 members ...a church that has helped to generate 73 more self-supporting churches. The churches in Miraj and Seoul provide a couple of examples of church development fostered by your mission agencies at home and overseas.

SHOWING THE MISSION

Here's one way to inform church members about mission--developed at the United Presbyterian Church in the Pleasant Hills Community of Pittsburgh, Pa. This church held a world mission fair. Various groups in the church researched nations and U.S.A. localities where the church is working, and what it is doing in mission...and pulled their information, photos and objects together...created a display describing and illustrating the mission of the church around the world.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY, MAY 17-26

Get ready for the headlines...General Assembly is coming later this month in Rochester, N.Y. and actions will probably be taken on some controversial subjects, such as the arms race...environmental problems...income maintenance...health care and perhaps other subjects. When General Assembly considers and votes on such matters, it does so as the highest judicatory of the church: representatives of all presbyteries selecting the most pressing causes...hearing all points of view on Christian responsibility in today's world, including the views of youth delegates...plus testimony from qualified experts on all...and adopting a position--NOT speaking "for all United Presbyterians"...but perhaps to all.

The General Assembly does govern its agencies, guide their policies. For instance, the Assembly can establish guidelines for agency investments...and it can pull the agencies apart and reorganize them--and it is expected to do both this year, after much careful planning.

Look for a General Assembly interpretation week in all presbyteries in June--details from your synod or presbytery office, or the Council on Church Support.

CHURCH WITNESSES IN CUBA

Don't write off Cuba. It may be lost to some causes...but not to the church, which is free in worship and personal witness, and is growing stronger. The first complete statistics on the Presbyterian Reformed Church of Cuba since the revolution were recently published (for 1970). They show 52 churches with 8,872 baptized members...among them 200 ruling elders and 184 deacons.

Many Cuban church men and women are active in both building the new society and in personal Christian witness--some pastors and seminarians working side by side with communist cadres in harvesting sugarcane and other tasks. What next in Cuba? No sign of a crackdown on churches by the Cuban government...emerging desire by some U.S.A. Christians for better relations with their brothers in Christ in Cuba- fostering understanding for this. President Nixon's official smile on China during the Ping-Pong matches--a preface for something toward Cuba? Just maybe... though a lot of problems remain. But you can expect to hear more on Cuba, notably from some church people and young people, pressing key questions of U.S.-Cuban relationships.

LATE THEOLOGICAL

Dear Friends in Mission:

GENERAL ASSEMBLY

The reports are filed and the headlines half forgotten...but a lot more than headlines happened in Rochester, May 17-26. Look at this Assembly for its significance for mission...trends and developments.

Reports

Sign of the future-- National Missions and COEMAR reporting together... separate reports, plus a single report covering their several joint operations, commended by Assembly-- which highlighted the voluntary service program, with its 6,000 volunteers at home and overseas last year making it second only to the Peace Corps and Vista in size (see December newsletter)...and note the amount of work contributed to mission by volunteers-- about a million hours in 1970. ...Assembly also endorsed other work we've kept you in touch with-- some highlights:

COEMAR

Strong support given to COEMAR's continuing attention to evangelism, and its attention to self-development...both stressed, not one at the expense of another...seems an indicator of things to come.

The approval for evangelism includes working with other churches in evangelistic outreach. ...And the approval for self-development calls for an end to any "dependency relationships with indigenous churches and institutions"...plus personnel assignments of more limited duration...and priority given to cooperative and ecumenical programming.

National Missions

Allocations approved-- from a special "seed fund" of $100,000 (authorized by the 1969 Assembly) for Indian-Americans...money given to 37 projects selected by Indian groups themselves-- includes continuing education for Indian pastors...various development efforts...work with youth...programs combating drug addiction and alcoholism.

Support also given-- for helping to fund programs validated and operated by the leadership of La Nueva Raza among Hispanic-Americans...plus a big one that we reported earlier: a spectacular push during 1970 in church extension...227 new or existing congregations receiving $8,993,459 in loans or grants to aid their development.

Reorganized

Mission will be combined in one agency. The Assembly approved restructuring-- bringing mission and education together in one agency, creating others for service and support...and forging a strong Mission Council for central administration. ...See Presbyterian Life for more about this...and we'll have some details as it shapes up.

Ecumenism

Strong support for unity in mission...significant, in view of recent criticisms of Consultation on Church Union and the draft plan for union, now under study...whole matter debated thoroughly at Assembly, which then voted by a strong majority for continued study of the plan and participation in the talks.

Also strong support shown for merger efforts with Presbyterian Church U.S. (Southern)...Assembly receiving a draft plan of reunion for study, and extending the timetable by a year-- reason: time for black and minority concerns to be developed...and a task force was mandated for this. New target date: comments on the draft plan by Jan. 15, 1973.

Evangelism

A ground swell favoring increased emphasis...seems significant...can't guage the dimensions as yet. Some indicators:

The Assembly called for a larger, more comprehensive plan of evangelism to be brought back next year. ...There were various attempts to amend reports with more emphasis on evangelism-- for instance; Assembly voted that the National Presbyterian Church and Center should have an evangelist "to work the streets of Washington with particular attention to youth." ...Also, events featuring evangelism or evangelical speakers-- breakfasts, lunches, seminars-- all heavily attended.

Evangelism: New Mix

Be alert for a new mix emerging...at least, new in our time-- fairly evident at Assembly: the combination of a strong, personal, evangelical faith with a strong social conscience-- for instance; about ending the war and about injustice at home-- clearly exemplified by evangelist Tom Skinner in his talk to Presbyterians United for Biblical Concerns... also evident among a number of the young people present at Assembly-- Youth Advisory Delegates, and members of the Presbyterian Liberation Front, a new group of youths sometimes called "Jesus freaks."

Development

Here's one that carries a lot of financial freight-- not widely publicized-- the Assembly voted to raise $70 million in the next nine years for the self-development of people. ...And the National Committee on the Self-Development of People reported that it is about to allocate $900,000 to 14 projects, with final approval contingent upon on-site visits to the projects late in June, if all goes well. One Great Hour of Sharing will continue as one fund raising channel...monies are still coming in.

Women

Emphasis on women...definitely there...maybe symbolized in the election of Mrs. Ralph M. (Lois) Stair of Waukesha, Wis., as Moderator (hard fought...three ballots...with runner-up John Peters named Vice-Moderator, an unusual gesture)...but emphasis went deeper than this...reports and informal talks showing concern for equality of women in church and society. ...And here's one to watch: Assembly resolution calling for "fair representation" of women on decision-making bodies of the church.

Community Organizing

Here's another one...very important...no headlines at all: Work in grass roots, community organization in places around the world. Expect this to increase. A special evening event, using films keyed to personal narrations, showed community organization working among squatters in Manila and Nairobi, among blacks in Rochester, among Mexican-American farm workers, and among suburbanites in the Minneapolis area. ...The presentations indicated that organized efforts for self-determination can get results and provide human dignity where poverty, injustice and unresponsive governments exist.

The role of the church? Low key...it can act as an enabler, provide some initial funding and inspiration. Both National Missions and COEMAR are involved in such work...will do more.

Expressions

The Assembly voted to express itself as follows, the highest judicatory speaking to (not for) the church as a whole:

Get the troops out of Indochina by the end of the year...deliver health care effectively to all people, regardless of race, etc.-- or ability to pay...clean up the environment with effective programs, not superficial treatments...work to limit armaments and reduce their sale...provide churches with a balanced view of recent events in Chile, including the positive objectives of the socialist government elected democratically...

Also, bring investments into line with social conscience and policies... a bellweather here was the dispute with Gulf Oil (see April Newsletter), with the church picking up nearly 2 million votes but still losing this round emphatically. ...And there was the long-debated headliner, the $10,000 given to help defend Angela Davis from a fund mandated by last year's Assembly-- not a dime of it from your mission dollar. ...Full background on this one has been sent to all pastors.

Challenge

The church should carry on with the struggle for civil rights-- this plea coming from Arthur A. Fletcher, Assistant Secretary of Labor and the ranking black person in the Nixon administration. Mr. Fletcher, addressing the Assembly, said that the civil rights movement "didn't really get started until the church got involved"...and he urged the church to continue in a strong role. ...Mr. Fletcher is responsible for enforcing prohibitions against discrimination by government contractors.

Dimension

Fraternal delegates and visitors from overseas brought dimension to the Assembly with comments on their own churches...a couple of themes: struggle for identity-- taking different forms. ...In the Americas, trying to achieve selfhood in the shadow of U.S. power...in South Africa, the problem of institutional independence under apartheid laws...in Ethiopia, the need for help so the church can stand on its own feet. ...

Another theme, service: highlighted particularly by a delegate from the Reformed Church in France-- pointing out that his nation lost her Vietnam war and her empire, and as a result, the church in France has been freed from entanglements in power...and is better able to serve people.

Revival

"We are in the midst of a tremendous revival of interest in religion," Mrs. Cynthia Wedel, head of the National Council of Churches, told the assembly in a brief address. She said the revival includes "all kinds of people"...hasn't awakened interest in religious institutions, but that these institutions are restructuring-- and, "in the next ten years, I believe, we are going to see the institutional church change and come alive as it hasn't perhaps since the first century."

Celebration

Commissioners and long-haired youths and many guests, nearly 9,000 strong, were held together by the soaring strains of the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra as visions of sunlight breaking through barbed wire flashed on a movie screen with a crescendo of sound, then dwindled to tenderness with a vision of deep flowing seas-- "Oh Jesus," someone breathed softly. This, too, was General Assembly.

Dear Friends in Mission:

CHANGING PICTURE

Be alert for change...new kinds of growth...phaseouts and beginnings--and differing styles in the worldwide mission of the church...this is what is happening.

A lot came into focus in Chicago--at a late summer conference of furloughed missionaries and fraternal workers, held under the auspices of COEMAR--with some synod executives and Christians from overseas also participating. Hope streaked with pain--the general mood of the Conference.

Selfhood and development--these notes sounded strongly...some examples:

From Thailand: "Self-development of peoples suggests that the mission (fraternal workers and COEMAR structures) empty themselves to become servants. Now to empty oneself does not mean to become lifeless and give up all skills and knowledge. It does suggest, however, the giving up of power and authority--to become weak that others may become strong." Also, word comes that some young Christian leaders in Thailand are bucking for a phaseout of missionary support...they admit that most church leaders want to keep the support, and phaseout would be painful ...but feel the struggling Thai church should stand on its own feet... and a Presbyterian fraternal worker in Thailand describes his role: "to listen, learn, and then to share," not to "lead, direct and tell."

From Mexico: "Some of the most sensitive of the Third World people are saying to us: 'The principal problem for our countries is the United States and Western imperialism. The focus of our problem is in the U.S.A.'" In religious terms, this would mean Western mission structures dominating an indigenous church--which COEMAR has been trying to breakout of. For example: The National Presbyterian Church of Mexico will gain complete financial autonomy by the end of 1972... and this is a "time of celebration," according to a statement released by 25 Presbyterian and Reformed missionaries in Mexico.

Yet complaints about religious imperialism persist--were voiced strongly by a group of Asians at Chicago, and were also described in a toughly worded paper from East Africa, making this point: "By trying to preach a colonial gospel in the post-colonial era, the church deprives the African era of its own good news."...Contrast: The good news is certainly getting through on this continent, increasingly along African lines...because Christian affiliation on the continent south of the Sahara has grown from 34 million in 1950 to 75 million in 1965, and now is edging 100 million...thus giving Christianity a powerful, non-western base. ...Expect some jolts from this--for instance, an indigenous African theology is in the making, and may well include a clear emphasis on liberation...and a number of Christians are already involved in liberation movements in Africa.

Mission Stance

What is the stance of COEMAR in overseas mission? Basically, a desire for partnership--for related churches to be truly indigenous... self-reliant...self-determining--not bowing to missionaries, but working with them to find new areas where fellow Christians can cooperate in witness and service. ...In short, COEMAR wants to establish with each sister church a relationship of trust, sharing and mutual effort--not domination.

Financial Reality

The word is out--COEMAR must cut its budget by some $3 million in the next two years, due to reduced giving to the national and international mission efforts of the church. This means reducing the missionary force by 220 in the next two years--some 100 by end of overseas terms or retirement...and another 120 will be relocated in other employment, hopefully related to mission and probably in the U.S.A.--with COEMAR helping in the relocation. ... In COEMAR offices, expect substantial cutbacks in operational costs and personnel.

This was part of the change and struggle people felt at Chicago--where they also saw opportunities: for instance, for more work volunteers and more self-reliance by churches overseas. ...Also, there'll be a sharper focus upon COEMAR priorities: Spreading the gospel and gathering communities of believers...helping them to enhance their selfhood and effectiveness...helping Christians to participate in God's redeeming action for the oppressed, poor and needy...and helping Christians to express their common unity in Jesus Christ and work for the unity of mankind. These will receive top COEMAR attention...expect cuts in other areas--yet that is only part of the story...because, as you read this, COEMAR is stepping up discussions with churches in other lands to learn their major goals and to find common areas where they can share in Christian mission.

Around the U.S.A.--also a lot of rethinking...not only financing in the national program, but also the key question of how mission planning and decision-making are distributed--nationally, regionally, locally--and how the money is channeled. These and related questions were examined in depth at a special conference in Cleveland in mid-September ...too late for our deadline. The conference involved executives of judicatories and national agencies--focused on mission planning, areas of responsibility and money flow during this period of transition... this time when national agencies and synods are both moving into reorganization. Will keep you advised as a picture emerges.

CHURCH DEVELOPMENT

Work in church development related to National Missions and COEMAR continues moving strongly ahead. ...Special evangelism programs going well in Korea, the Philippines, Egypt and Cameroun. ...National Missions averages about 30 new church starts a year in its regular program --plus a lot of strength flowing from special funds in its Division of Church Building Aid...which last year, for instance, loaned or granted $8.9 million to new or existing churches to aid their development.

Examples:

Here are a couple of recent examples, culled from many...and both have funding help from National Missions.

Texas

In northwest Houston, Texas, a united effort is going forward with Southern Presbyterians to forge a ministry in the Champions area--mainly to families related to headquarters of major oil companies, with many of these families being recent arrivals. Those developing a new congregation are trying to find a way to shed some light on this ministry from overseas nations where the oil companies have major involvements.

Washington

In Olympia, Washington, United Presbyterians are joining with the United Church of Christ to develop a new Christian community--cross-cultural, and especially related to the new college in the Cooper Point area.

Korea

The Presbyterian Church of Korea is moving strongly ahead with its evangelism program leading up to its 100th General Assembly in 1972. It's a multi-level thrust--in rural areas, among students, among servicemen, industrial workers and prisoners, among children, and also to people on the fringes of society, such as street girls and shoe shine boys. Goal: The Korean Presbyterian Church, in conjunction with sister churches, hopes to double the number of Christians in Korea.

INTERNATIONALIZATION

Here's a small piece of news, important as an indicator: A pastor and five young people from Novi Sad, Yugoslavia, visited presbyteries in Iowa this summer and stayed with Christian families there. ...And the previous summer, a group led by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Naujoks of Kenwood Park Church in Cedar Rapids traveled in Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia, talking with fellow Christians. ...What this indicates: an emphasis called internationalization, becoming quite important to National Missions as well as COEMAR. ...The idea: Christians of different backgrounds in dialogue, hopefully moving beyond the confines of culture and ideology to explore their common unity in Jesus Christ.

NEW DEPARTURE

Here is a bold step quietly taken...might be a bellwether: A Presbyterian home for the elderly in Buffalo, N.Y. will open its facilities to elderly residents of the community on a daily care basis. ...Sound simple? Not so. It means bringing people of different racial and ethnic backgrounds into the home every day...and providing resident care for each of them as the need may arise.

FROM MICHIGAN

The Newsletter has received a handful of descriptive material from Westminster Presbyterian Church in Grand Rapids--overall, indicating a multidimensional ministry in the community. ...An interesting aspect to highlight: Westminster has joined with local Methodist and Congregational Churches to begin a ministry for runaway young people ...and now seeks a wider ecumenical base for this work.

KOREA AGAIN

The Rev. Peter Van Lierop, Ph.D., and his wife, Eleanor write us with a letter full of rejoicing for their ministry at Yonsei University--specifically in relation to the Student Christian Center and its counseling service. When the center opened two years ago, 14,000 students signed up for its facilities and programs the first semester. ...In the most recent semester, nearly 60,000 students signed for the facilities. ...But the story goes far beyond this, into a coffee house program, folk singing and personal counseling which reaches and helps the students.

READER ALERT

In response to General Assembly action, Mission Newsletter has added many new readers this past summer...and is doing its best to reach all of you. Trouble is, there may be some duplication of names. ...So if you receive more than one copy of this newsletter, give it to a friend, let us know and bear with us. ...We'll do our best to clean out the duplications before the October mailing.

Dear Friends in Mission:

Ministry in Metropolis

Ministries in metropolitan areas continue to be a key concern of National Missions and COEMAR, with a joint office...emphasizing the fact that these ministries are worldwide. Here are brief examples:

California

In the Synod of Golden Gate, the innovative and multiracial Office of Ethnic Church Affairs is centering attention on congregations' programs in the synod -- with predominately Black, Chinese, Japanese, Korean, Mexican-American, Filipino churches -- holding consultations with ten of the established or developing churches...to carry out the mission goals which have priority for this office. This focus has created local church programs and provided funds for them, bringing to the communities and to the whole synod a new stress on Biblical goals of social justice and liberation for all people.

In Africa

Half a world away, in Kenya, some seed money from COEMAR--given to The National Christian Council of Kenya--was used to give the city of Nairobi impetus to supply basic sanitation, electricity and water service for a large "squatter" community...now organizing itself to upgrade conditions of extreme poverty. ...And southwest across the continent, in Edea, Cameroun, COEMAR helps support a large Presbyterian congregation that is doing evangelism through five pioneer congregations in various sections of this fast growing city--where the largest aluminum plant in Africa is located.

BRIEF HIGHLIGHTS

At COEMAR's recent meeting of the full Commission--strong input given on two sensitive areas, Latin America and southern Africa...the crucial issues of liberation and justice in relation to mission, plus the question of maintaining ties with sister churches. ...Also, news on the budget--COEMAR reducing its work by $1.5 million this coming year. The largest single item--maintaining missionaries overseas...headquarters staff and operations are also being reduced. ...National Missions faces the impact of $4 million fewer mission dollars available for 1972 than were budgeted in 1971. The work of the National Missions staff cabinets has made it possible to carry on basic and essential services, and to choose between old familiar programs and the demands which the churches and General Assembly have recognized as priority for this time. Through the third quarter of 1971 the Mission Development Cabinet made recommendations allocating $483,448 for new church development...supporting presbytery programs sponsoring these new churches and ministries--$154,546 in suburban areas, $110,201 for black churches, $38,065 for Hispanic churches, and the rest for related forms of congregational support.

RACE--
A KEY SHIFT

Here is something to take seriously...little recognized as yet, but very significant--a subtle but crucial shift in racial attitudes, making possible more dialogue between members of minority groups and the predominately white membership of our church.

Crucial
Background

Look briefly at the background, sketched by some thoughtful leaders in the mission agencies: The Supreme Court decision desegregating schools in the 1950s triggered a new racial consciousness in the U.S.A. ... Racial integration became the great goal. ...Then, even as more blacks and other minority people began to get a toehold in commerce, politics, and the mainstreams of education and religious life, a new danger emerged: by token gestures at integration, or sometimes by more, there was the danger of assimilation and loss of self-identity in the white man's world. ...So in the 1960s a new cry arose: black power...meaning self-awareness and self-affirmation...with some angry notes and separatist overtones. ...And similar movements began among Hispanic-Americans, Asian communities and the first Americans of all, the Indian people.

Next Steps

Now within our church, these movements of self-affirmation have reached the point where dialogue on a new level becomes possible--with minority group leaders possessing a new self-awareness and confidence, with deep commitments to the church...having insights to offer, taking new initiative across racial lines.

This has not been fulfilled yet, not a documented movement...but a spirit, a trend...very hopeful.

Your Participation
- Dialogue

What can be done--in mission, to become more aware...and make your own views as a Christian count--locally and church-wide...channels have been developed by your national program agencies. First, some key resource people are available, members of minority groups, plus some whites, and they are ready to come to your church, presbytery, or groups therein, and engage in dialogue.

...Explore this opportunity with the Rev. Clarence Cave, Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia, Pa., 19107...(a program initiated by the Council on Church and Race).

INDIA - PAKISTAN

The strife in East Pakistan caused a human disaster of great proportions ...now slaughter and warfare have escalated, and tens of thousands of refugees are still streaming into the Calcutta area of India, one of the poorest sections of that country. This alone is a bleak picture of human misery observed by Indian and Western relief officers, and also by Dr. Daniel Ruge of the Council on Church Support--who speaks urgently of the need for aid, with emphasis falling on medicines.

Some

COEMAR at its full Commission meeting last month adopted a statement urging continued support for relief efforts, beyond the Nov. 21 offering...asked the United Nations that its aid programs "be equipped and empowered to function with the single objectives of transporting aid to those suffering and dying." ...requested the U.S. government to make generous aid available to the refugees...and, voicing a concern about increasing hostilities between India and Pakistan, the Commission approved the idea of the U.S. government backing away from internal affairs in this region of the world.

As this goes to press we have no direct word from United Presbyterian missionaries in West Pakistan (there are none in the East)...and are assuming that missionary women and children may have been among those in West Pakistan evacuated to a safer area by the U.S. government. ...At press time there had been no evacuations from India. The United Presbyterian Church has close ties with the churches of both India and Pakistan.

REPORTING--

Examples in Mission

Here comes an example from New York City--Emmanuel Presbyterian Church on Manhattan's lower East Side. ...It was burned-out, and with substantial help from National Missions and presbytery mortgages and grants, it rebuilt its facilities with an eye to serving the community ...and as a result has 96% of its space in use seven days a week. The church was recently awarded a plaque by Mayor John Lindsay in appreciation of its "spirit of cooperation with the Lower East Side Community and City Government by the donation of office space for the mayor's Urban Action Task Force." The church is aided by the presbytery and National Missions in its program, and is noted for its day care work.

Now quite a different example--coming from the Elizabeth Presbyterial Association of the Synod of New Jersey...which developed an all day "mission festival" this fall at Westfield Presbyterian Church--presenting missionaries and other resource persons...plus movies, filmstrips, slides and exhibits...and a group of young singers in the evening--all helping those who attended to learn the dimensions and thrusts of mission today...an event that a reader wanted to share with all of you.

LEGAL AID--

International

The Council on Church and Race has recently authorized a grant of $2,500 at the request of the Milwaukee Presbytery for the legal defense of a black soldier, Pvt. Larry Clark, stationed in West Germany ...where the N.A.A.C.P. recently announced the establishment of an office to deal with racial problems. ...After rebuffs to Pvt. Clark's family by the U.S. Army on requests for information, a painful gathering of facts reveals that Pvt. Clark is accused of murdering a mess sergeant, and that a civilian lawyer is needed to assure a fair trial. ...The request for aid originated in Pvt. Clark's home area, where the presbytery granted $200, after a careful exploration of the facts by a committee chaired by the Rev. Ned Benson...then forwarded to the Council on Church and Race for further assistance from the Emergency Fund for Legal Aid, which made the grant in November.

"Our family," a brother of Pvt. Clark wrote, "will always feel that we did the best we could for him and that lack of finances was not the factor that decided his fate."

OVERSEAS--FACT-FINDING ON INDUSTRIES

A team of sixteen persons from six denominations--convened by the denominations themselves--has recently visited Tanzania and South Africa to study U.S. business involvement in these areas...has talked extensively with managers and workers of ten U.S. owned corporations in these countries, and tried to do so in Angola--but were refused a visa by the Portuguese government. ...There were four Presbyterians on the team, and they and others will be feeding their findings into their respective denominational channels and to other interested groups. The consultation group will also be visiting the U.S.A. offices of these companies.

RESTRUCTURE

Just to update you...The Commission on Reorganization of General Assembly Agencies is moving rapidly ahead. Don Jones, Commission staff member, has emphasized "how very grateful we are for the full cooperation and best thinking of our mission agencies to help meet our deadlines." Design teams presented recommended outlines for the new Support Agency in November; will present outlines for the new Vocation Agency this month; for the Program Agency and the General Assembly Mission Council next month. ...This is a basic restructuring of national church agencies, with final recommendations to the 1972 General Assembly in May...and present schedules calling for the new agencies to assume full responsibilities in January, 1973.

Dear Friends in Mission:

MOVING FOR PEACE

Church statements on peace have come most often from national and international bodies...our own General Assembly, and most recently, in Kansas City a gathering of some 700 Christians and Jews, with leaders of peace movements from around the world--protesting U.S. policy in Vietnam. ...Now in Wayzata, Minnesota, a church has started a grass roots program that has begun to spread nationwide. National agencies are helping support this effort as part of the Peace Priority program the 1971 General Assembly directed them to design during this year.

Here is how it started...and what is going to happen.

Members of St. Luke Presbyterian Church in this Minneapolis suburb wrestled for six weeks last spring with the question of peace...and what they as a church could do about it-- feeling that "a church that follows the Prince of Peace should be involved." The members brainstormed...set criteria...and developed a broad definition of peace-- not only in Vietnam, but in the family and in the world.

Local Initiative

Now St. Luke has trained 40 laymen and women to go-- in teams of two-- to other churches and help them wrestle with the question of peace... and hopefully develop their own plan for peace. The Rev. Robert K. Hudnut, pastor of St. Luke, indicated that teams will probably visit 30 United Presbyterian churches across the country, plus several churches of other denominations (and these numbers may increase)... and he said that keen interest has also been expressed by the American Friends Service Committee, Church Women United, and the National Federation of Priest Councils. (R.C.).

"We're not trying to sell people our peace plan," Mr. Hudnut said, "but rather encourage them to do their own planning for peace."

St. Luke's answer to participation in a peace emphasis involves selling "peace bonds," which pay nothing. Instead, the money goes to support peace projects. Some $22,000 in peace bonds have been sold by St. Luke...and its support for peace programs ranges from family life and school material to the bipartisan group, Members of Congress for Peace Through Law.

NEW PROGRAM IN EVANGELISM

Now underway-- "Evangelism Associates," a new program of the Council of Evangelism approved by last year's General Assembly...and recently launched as a pilot project in seven judicatories: the synods of Southern California, Golden Gate, Pennsylvania and Oregon, and the presbyteries of St. Paul, Western New York, and Northwest Missouri Union/Topeka-Highland.

The associates, each a clergyman in the area, have begun working on evangelism needs and various approaches tuned to local situations ...will be helping churches and clusters to develop effective evangelism programs...and are trying to work with a wide spectrum to give evangelism a broad local base. After the pilot phase, the experiences and findings can be used in other synods and presbyteries.

HISPANIC MINISTRIES

Be alert for shifting priorities and new leadership in hispanic ministries-- the winds of change are increasing.

New Group

One indication-- the coming together of an informal but increasingly clear coalition of Hispanic churchmen concerned about liberation and social justice along with their continuing commitment to the spiritual life and witness of the church. They include Roman Catholics as well as Protestants, clergy from Puerto Rico as well as the continental U.S. This coalition first emerged last fall in Puerto Rico at a meeting of a unit of the National Council of Churches...and surfaced more strongly at a similar meeting this winter. Reactions to this change have been strong in some older and respected groups of Hispanic churchmen... with controversy over sensitive issues about the church's role in giving more support to self-determination for the poor and oppressed, as well as to continue relevant spiritual ministries. ...Expect these challenges to increase.

Cuba Thaw?

Some political observers are speculating quietly about a U.S.-Cuba thaw, and cite the U.S.-China thaw as a precedent...and also the fact that the number of U.S. citizens visiting Cuba increased last year. ...The speculation provides no base for predictions, but does suggest a possible change.

The news in this for United Presbyterians is that one of our church leaders was among the visitors to Cuba last year...he reports that the Presbyterian Reformed Church of Cuba has become completely self-supporting, remains free in its worship and program-- for instance, national meetings, camps for young people and the operation of a seminary...and is seeking new forms of witness in a Marxist society. ...Another development-- the preparation of a study by the U.S.-Cuba Relations Task Force of the Council of Church and Society...will be available to you in a few months. Cuban emigres to the U.S. were among those who helped prepare the study.

GRANT FOR MARY HOLMES

Mary Holmes College in West Point, Miss.-- founded in 1892 and long related to National Missions-- has received a $6.4 million Federal grant to continue Head Start services for 5,360 children in 14 Mississippi counties.

The grant is providing preschool training for children of low income families-- including medical, dental, social and psychological services. Funds of this size are not easily granted...and point to a sound and trusted program by the college, begun in 1968. ...Though the grant will not contribute much financially to the support of the college, the college itself is working to become self-supporting through the current National Missions program of institutional development.

CHURCH INVESTMENTS

To keep you up-to-date on this issue, because headlines will start popping up...here is what is happening with the national agencies:

COEMAR asked the Southern Africa Task Force to help it study responsibility and alternatives toward corporations in which it has investments ...and also joins several churches in supporting stockholder resolutions that ask U.S. firms doing business in southern Africa to disclose personnel and wage policies, with special attention to racial groups. ...These moves find support in a set of careful recommendations from the General Council's Committee on Social Responsibility in Investments.

Other Moves

The Southern Africa Task Force is also assisting the Church Project on United States Investments in Southern Africa, a coalition of six church groups sponsoring resolutions that ask the disclosure of wage and personnel policies. ...The firms involved are General Motors, Gulf Oil and Good Year Tire and Rubber-- as well as I.B.M. and Mobil Oil, which have now volunteered to make the disclosures. ...The United Presbyterian Church has historically felt a social responsibility about its investments...for instance, forbidding investment in liquor and tobacco firms. (Information packets are available.)

SOUTH SUDAN

The new accord between north and south Sudan will be very meaningful for United Presbyterian mission efforts. After 16 years of civil war between the Arabs of the north and the Africans of the south, the accord grants self-government within the southern section as part of a United Sudan-- and assures security and freedom, including religious freedom.

The United Presbyterian Church historically has played a strong missionary role in the southern Sudan...and will be called to play a responsible part as the strife-torn area opens up again, needing reconstruction.

$$ DECLINE

United Presbyterian giving to all church causes beyond the local level decreased a mere .06 percent last year, according to preliminary figures from the Council on Church Support. But more of the money is staying close to home than ever before. ...Gifts to presbytery causes increased by 15.52 percent over 1970...while gifts to synod work fell by 2.54 percent and those to national and international causes declined 9.64 percent.

RELIEF FOR BANGLADESH

A $13 million relief program for Bangladesh has been mapped by the World Council of Churches in cooperation with the East Asia Christian Conference and the Lutheran World Federation.

Top relief priorities go to supplying proteins and supplementary foods... providing blankets and clothing...help with medical supplies and equipment, and help with transportation and the rebuilding of ruined homes. The churches of Norway have made available three transport planes that are airlifting supplies and equipment...a church team in Bangladesh is making a precise survey of needs...and a German group is surveying church agencies to pinpoint supplies that are available or that can be quickly purchased.

Meanwhile, some free-lance relief efforts for Bangladesh have begun. Be a little careful of these-- and be aware that the ecumenical relief effort is rolling, relying on teamwork with people of India and Bangladesh... a worldwide network of resources...and a history of proven experience.

Even as the new aid program got underway, the World Council announced the successful phasing out of its $20 million aid program in the wake of the civil war in Nigeria-- its largest aid program to date. It was aimed, the report noted, at "the medical, agricultural, industrial and social sectors, enabling them to recover sufficiently to progress by themselves." That job was done. ...Note that an important $$ channel for aid is through One Great Hour of Sharing.

ALERT ON DAY CARE

Churches are developing day care centers for preschool children-- providing love and nutrition...and allowing mothers of poorer families to go to work. Some centers date back for years or decades...have done great community service-- while other centers are just opening.

Now, an alert to you-- if you're thinking of starting such a center, be careful. There are commercial firms trying to run such centers on franchises from churches-- and they make a substantial profit by using church facilities. So be on your guard. National Missions is now preparing some resource material on day care centers. We'll keep you posted.

TRAVEL

Here's a quick advisory-- look into the 1972-73 tours offered by the church's Office of Interpretation Through Travel, Room 1007, 475 Riverside Drive, New York, N. Y. 10027. It offers group tours and rates in the U.S. and overseas...experienced guidance...and plenty of sight-seeing combined with on-the-scenes interpretation of mission work. This is the only official United Presbyterian travel office...nonprofit, and no money spent on expensive advertising.

THEOLOGICAL UNION 1962

Dear Friends in Mission:

NEW STYLES IN MISSION

Important for today-- new efforts in mission often characterized by self-determination.

Indian Americans

The Consulting Panel on Indian Ministries provides a good example. ...Formed in 1970 and composed of Indian-Americans, it has administered $100,000 for Indian work mandated by General Assembly in 1969, and another $50,000 earmarked for youth ministries in 1970.

The significant factor: a group of Indian people assessing their own needs and deciding what should be done-- a self-determining mission, rather than work being administered from offices distant from the realities of Indian life...which had been typical of work among Indian nations for some 300 years. ...The Indian churchmen themselves, through the Consulting Panel, funded projects ranging from continuing education for pastors to programs to combat alcoholism and drug abuse. ...The Board of National Missions and the Council on Church and Race have endorsed a major position paper (and its recommendations) recently developed by the Consulting Panel...that the panel be continued and its proposals be carried out by the new program agency.

More support for Indian leadership -- the Cherokee Boys' Club of North Carolina recently received a $500,000 loan from the Presbyterian Economic Development Corporation...the largest loan in the four year history of PEDCO -- which helps fund enterprises among minority groups. ...The Boys' Club (a somewhat misleading name for such a large economic development agency) operates bus services, painting and construction businesses, restaurants and other enterprises...has 126 full-time employees, plus 300 members employed part-time and receiving training.

Arab Christians

Another new mission developing from a traditional base- in Egypt.

Last year the Coptic Evangelical Organization for Social Services-- CEOSS, headed by the Rev. Samuel Habib and supported, in part, by COEMAR-- sent a worker into Deir el-Barsha on the desert's edge and into three other "pattern villages"--small communities where a strong renewal in church and community life had been sparked by church-sponsored literacy campaigns in 1959. ... From this start--and with new funding from the local churches themselves-- a CEOSS worker returned to each village for two weeks initially...then one week a month for six months. The response was encouraging.

New leaders stepped forward...a new generation learned to read from volunteer teachers in the communities-- using a reading program provided by CEOSS that dealt with Christian faith, family life and planning, care of the soil and the raising of chickens...and the printed word was reinforced by audiovisual aids and discussion.

There were 1,315 men and women enrolled in the classes in the four villages ...2,700 reading books were sold, plus many Bibles and Scripture portions ...twenty leadership training sessions were held with good attendance... nine new elders were ordained in one church alone. Also, 25,232 chicks were distributed at cost to aid agricultural development. ...Now the CEOSS workers -- Arabs themselves--have backed away, and the work is moving forward under village leaders.

Philippines: People Power

Here's a real grass roots story --the poor people who dwell in shacks along the waterfront in Manila organizing themselves...some Catholic and some Evangelical...and approaching the Philippine Ecumenical Council on Community Organization for help--and getting it...in the form of skilled assistance in community organization from fraternal worker Herbert D. White, who did similar work with COEMAR in Korea and with National Missions in Rochester, New York.

Mr. White serves as a trainer...and the people themselves compose the organization known as ZOTO--Zone One Tondo Organization. When a hurricane struck and the normal relief channels bogged down, ZOTO delivered the relief supplies quickly, without bottlenecks or pilfering-- because it is an organization of and for the local people.

Despite a personal visit and blessing from Pope Paul VI, ZOTO has run into resistance from the Catholic hierarchy in the area. ...Yet one of its demands on the city authorities--for a job placement program--has been met, and ZOTO is negotiating other demands...Important needs are for landrights and a housing development planned with the community-- not imposed upon it. ...ZOTO has helped to give tens of thousands of poor people an effective voice...a sense of dignity...and progress toward community goals...a powerful witness for Christ and his Church among the very poor in Manila.

VITAL CHURCH IN MISSION

Strong programs in worship and mission-- with a community and world outlook -- characterize St. Peter's by the Sea in Portuguese Bend, California... founded in 1959 and now working with a membership of over 1,600. Pastor Kenneth Reeves reports:

"Worship has been a prime thrust...is conducted with a resurrection, first century, mission, Holy Spirit approach. Attendance is high. ...Evangelism is all the time by an invitation, human-concern, open Gospel, open Christ approach. ...Youth...a primary concern-- no gimmicks; a solid, warm, human, Christ-oriented approach. Youth fellowships average 200 plus each week."

St. Peter's pioneered in a drug education program in the community, and its speakers and materials have been used coast to coast. ...Its senior high fellowship in two summers raised over $60,000 in cash and materials to build a high school in San Felipe, Baja California, Mexico...The women have a visiting program at rest homes in the area...Men help to find jobs for blacks and persons with prison records...corps of volunteers help to meet both emergency and chronic needs in the community...a Land Rover was purchased for a fraternal worker in Pakistan.

These are some of the highlights of this "switched on" church-- plus the fact that it started by pledging 20 percent of its budget to the General Mission...and has moved this up to 31 percent.

RETURNING MISSIONARIES

Missionaries recalled from overseas have begun to be relocated with COEMAR assistance in the U.S.A.--a difficult transition--that in most cases seems to be working out. Here are some examples:

The Rev. Robert E. Dodson and his wife, returned from Brazil, have gone to Valley Presbyterian Church in Bishop, California, to work among the Paiute Indians: "I am happy to inform you that we have found a place where we believe that God wants us to work." ...The Rev. W. Winn Erdman and his wife have come from Mexico to Chamisal-Emannuel Presbyterian Church in Penasco, New Mexico: "Margaret and I think Chamisal is the place for us...we are excited and happy." ...The Rev. Dr. Robert L. Van Dale, returning from Ethiopia, will become Missionary in Residence and teach at Pittsburgh Seminary: "The whole thing has begun to fall in place in such an amazing way that we cannot help but feel that the hand of the Lord is in it."

ECOLOGY & INVESTMENTS

We've advised you before on investments...how our church and some of its agencies, and other churches and Christian coalitions-- with professional investment counsel-- are using their rights as stockholders to make a moral witness on some corporate policies, such as wage and personnel practices in southern Africa.

Here's another concern...impact on the environment. Church agencies and coalitions are sponsoring various stockholder resolutions-- their subjects ranging from consumer protection through air pollution control to control of the impact of mining on the environment. ...One brief example: COEMAR is joining other stockholders in supporting a resolution that asks American Metal Climax and Kennecott Copper not to enter a mining agreement with Puerto Rico until a master resource plan for that land has been developed ...and the companies will assure rehabilitation of the mined areas-- a resolution that is supported by some churchmen in Puerto Rico.

Behind the concern...an awareness of what the unregulated impact of mining can do to an area. A recent description comes out of bitter experience in another island...Moukunu Kokare, a young writer active in a Christian literacy program in Papua New Guinea, describes his native island:

"...whole villages have been moved. Forests have been cut down, mountains have been leveled or cut in half, sacred stones have been quarried, river valleys have been silted up, fishing places have been polluted. ...Suddenly our once beautiful, quiet, peaceful island is covered with mud and dust and square miles of rock-strewn wasteland. Thousands of glasseyed, heavy-booted strangers are walking over it. We did not ask for all this. ...Control of our land has been taken from us."

WOMEN HAVE NEW THEME

United Presbyterian Women are meeting regionally this summer, taking hold of a new theme-- "Appointment with Tomorrow"--which breaks down into the questions of "our faith-crisis and affirmation"..."social movements that affect us"..."our church-how it looks today"..."the churchwoman and UPW." ...These issues will be explored during June and July in Colorado, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, California and Minnesota-- and some leading church women and men will be featured. (Full details in April Concern magazine)

TRAVEL ADVISORY

An alert for travelers-- there are still some places left on four Presbyterian traveling seminars: to Alaska, Aug. 5-19...to the Southwest,

Aug. 16-26...to Lisbon, Madrid and Rome, Oct. 5-26...to the Southeast, Oct. 14-24. ...The traveling seminars feature sight-seeing together with a firsthand look at mission work. ...A typical comment, this one from the Rev. Sherwood W. Anderson, Ph.D. of Cincinnati: "We had a grand time on the travel tour, and it has greatly enriched our understanding of mission." ...For information, write to: Interpretation Through Travel, Room 1003, 475 Riverside Drive, New York, N.Y. 10027

SIGN OF THE TIMES

The Kyodan (United Church of Christ in Japan) now has twenty missionaries and other workers serving overseas, half of them in the United States and Canada...not very unusual anymore, as churches in the third world begin to develop overseas work-- mission increasingly becoming a two-way street.

MISSION INTERPRETERS

Groups of mission interpreters are being trained in many sections of the church-- so far the Presbyteries of Philadelphia, Chicago and Puerto Rico, and the Synods of Oregon, Mid-South and Colorado-Utah are preparing them to tell the story of mission in local churches, and listen to any criticisms. ...Most interpreters (more than 250) are lay men and women, with young people getting involved. The program is coordinated by Gil Bacon of United Presbyterian Men. The "Mission Newsletter" welcomes news items from interpreters and other readers.

GRADUATE THEOLOGICAL UNION 1962

Dear Friends in Mission:

QUICK HIGHLIGHTS

Maybe you've heard already-- that the Rev. Leon E. Fanniel, a leading churchman (strong ministry in Chicago, and recently,Associate Executive of the Synod of Southern California), has been elected to direct the new General Assembly Mission Council-- responsible for United Presbyterian mission on six continents. ...And now Edward F. Tablak, a successful businessman and committed churchman who headed the Council on Church Support, has been named to lead the new Support Agency.

U.S.A. AND OVERSEAS

Take note on the efficiency ratings of aid programs: When you give $100 to help other people, it costs $300 to deliver that $100 worth of aid through Federal channels...$27 to deliver the same amount through voluntary charities...and $8 to deliver it through the church...(from statistics compiled for the Better Business Bureau by the National Association of Life Underwriters in Washington, D.C.)

STRESS RISES IN LATIN AM.

History is handing many U.S. and Latin American churches and corporations an agenda of rising tension and pressure for change in Latin America.

Apt to be painful...because U.S. economic interests are heavily involved on the side of the status quo in Latin America...U.S. churches have strong commitments in the region...and churches there are caught in polarizations, with members and leaders choosing sides.

Indicators

You've probably noted some big straws in the wind-- alleged torture of political prisoners in Brazil and Uruguay...political kidnappings by revolutionary groups...terror tactics by police (see a special report in The Wall Street Journal, Sept. 7, 1971).

Time now for some cool heads to look behind the pieces and accusations...be aware of some inside information. We quote from a staff memorandum of the U.S. Senate Committee on Foreign Relations-- a special report made Dec. 30 of last year-- which advises:

Behind the Scenes:

"Guatemala and the Dominican Republic are textbook cases of the wisdom of the adage that it's easier to get into a bear trap than to get out of it.

Senate Memorandum

"In each country, the United States got into the bear trap by intervening to frustrate a process of social change (indirectly in Guatemala in 1954, openly in the Dominican Republic in 1965), and the trap has been becoming more painful ever since.

"...Ever since the respective interventions, the United States has felt constrained to support whatever government has been in power in either country, these governments have generally been conservative, they have done nothing to bring about social change in any fundamental sense, they have terrorized the opposition, they have thereby acquired a bad image both at home and abroad, and this image has rubbed off on the U.S. In both countries, also, one sees a process of polarization."

Much the same, with variations, can be said of other nations in Latin America, including Colombia. ...Then add the fact that poverty is increasing--for instance, some young work campers from the Synod of Pennsylvania this summer saw the owner of a small banana grove in Concordia, Ecuador, sell 10 bunches of bananas (120 to a bunch there) for exactly $1 (U.S.)...and he is still better off than most, who own no land.

The Crunch

The middle class is squeezed...poverty increases...the pressure for basic change increases-- and the repression of change grows harsher. This sets the stage for the trend reported by Latin America Press (Lima, Peru) from a conference of Latin American churchmen this spring in Santiago, Chile.

It reports "the growing radicalness of the progressive wing (of the church), which has finally become dissatisfied with attempts at reforming capitalism. ...As a practical step they support the 'strategic alliance' with Marxists in the revolutionary class struggle. The participants, many practicing Catholic priests, did this while still pledging faith to their Christianity. They feel Marxist atheistic philosophy can be separated from the Marxist method of examining socioeconomic reality."

Summary

In short, they use a Marxist analysis without buying the atheist ideology--a trend in Latin America that involves clergy and laymen, Protestants as well as Roman Catholics. ...If forces such as these result in revolutionary change, and this process runs its course, the Senate memorandum says, then social problems would be worked out "in a way that the United States would find tolerable, if not agreeable..." but preferable at least to "the bear trap."

The Church

Amid this, what role for our United Presbyterian Church? Through COEMAR, the church has 92 fraternal workers involved in eleven Latin American lands, assisting in a variety of programs. ...As an illustration, look at Colombia-- where Presbyterian involvement began in 1856.

United Presbyterians have helped South Presbytery in Colombia develop ten new congregations and build eight churches in the past three years...provide personnel and subsidy for the Secretariat of Education of the Colombian church, which serves Presbyterian-related schools enrolling more than 8,000 students. ...And United Presbyterians also gave substantial support to the Northwest Colombia Project, which combines evangelism, basic education and the development of medicine and agriculture-- and is moving ahead of schedule, with a new presbytery born there in May.

United Presbyterian aid also moves outside Presbyterian channels to assist others-- for instance, to help an ecumenical ministry that relates U.S., Canadian and European expatriates to Colombian churches and social structures...to aid an interdenominational mass communication project serving all Colombian churches...and to support Rosca, a social research and action group chartered by Colombian law. ...Currently, Rosca is helping Indians obtain basic rights and land titles...helping black fishermen to help themselves...and helping petroleum workers form an independent union to serve their interests-- rather than the unions dominated by the state or the Communist Party. Committed Christians, including a Presbyterian pastor, are involved in Rosca's leadership.

In short, United Presbyterians are working through traditional church channels to spread the gospel and its witness in many forms...and are working outside traditional structures to help the oppressed.

NOTES ON EVANGELISM

U.S.A.

Evangelism Associates program reviewed...meeting in Denver last month with the Division of Evangelism. ...Results in the seven areas involved in the pilot phase were assessed. Efforts were quite different-- from crash pads in Oregon to consultation and lay training in Kansas-- evangelism being keyed to local situations and needs, with varied degrees of success. Look for this program to build momentum quietly in the months ahead.

In Colombia

Evangelistic institutes for lay men and women are spreading and making an impact in the northwest. ..."There have been conversions without exception in each place," according to Jack Walker, a pilot assisting in the Northwest Colombia Project-- an effort by the Colombian church with heavy lay involvement and backed by United Presbyterians.

Thailand

Christian students are developing "cell groups" at their colleges and universities...concentrating on Bible study, the relevance of Christ today and evangelism-- with strategy worked out earlier this year at the Presbyterian camp at Nongkae.

CHOCTAW WORK ADVANCES

The Choctaw Larger Parish in Oklahoma is developing new programs for youth and leadership training-- to be boosted with some funding from the Board of National Missions...a recent grant approved by the Mission Development Cabinet.

"At a church in Broken Bow," according to the Rev. Eugene Wilson, who directs youth work for the parish, "we conducted an experimental class on the third level...and learned some good things in terms of relevant approach and methods with the children, and now we need to apply what we've learned as well as training teachers in more modern methods."

Mr. Wilson is himself a Choctaw-- and now heads the Consulting Panel on Indian Ministries. ...Estimates indicate that half the Indian population in the U.S.A. is under 17 years of age-- which highlights the need for Christian education and outreach for young people.

NEW IN MISSION

Amid the work of restructuring the national agencies (which is moving smoothly) we're being asked-- what's new in mission? More than we can cover; but here are some brief examples: Decisions by the Mission Development Cabinet of National Missions late last month to fund 11 projects--includes church renewal and an ecumenical youth ministry in San Francisco...a prison reform program in Arizona...rural community organization in upstate New York, and other efforts, including the Choctaw work. ...Overseas, pioneer evangelism is breaking new ground in Ethiopia...Glen and Betty Bays are developing Christian literature and communication in Papua New Guinea...the Rev. William L. Coop and his wife Roxanna are building a Christian education ministry in the New Hebrides--these are but a few highlights.

MOVES AT MENAUL SCHOOL

Menaul School in Albuquerque--founded by national missionaries in 1881 to serve Spanish Americans--has recently appointed a Development Officer--Mr. Aaron Eichwald, an alumnus.

Vasquez to New Post

Menaul opened its doors this fall under the new leadership of Edmundo E. Vasquez--an educator and the son of parents who served as lay missionaries in New Mexico. ...Mr. Vasquez served at Wasatch Academy in Utah, related to National Missions, then went to Colombia in 1965 under the auspices of COEMAR--and now serves a hitch in mission U.S.A. ...Menaul is a four-year coeducational high school, with a curriculum that includes regular academic subjects, Bible as a required subject...plus agriculture, industrial arts, home economics, commercial skills and arts and crafts.

RELOCATING - MISSION U.S.A.

Some who have recently come from overseas to serve in mission U.S.A. include the Rev. Frederic G. Appleton and his wife, Thelma, coming from the Philippines to work as a mission interpreter in the Synod of Southern California...and north along the coast, the Rev. Albert C. Strong and his wife, Juliana, have arrived from Ethiopia, with Al now at work as mission interpreter for the Synod of Sierra. ...Earlier this year, Lee and Connie Lybarger came from Pakistan to Cleveland, where Lee has a post with the city's Department of Human Resources and Economic Development.

Dear Friends in Mission:

CWS MOVES SWIFTLY — Within hours of the earthquake in Nicaragua Church World Service (CWS) was airlifting blankets and other supplies to disaster victims from depots in nearby lands. . .joining with others to help alleviate the misery of survivors.

Efficiently — CWS-- in which we participate through One Great Hour of Sharing-- has actually lowered its distribution costs over the past decade, a just-completed study shows. For every dollar given this agency in a year. . .

Per $ Delivery — CWS delivered $19.13 worth of food to disaster victims-- 327 pounds of food per dollar (mostly U.S. Food for Peace donated for relief), an increase from 300 pounds per dollar. . .and for each dollar CWS also delivered 6.33 pounds of clothing valued at $6.57. . .delivered $59.32 worth of medical supplies. . . delivered $29.31 worth of self-help material-- for a total of some $12.3 million in aid in 1972.

Some Reasons — CWS has improved the per dollar efficiency of its delivery system faster than inflation has eaten into the dollars by constantly improving its methods to obtain supplies. . .maintaining a small executive staff. . .and steadily improving and streamlining its channels into almost every church and ecumenical agency in the world-- so that it can deliver as efficiently to Nepal as it can to Mexico. . .can have relief-laden planes bound for the disaster area before the dust has settled.

There's a key principle of mission involved here-- that of multiplying the effectiveness of each dollar you give.

PEDCO ADVANCES WORK — Much the same idea lies behind the efforts of the Presbyterian Economic Development Corporation (PEDCO), which assists community-oriented businesses in poor and deprived areas. . .has loaned $6,020,073 in four years and now shows a return of about $500,000 a year (repayment of principal plus interest). . .In the 12 months ending Nov. 30, PEDCO received $515,218.08, of which $205,845.76 was interest-- a cash return on aid that has given people new hope and helped them to stand on their own feet.

Will Widen Aid — Watch for PEDCO to pop into news stories here and there across the country in the months ahead-- because its board has authorized it to participate in federal 502 programs across the country. . .programs that combine funds of the Small Business Administration and other sources to develop businesses in needy areas. . .Previously, PEDCO participation in 502 programs was limited to the New York-New Jersey area, with a record as follows: participation in about $1.5 million in funding. . .of which PEDCO loaned $135,400, with $101,550 of this underwritten by the Opportunity Funding Corporation-- leaving PEDCO with a net exposure of about $35,000 in aiding 18 businesses employing hundreds of persons in poorer areas.

RELIEF NEEDS IN THE SUDAN

More definite word has recently come from the Upper Sudan-- specifics on what $ can do for reconstruction after the long, bloody, civil war.

School, Health and Other Centers

A school will be built at Doleib Hill. . .health centers constructed at Doleib Hill, Abwong, Nasir, Jekao, Akobo, and Pibor. . .reception centers will be built at Nasir, Jekao, Akobo, and Pibor. . .nucleus villages created at Doleib Hill, Abwong, and perhaps another site--with these villages planned as centers for material and spiritual development, not just living areas.

First Missionaries

It was early in 1902 that the first United Presbyterian missionaries in the area-- the Rev. and Mrs. J. K. Giffen and Dr. and Mrs. H. T. McLaughlin -- landed at Doleib Hill, which they named for its profusion of doleib palms.

Sample Costs

The new school at Doleib Hill will cost 6,338.0 Sudanese pounds (nearly $18,000) for classrooms, dormitories, four houses and six toilets. . . Another sample cost--475.6 Sudanese pounds (nearly $1,500) for the Abwong health center with dressing room, ward and a house for a medical assistant. (One Sudanese pound is worth $2.80). . .These and other projects and costs were defined after on-the-spot investigation--and churches will be built or reconstructed on sites now being worked out.

SOME EFFORTS ON VIETNAM

On the Vietnam situation-- the church has a Task Force on Indochina that is planning with others to aid in postwar reconstruction. . .and meanwhile United Presbyterians have contributed about $100,000 a year to relief in South Vietnam through the World Council of Churches and Vietnam Christian Service. . .and now some United Presbyterians are contributing to a special World Council appeal for medical supplies for North Vietnam.

This. . .plus some letters and visits in local churches indicate a ground swell of anti-war feeling-- not young activists-- but quieter, pained feelings of church men and women in their middle years (sometimes coupled with cynicism about South Vietnam's government).

Local Example

One example comes from the Wilton, Conn. Presbyterian Church. A chance to contribute to medical aid for civilians in North Vietnam was made available to the Presbyterian congregation. . .no special offering, no push. . .and people have been coming quietly to the church office to contribute more than $500 to date.

In another Connecticut church, the Episcopal rector addressed a letter to all parishoners, in which he wrote in part:

"Somewhere in his writings, Harry Golden tells of an ugly and uncomfortable chair that his family owned during his boyhood. No one liked this chair; no one used this chair. They learned to live around it.

Living Around It

"I think that in the past few years, I have learned to live around the war in Vietnam. . .(Yet) the Gospel compels us to wrestle with the realities and horrors. . .I know of no answers. . .Each person must search his conscience and somehow find out what God would have him do."

REPORT FROM WEST VIRGINIA

The Rev. Dave Caves writes from Whitesville, W.Va.: "Since construction began in the fall of 1969 on seven acres of land formerly owned by the Board of National Missions and part of the Patty C. Stockdale Home School, a health center, nine three-bedroom homes and one two-bedroom home have been constructed," providing some badly-needed housing in the area.

"The health center was built by a crew of fathers on welfare through the Work Incentive Program. . .This center is used by the Mountaineer Family Health Plan for its Clear Fork offices. One of the first two homes completed was built for Miss Anna Diem." . .Miss Diem directs Christian education for the West Virginia Mountain Project, and Dave pastors its parish in Clear Creek-- an effort that used land once owned by National Missions to develop a mission keyed to spiritual and physical needs in the area.

Note that same principle at work-- multiplying the effectiveness of resources-- in this case, a piece of real estate.

CENTER FOR INDIANS EXPANDS

The Indian Center in Los Angeles-- in existence now for 35 years, and aided by National Missions-- has grown in the past few years into a flourishing, multi-level program backed by federal grants. . .another example of how the church can start a ball rolling and others can move it along.

The Indian Center now includes an employment department, with job referral and development. . .a social services department providing emergency relief and counseling. . .a community services department that helps to organize clubs and functions. . .a tutorial department where 90-100 volunteers provide high school tutoring. . .plus adult education and public information programs. . .and aid and oversight for a neighborhood Youth Corps group-- a big program serving an Indian community of 100,000 in the area.

VOLUNTEERS IN MISSION GROWING

The Volunteers in Mission program continues to grow-- packs a good deal of muscle and meaning for world mission. . .for this program, outside of Vista and Peace Corps, is the largest voluntary service program in the U.S. . . last year fielded 6,095 volunteers-- most in short-term projects in the U.S.A., and others in 29 countries across the world.

How volunteers serve-- as a nurse in Ethiopia. . .a librarian in Alaska. . . a consultant on real estate in Portugal. . .an agricultural economist in Nepal. . .or a dentist, doctor, teacher, handyman, pipe fitter, pastor, businessman, music teacher, houseparent-- and in many other roles. . .plus many summer volunteers that are used in scores of projects across the country, such as the mobile health fairs, which last year served nearly 18,000 persons in rural areas of the U.S.A. . . .Those interested can write to Bill Miller, head of the Presbyterian Volunteers in Mission program at "475."

NEW VIGOR FOR MISSION

COEMAR, National Missions, Christian Education-- their programs all went on January 1 to the new Program Agency for mission, backed by the new Support and Vocation agencies. . .with these functioning under the General Assembly Mission Council. Interviews are being conducted with people from across the country, and staff for the new agencies will be selected over the next six months.

What it means for you in mission: more opportunity for your involvement and decision-making on regional and local levels, both in the U.S.A. and overseas. . .closer cooperation on decisions and budgets between national agencies and other judicatories-- in effect, probably more opportunity for mission-committed people to be involved.

BRIEF HIGHLIGHTS

Quickly now-- the 1973 Mission Yearbook continues last year's format of presenting one major area at a time, which had a mixed reaction but on balance worked better for uninterrupted study and daily devotions.

UPC on TV

On Jan. 28 the CBS "Lamp Unto My Feet" program will be devoted to "The Presbyterians" (was slated for Jan. 7 but rescheduled because of strike).

Travel Note

For your vacation planning-- tours that show you mission projects. . . and provide fun and cultural input. . .are scheduled for South America June 2-23, for Alaska July 7-21, and for the Pacific Coast August 4-18-- write Miss Ida Pfeuffer, Presbyterian Interpretation Through Travel at "475" in New York.

Dear Friends in Mission:

POLICIES RE: INVESTMENTS

We've learned of a quiet breakthrough in the field of commercial investments-- at least 14 mutual funds now featuring social and environmental criteria in their investment portfolios. . . and it all began in the late 1960s with trailblazing moves by the United Presbyterian and other churches to deal with investments in the light of human concerns.

New Action Groups

Also there are now at least a dozen stockholder action groups that aren't related to the churches-- groups backed by universities, foundations and citizen stockholders-- that use persuasion and proxy power in efforts to influence corporate policy on key issues-- fair employment. . . environment. . . recruitment of minority members.

New Research

Also, a large group of mutual funds, foundations and universities have come together to form the Responsibility Research Center in Washington-- work centers on providing background papers on proxy issues. . . issues often involving social and environmental responsibility.

The bellwether role of the churches, in using proxy power on such issues, was praised in Congress by Rep. Charles C. Diggs, Jr. (D-Mich.), who inserted statements by two church groups in the Congressional Record. . . while compliments along similar lines echoed in the halls of the United Nations.

UPDATE ON EVANGELISM

A good deal of news on this front again, coming from all over the world . . . Stan and Marion Wilson and their children write from Seoul, Korea to ask our prayers for "probably the greatest evangelistic crusade of the twentieth century" in their region-- now underway and continuing through June, after months of preparation and training. . . such as the training reported by Ransom Rice-- thirty students and leaders learning and practicing evangelism for an intensive four days at a site near Seoul's Kimpo Airport.

In India

From the Punjab in northern India, Carol Wilson briefly sketches a scene -- a fascinated crowd gathering and "a former communist student bubbles over as he tells what Christ has done for him". . . while all over India, teams are at work preaching the gospel and selling Christian literature.

In Latin Lands

Solid growth for the church in Venezuela is reported by Bob and Betty May Seel-- with this church becoming fully self-supporting this year. . . while Stan Wick reports from Guatemala that an evangelism movement is taking hold among the Quiché people.

Fiji Islands

Chandu Ray reports that an evangelism ministry to tourists has been started by Fiji Islanders in this area romanticized by travel posters and brochures. . . where tourists may outnumber islanders at times-- and now some tourists are serenaded by hymn singing teams of Fiji Christians . . . who are also developing an evangelism ministry to other islanders.

Estonia And Poland

Recent word from eastern Europe indicates that a multilingual Protestant congregation has been organized in the mining area of Kohtla-Jarve. . . while news from Poland tells of continuing Protestant radio programs and baptisms. . . but on the darker side, a dispatch from Nepal received via Vienna says that the Nepal government has adopted severe measures to prevent conversions to Christianity-- with reading or preaching the Scripture now punishable by 3 to 6 years in prison. . . and already, more than 20 Christians have been imprisoned and denied legal aid.

But In Nepal...

HELP FOR BUDGET BIND?

The budget bind continues at national/international headquarters. . . and as a possible help a church-wide system of planning, budgeting and evaluating mission programs has been called for by H. Richard Miller, Milwaukee, Wis. attorney who chairs the General Assembly Mission Council.

Some Needs

As illustrations of urgent needs, Mr. Miller spoke of supplements to retired ministers not receiving adequate pension benefits. . . continued support for institutions providing education for minorities. . . enlargement of the ongoing program for the Self-Development of People. "This Council," he declared, "must lead the church to a responsible financial policy, and it must accept the accountability, as well as the responsibility, for that policy."

MERGER DUE IN INDIA

United Methodists in India are at last expected to join the Church of North India-- a united church formed in 1970 through the merger of Anglicans, Presbyterians, Congregationalists, and others with a combined membership of 1.3 million. It was thought that the Methodists, who number 6,000,000, would also be part of the original merger. . . but they opted out. . . . Now, after a ruling by their Judicial Council and some fresh negotiating, a Nov. 29 date has been set for the Methodists to join the Church of North India.

CRISIS MINISTRIES

Telephone "crisis" ministries now operate in 50 metropolitan areas in the U.S.A.-- with all the call-in centers being church-related, though the ministries are nonsectarian. . . and from the way these ministries have grown their expansion to another 50 areas is expected in the next few years, according to Rev. Robert E. Larson, Jr., director of CONTACT Teleministries, U.S.A. in Harrisburg.

To be certified, a center must function 24 hours a day. . . live coverage of the phones by volunteers trained to help people with troubles-- drugs . . . loneliness. . . suicidal desires-- whatever. There are now some 5,000 trained volunteers in the U.S.A., backed by professional staffs and consultants. . . . United Presbyterians were among the early leaders in establishing these ministries.

RELATION WITH INDIANS

An open, supportive approach toward the many groups in American Indian communities is being urged by the Consulting Panel on Indian Ministries-- authorized by General Assembly and headed by Gene Wilson of Wright City, Oklahoma. . . while the United Presbyterian Health, Education and Welfare Association has called for federal and state investigations of the causes behind Indian demonstrations that lead to violence-- and has also granted $3,000 to help Indian educators testify on behalf of funds for Indian education voted by Congress but impounded by President Nixon.

Open Stance

United Presbyterian agencies have not involved themselves with Indian movement groups such as the American Indian Movement-- leaders at Wounded Knee-- but have maintained an open attitude toward the various groups and their views of Indian grievances.

SOUTH AFRICA-MOVE TOWARD UNDERSTANDING

The Presbyterian Church in Southern Africa. . . Bantu Presbyterian Church . . . Tsonga Presbyterian Church-- all in the Republic of South Africa-- have agreed with five other churches of the Reformed heritage to take some concrete steps toward understanding. . . moving from loosely-structured discussions to more official consultations in a spirit marked by "cordiality and a real desire to make progress," according to a dispatch from the World Alliance of Reformed Churches.

STUDENTS GIVE TO IFCO

At Westminster College, members of the student body, faculty and administration have given $1,200 to the work of the Interreligious Foundation for Community Organization-- an independent body that has had United Presbyterian and other church support, and that works for organization and self-determination at the local level. . . long-range efforts rather than "instant solutions," in the words of IFCO Executive Director Lucius Walker, Jr.

HUGE RELIEF PROGRAM ENDS

The wind up of the worldwide church relief effort for Bangladesh has been announced by the World Council of Churches-- which reported that since January of 1972, church agencies channeled some $13.5 million through the Bangladesh Ecumenical Relief and Rehabilitation Service. . . and keep in mind that $s given to church relief agencies are often multiplied many times (see March Newsletter, Pg. 4).

Churches Take Over

Now churches in Bangladesh have taken over responsibility for their part in development work, and a new group-- the Christian Commission for Development in Bangladesh-- is already working on a variety of projects, such as weaving. . . housing. . . crop protection. . . training for women . . . and is working on long-range plans for health education and the delivery of health services.

FAMINE RELIEF NOW

A famine has struck neighboring India, and CROP-- the U.S.A. Community Hunger Appeal of Church World Service-- has obtained and shipped to India 1.5 million pounds of wheat valued at $89,000. . . with the wheat to be rationed at 10 pounds per person per month. . . . United Presbyterians are among those supporting Church World Service.

CHILD-CARE IN NEBRASKA

United Presbyterian churches in Lincoln are providing child-care facilities for some 80 low-income student families at the university-- with about 20 percent of these families being from overseas or from minority groups. . . and the child care is virtually free, while staff for the program is composed of students in work-study programs. The program is being supported by the United Ministries in Higher Education, in which United Presbyterians participate.

CUBAN CHURCH SPEAKS OUT

The Reformed Presbyterian Church in Cuba-- at its seventh national assembly earlier this year-- denounced the assassination of Dr. Amilcar Cabral, general secretary of the African Independence Party in Guinea Bissau and the Cape Verde Islands, as "part of the war of extermination waged by Portugal" against independence leaders and people in its colonies. . . . About three months before his assassination, Dr. Cabral on the floor of the United Nations thanked churches and other groups for understanding and support toward the struggle of people still dominated by colonial rule.

The Cuban Presbyterians based their statement on the "tradition of the Calvinist faith as expressed in our confessions". . . and also cited the Confession of 1967, UPCUSA.

DUKE THEOLOGICAL UNION 1962

Dear Friends in Mission:

NEW STYLES IN MISSION

That Salvation Today conference in Bangkok-- reported to you in February -- has begun to make an impact on churches across the world . . . and will probably influence our own mission policies in time, after restructuring settles down.

At Bangkok

To recap for a minute: The Salvation Today conference was where a lot of leading liberals and conservative evangelicals from every continent hammered out a basic area of agreement . . . found they could work together and enrich each other. "Bangkok showed us the broad meaning of salvation today in the liberation of mankind from every form of slavery; it pointed us also to the very specific meaning of salvation through the cross of Jesus Christ," in the words of Rev. Emilio Castro, who heads the World Council's mission and evangelism committee.

And After

Now a tangible effect: strengthening the World Council's program for Ecumenical Sharing of Personnel-- a kind of missionary talent pool, on which churches across the world can draw and to which they contribute. This program is getting more attention and has had its budget significantly increased.

Our Church

Harmonizing with this is a view of mission expressed by Rev. J. Oscar McCloud, head of the new Program Agency, when he wrote at General Assembly in Omaha in late May: "One of the ways in which we make concrete the one worldwide mission of the church on six continents is through a new program in mission in which we deliberately become the receiver as well as the sender of mission personnel . . . prepared to confess that there is a ministry and a witness which church persons from Latin America, Asia and Africa can provide for us."

ACTIONS AT ASSEMBLY

The General Assembly late in May in Omaha voted to rejoin the Consultation on Church Union (COCU) . . . helped the emerging power of women and young people in the church . . . adopted some basic policies on relations with older people-- these being a few of the highlights.

Especially timely right now-- in view of some Senate allegations that the government was preparing to spy on ordinary citizens-- is a major statement on "The Preservation of Privacy" adopted by the Assembly . . . with the statement affirming that "the ability to maintain one's own life space is basic to human existence in vital community."

The statement condemned the fact that "increasingly personal and Associational privacy is undermined." It defined privacy as "freedom from interference, opportunity to grow, liberty to control what others may know about oneself. Privacy is the right to be left alone or to join others without being watched."

COCU Is Rejoined

That vote to rejoin COCU-- 453 to 259-- came after spirited debate . . . and our soundings suggest that many commissioners were favorably impressed by what COCU has done this past year. COCU "publicly burned" the proposed plan of union that aroused ire at the Denver Assembly last year, and is placing significant emphasis on local discussions and work. . . . The Assembly also renewed-- by unanimous vote-- its commitment to reunion with the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. (southern).

Women And Youth

The Assembly approved establishing a new Council on Women and the Church . . . and mandated a two-year study "of the biblical and theological interpretations of God which are not limited by masculine or other exclusivist language," with an eye to possibly revising language in the Worshipbook. . . .Toward youth, the Assembly opted for their wider decision-making in the life of the church and its Assembly, and approved an emergency fund to help bring youth to the Assembly.

For Self-Development

In regard to the National Committee on the Self-Development of People-- potentially a hot one, some thought-- the Assembly approved most sections of its report unanimously.

The most controversial section passed by the heavy majority of 438 to 219 after vigorous debate. . . . This section approved a second grant of $75,000 to "a small group of Colombian social scientists dedicated to putting practical social science research to the use of communities in need" (a description of La Rosca by those who have studied this social research and action group in Colombia).

For Older People

Affirming that "the mark of a culture is the way it treats its older people," the Assembly approved basic policies and guidelines for work with the elderly . . . stressing that "persons of age have the same essential rights and requirements which all people possess: the right to maximum self-determination, privacy of person and thought, and personal dignity." . . .And the Assembly also expressed its concern by urging a minimum pension of $4,776 for a retired couple and $2,629 for a single person-- the funding question referred to GAMC.

$$ Up; Not Members

The church set some new highs and lows last year-- total contributions climbing to $372,854,567, a new high and nearly $4.4 million higher than 1971 . . . while membership dropped by 104,612 to a 1972 total of 2,916,757-- perhaps the largest one year membership decline in the denomination's history.

For Lay Evangelism

Special attention to lay evangelism to "facilitate effective communication of faith by all persons in the church" was approved by the Assembly, which also suggested the formation "of small groups to achieve personal witness and spiritual growth" . . . and approved continuation of the Evangelism Associates program initiated by the former Division of Evangelism.

Focus On Family Life

The Assembly called for "immediate high priority to the development of a comprehensive and concentrated program on Christian family life education" . . . and specifically urged the Program Agency to develop a design that will "help prevent breakdown of families, heal divided families and support and strengthen family life . . . emphasizing the distinctive contribution of the Christian faith."

To implement this, the Assembly suggested workshop retreats in local areas . . . and developing video taped programs to express the nature, principles and methods of strengthening family life. Our probings found a good deal of anxiety among commissioners on this one-- triggered by such factors as rapid change in our culture . . . the frequent movement of middle class families . . . the changing role of women . . . young people living together without marriage. The anxiety was channeled into an affirmation of Christian family life and an omnibus of suggestions by the Assembly's Committee on Family Life.

Synod Of Northeast

That new Synod of the Northeast was voted-- the initial test coming by only a nine vote margin after 90 minutes of debate and three years of study. Later, the formal vote approving the new synod was 383 to 315. . . . The new organization brings together three historic areas-- New Jersey, New York and all the New England states-- into one regional synod.

Study Of Colonies

The problem of countries in southern Africa seething under the heel of oppressive governments-- one that we've dealt with before-- may well be the subject of a special study. At least, the Assembly urged the Program Agency to prepare such a study in light of the fact that "Christian teaching proclaims liberty to the oppressed."

The Assembly also urged that the U.S. government reconsider loans and grants to Portugal, keeper of colonies in southern Africa, and that the U.S. "begin to implement its official policy of self-determination for the people of the Portuguese colonies."

Special Statements

"We declare today that for any particular government to profane that system of government under law for purposes of convenience, narrow political interest or personal gain is the worst kind of corruption. It is a subversion of the national purpose by those called to be agents of that purpose."

On Watergate

So said the Assembly on the Watergate affair . . . and it strongly affirmed "the principle of a government under law," noting that "we as Presbyterians contributed in this country to the creation of a form of government under law where the basic limits of power and the guarantees of protection are enshrined in a written constitution. . . . In so doing we have affirmed the majesty and contribution of the law to the realization of justice and well-being in the nation."

On Wounded Knee And Indochina

The Assembly also called for an on-the-scene study of the Wounded Knee situation by the Senate's Subcommittee on Indian Affairs . . . And on Indochina the Assembly called on all parties to observe the cease-fire . . . struck at North Vietnamese intervention in Cambodia and Laos . . . and deplored as "inhumane and possibly unconstitutional the continued U.S. bombing in Cambodia and Laos."

Moderator-- Pastor Marsh

You'll be hearing more about him-- Rev. Clinton M. Marsh, elected as Moderator from a field of five candidates on the second ballot . . . an Omaha clergyman with experience in Africa, and the second black to hold this office.

Significance-- not race this time . . . both Mr. Marsh and seasoned observers discount this factor. . . . Strong emphasis on reconciliation seems one factor in his election, mentioned by commissioners, plus a warm sense of humor and pithy answers to questions:

On Watergate: "I feel dirty-- because I am part of a society that made this possible. . . . Watergate might teach the President something about amnesty." On the role of women: "I suggest that women begin to realize their power, and to use it. Quit asking men for justice; take it."

Visit From Ethiopia

An hour of pageantry-- warm greetings and welcomes-- came with the visit and address to the Assembly by His Holiness Abuna Theophilos, Patriarch of the Ethiopian Orthodox Church-- the first visit of an Ethiopian patriarch to the U.S.A. and to the governing body of one of its churches . . . significant for helping to cement recently-evolved ecumenical relations with the Orthodox church and the strong Presbyterian mission in Ethiopia.

GRADUATE THEOLOGICAL UNION 1962

Dear Friends in Mission:

FAITH GROWS — Amid the political crises. . .the restructuring of church agencies. . . the controversy between church liberals and conservatives--be assured that the faith and Church of Christ continue to grow in strength across the world.

In U.S.S.R. — "The church continues to grow through new conversions" to the Baptist community in Barnaul, Siberia, a recent report concludes. . .with this happening despite persecution, arrests, and harassment of worship services. Other reports indicate continued theological debate in the Soviet Union. . .while in neighboring Czechoslovakia, occupied by Soviet forces on August 21, 1968, another report finds that despite a new offensive against religion, "many parents continue to request religious instruction for their children."

In Africa — The Christian faith continues to grow in depth and strength in Africa--as well as rapidly gaining adherents--a good example coming from the Rev. and Mrs. Bruce Gannaway, fraternal workers at the Theological College in Nkhoma, Malawi:

"In our local congregation of 3,800 members there are 50 elders and 50 deacons. Related to this church are 15 prayer houses in surrounding villages. . . .Each elder is responsible for one prayer group. He is also responsible for the Sunday services in the prayer houses, Sunday school, weekly prayer meetings, organizing and teaching catechumen classes for new church members, visitation in the homes, and liaison between village people and the ordained pastor to communicate the needs of the people.

". . .Before admittance to church membership, one must attend a catechumen class for 2-1/2 years in his village, and then come into the church here for instruction under the ordained pastor. . ."All of which involves a good deal of personal development. Some 150 new members are received each quarter, the Gannaways report.

In Korea — Fraternal worker Rev. Allen D. Clark, writing on the eve of his retirement, reports 55 mass baptisms in the Korean armed forces--1,130 servicemen baptized in 1970, then 15,672 in 1971, and 43,788 in 1972. . . with these baptisms being one indication of the surging numerical growth of the church in Korea. Some committed pastors and laymen, in the face of government restrictions, have become exponents of uncensored discussion and social reform. . .thus risking arrest.

In Alaska

The unspectacular but solid development of Presbyterianism among the Eskimo people of the Arctic Parish is boosted by a leadership training program directed by the Rev. Ralph H. Weeks of Anchorage. . .while Miss Mary Tener adapts church school materials to the native culture.

Local Struggle

Currently residents of this area are struggling to maintain their local self-government--the North Slope Borough, formed early last year after official state approval. . .then upheld by the state's Superior Court in deciding against a protest petition filed by seven oil companies. Now the oil firms have obtained an injunction against taxing assets that represent about three-fourths of the borough's assessed valuation--while the tax money is needed to support education and other essential services.

Until the state's Supreme Court decides the issue, the borough depends heavily on the sale of revenue anticipation notes in order to function. . . .Purchasers include the General Assembly Mission Council, which after thorough study and supportive actions by presbytery and synod approved buying $150,000 of these bonds to help North Slope people. . .clearly another church effort to aid self-development.

TEN NAMED TO COCU

A delegation of ten persons--chaired by former Moderator Lois H. Stair of Waukesha, Wisc.--has been appointed to represent the United Presbyterian Church in the Consultation on Church Union (COCU). . .this action by Moderator Clinton M. Marsh supporting the decision by the 185th General Assembly last May in Omaha to rejoin the Consultation, which is now moving slowly and cautiously. . .next plenary meeting scheduled for Nov. 4-8, 1974.

HYMNS ON ECOLOGY

Coming your way--16 newly-written hymns on ecology themes, approved by the Hymn Society of America after a panel of nine judges reviewed more than 500 new texts and made the selections--published under the general title of "The Stewardship of the Environment". . .available for $1.00 from Hymn Society of America, Room 242, 475 Riverside Drive, New York, N.Y. 10027.

LATIN CHURCH URGES REFORM

Major portions of the Roman Catholic Church have been stiffening their resistance to repressive governments in Latin America and urging reforms--with recent examples coming from Brazil and Uruguay.

In Brazil

An official document by Brazilian bishops has charged that about 100,000 Indians are in the process of being exterminated, and denounced "discrimination in favor of big landowners and against peasant families, for business management against workers, for whites against blacks, for pro-regime political parties against the opposition, for men as opposed to women." The bishops demanded for ordinary citizens "the right to legal defense, in view of the absence of a habeas corpus provision," and "the right not to be subjected to systematic political and social propaganda."

In Uruguay

Members of the Company of Jesus (Jesuits) in Uruguay have committed themselves to human liberation and justice. . .their declaration saying in part: "It does not seem possible that the Christian message can be given outside the process of liberation, which supposes an economic, political and cultural transformation, in view of our dependence."

WITNESS IN HOUSING

Sparked by Presbyterians, an Oregon group called PAD has finally made a start on relieving the housing shortage with Rainbow Village, an 80-unit garden apartment project with modest rents and a rent supplement program for 16 low-income families. Modular kitchen/bathroom units, built in a Seattle factory, were used. Efforts toward such a project began in 1969--but "proposed projects in Cottage Grove and Eugene were either turned down or taken to court amidst a storm of controversy and opposition from realtors, landlords, and frightened residents of the project neighborhood," reports elder Frank C. Carlton of First Presbyterian Church in Cottage Grove, a member of the PAD board. . .which is chaired by pastor Hugh D. Peniston of the Cottage Grove church.

LAY LEADERSHIP

Lay leaders play a strong role in many churches overseas--a fact that keeps cropping up in items that cross our desk.

One recent example comes from Venezuela, where the administrative council of the Presbyterian Church is composed entirely of laymen. . .most pastors also work at other occupations in order to support themselves . . .and "the pastoral load is being picked up increasingly by concerned laymen," fraternal workers Bob and Betty May Seel report from Caracas.

Then from the Philippines, fraternal workers Bob and Kari Malcolm report that "over one hundred churches continue to prosper under lay leadership in the Davao provinces. We have only five seminary-trained men," they add.

MORE ON INVESTMENTS

Watch for more challenges to big corporations doing business in southern Africa. The churches spearheaded these challenges, and now they're gaining momentum. . .most often taking the form of stockholder resolutions asking the corporations to disclose wage and personnel policies toward various workers--the idea being to expose inequities and help get a living wage for the black majority as well as others.

Efforts Gain Allies

Tim Smith, who directs the Church Project on U.S. Investments in Southern Africa, said in a brief evaluation: "Public discussion has grown, and more universities, foundations, and other institutional investors voted on church-sponsored resolutions and wrote management expressing their views than ever before."

Tim described the coalition, which includes United Presbyterians, as committed to "challenging U.S. corporations and the U.S. public to face the implications of investing in white minority regimes like South Africa and Angola.

One Result

"One by-product of church and public pressure is that numerous companies have taken a small first step by raising wages for African workers past the starvation level."

CWS AIDS IN FAMINE

Church World Service is helping to aid people in Central and West Africa afflicted by a famine caused by a long drought. . .the agency dispatching $50,000 worth of special medicines and food for children this spring to Niger. . .and now exploring projects for well-drilling and restoration of cattle-grazing lands and herds.

NEW AT MENAUL

Construction is going forward on a new media center at Menaul School in Albuquerque, N.M.--the center to be a modern, two-story facility funded by a matching-gifts effort.

NOTES ON PEOPLE

-Woman Chaplain

The Rev. Florence Dianna Pohlman, a United Presbyterian, began training in July as the first woman to serve on active duty as a chaplain with the U.S. Armed Forces, having graduated from Princeton Seminary in January, been ordained at National Presbyterian Church in Washington--and commissioned a lieutenant (j.g.) in the U.S. Navy.

-Seminary President

The Rev. Raymond V. Kearns, Jr., has begun service as acting president of Louisville (Ky.) Presbyterian Theological Seminary. . .Dr. Kearns coming to this post from his work since 1966 as associate general secretary of COEMAR, in which he won a reputation nationally and internationally as an ecclesiastical statesman.

Dear Friends in Mission:

TROUBLE IN KOREA

"PARK HYUNG KYU AND KWON GIVEN TWO YEAR PRISON SENTENCES NAM ONE YEAR AND HALF LEE ONE YEAR / WILSON WILL SEND DETAILS-- PHILLIPS"

That cable was sent Sept. 27 by Jim Phillips, fraternal worker at Tokyo Union Theological Seminary, to Newt Thurber-- formerly of COEMAR and now serving with the new Program Agency, with responsibility for mission in East Asia. Mr. Park pastors First Presbyterian Church in Seoul, of The Presbyterian Church in the Republic of Korea, assisted by Mr. Kwon.

The detail that followed-- as deadline for this newsletter came-- was that the prison sentences were suspended. Despite their parole Mr. Park and his colleagues are appealing the original sentences, on the recommendation of the Special Investigating Committee of the National Council of Churches of Korea.

These Christians and others-- 15 in all-- were arrested following an ecumenical Easter sunrise service where 2,000 leaflets were distributed among the 100,000 attending. . .the leaflets declaring in part that "resurrection of democracy is liberation of the people." The arrested Christians were charged with "conspiracy to foment insurrection." The real cause of their arrest seems to be helping slum dwellers organize for their own betterment and the establishment of grass-roots democracy. Most were Presbyterians. . .and Korean Presbyterians-- like those in Colonial America-- tend to be conservative theologically. . .with some showing an activist concern for human liberty.

The suspended sentences are viewed by observers as a result of ecumenical church concern expressed over the arrests and imprisonment.

MORE EVANGELISM

Verbally spreading the gospel of Christ. . .this often quiet dimension of mission continues in Korea, Cameroun, Indonesia, Colombia, all regions of the world. A recent example comes from Thailand.

Three years ago a man and his wife came to McCormick Hospital in Chiang Mai with their six-year-old son near death's door. . .and during his long recovery they visited him often and became familiar with the gospel. Upon the boy's recovery they invited a Christian worker to teach about Jesus Christ back in their home in Lotus Swamp Village. In following months a small evangelism team encountered keen interest. . .and harassment-- rock throwing, gunshots, blocked roads.

The team responded with the gospel and supplies and skills to heal the sick and injured. Finally one of their chief persecutors made a profession of faith, requested baptism, and gave land for the first worship center there-- simply a thatched roof of leaves on poles. Now comes word from Dr. and Mrs. Edwin McDaniel at McCormick Hospital that a second, more spacious and comfortable worship center has been constructed at Lotus Swamp Village. . .and the ministry there continues to grow.

CRUNCH IN SERVICE FUNDS

Be advised that a crunch has come to many voluntary agencies-- including those initiated by concerned Christians-- as a result of government funds drying up. A recent example comes from the Christian Service Ministry that United and U.S. Presbyterians operate jointly in the Kentucky mountains. This summer the Millstone Sewing Center, a long-time friend of the Service Ministry, lost its entire staff as a result of cuts in OEO funding. The Sewing Center had been providing clothing at no cost or minimal cost to 5,000 destitute families a year.

"As programs such as these break down, the need to maintain the Christian Service Ministry appears even more evident. The private social agency is now more important than ever," Bob Hatch of the Service Ministry urges.

FLOODS HIT PAKISTAN AND INDIA

Floods that struck Pakistan constitute a "major disaster" according to World Council of Churches' relief officer Stan Mitton, who flew over the hardest-hit area at the end of August and adds up the toll: 10 million persons homeless. . .cotton crops worth $30 million lost. . .total loss set at more than $250 million. The leadership of all Christian churches in Pakistan has been mobilized in two emergency action groups-- in Lahore and Karachi.

The Floods

Floods have also hit northern India. . .and John Rollins reports from Frances Newton Hospital in the Punjab that after two years of drought "great havoc" has been caused along the banks of five rivers in the region. A team of doctors and nurses treated 10,400 people during a recent 14-day flood relief campaign. . .and relief supplies have helped them distribute 59,000 tablets of medicine and tubes of eye and skin ointment, as well as immunize many against cholera and tetanus.

And Drought

From roughly a thousand miles to the south, Bob Ramer writes from Sangli Industrial School in Maharashtra State that the drought has at last broken. . .rains promise good crops and an end to famine in the months ahead . . .and meanwhile relief work and the drilling of new wells are under way, paid for partly by United Presbyterian contributions.

CHRISTIAN STUDENT CENTER

Another note on evangelism-- low key, this time-- comes from Broadway Presbyterian Church near Columbia University on New York's upper west side. . .the word being that the church has opened a student center on two floors of the Kennedy Apartments and made accommodations available to 17 full-time students. . .the purpose being to foster "commitment to the Lordship of Jesus Christ" and "witnessing and serving others in the community."

Known as the Upper West Side Student Christian Residence, the project is supervised by the Rev. Abigail Evans of the Broadway Church. . .and elder Bill Mayer serves as part-time resident counselor.

NEW VOLUNTEERS

Volunteers continue to play a strong and creative role in the worldwide mission of the United Presbyterian Church. . .the program called Volunteers in Mission. Twenty-one assignments made in September include the following:

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Dunn of St. Paul Presbyterian Church in Johnston, Iowa going to the Presbyterian Home for Children in Farmington, Missouri to help with maintenance. . .Ms. Judy Housekeeper of Rose Hill Presbyterian Church in Kirkland, Washington going to Seoul, Korea to serve as secretary/hostess in a servicemen's center. . .and Dr. Jim Albright of First Presbyterian Church in Aurora, Illinois going to serve as an orthopedic surgeon at McCormick Hospital in Chiang Mai, Thailand.

Nor are all the 5,000-plus volunteers that are fielded each year (most for short terms) members of Presbyterian churches. The September assignments include Paul Perreault of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church in Lincoln, New Hampshire, who goes to help with the recreation program at Wasatch Academy in Mt. Pleasant, Utah. . .plus members of the United Church of Christ. . .Episcopal Church. . .and Christian Reformed Church.

YOUTH MINISTRY GROWS

Pittsburgh's North Hills Youth Ministry-- which aims to "present the claims of Jesus Christ to young people" with church affiliation nil or inactive-- is expanding its work with major remodeling at the coffee house on Cumberland Road. . .with the expanded ministry to have eight facets, from Bible study and evangelism to drug education and community service-- as well as a continued coffee house program.

KENYA-- NEW SCHOOL

A new school is rising from the dry land of sand and thornbush in northern Kenya. Destitute and plagued by famine, the northern tribes have been helped by relief work through the National Christian Council of Kenya. . .and now fraternal worker Diane Mosman reports the development of the new secondary school that will help fill the hunger for education in this least-developed area of Kenya. Money for the project comes from the Protestant Central Agency for Development Aid in Germany. . .and Diane and husband Steve are guiding the project-- supported by your mission dollars.

SOME AID FARM WORKERS

California jails bulged this summer with Roman Catholic laymen, nuns and priests, according to a report of the United Methodist Church by Elaine Magalis about Cesar Chavez' farm worker movement and the jailing of people who came to its aid. . .but Elaine notes that Protestant denominations-- except for the United Church of Christ-- supplied few or no volunteers. Support for this farm worker movement has been approved at United Presbyterian General Assemblies-- though the subject has caused sharp controversy and debate.

LATIN REALITIES

Try to think for a minute about reality in Latin America on its own terms

. . .with two "real things" in Latin America needing constant underlining: ecumenical relations, and poverty versus wealth.

"One of my childhood memories in Santa Catarina was the attempted boycott promoted by the Bishop of Lajes against my Dad," UPC representative James Wright reports from Brazil-- recalling the reality that Protestant ministers faced. . .while just recently "I sat at an intimate supper table in the company of two cardinals, two archbishops and two bishops," Jim continues-- reporting the reality of today. . .a swift and almost total change in the ecumenical scene.

The poor are numerous and getting poorer, the rich are few and getting richer-- this also is a fact of life in many parts of Latin America. . . and lay behind the election of Salvadore Allende in Chile. . .where now the military junta is executing his supporters and repressing freedom. Both of these are basic realities that mission must deal with.

B.N.M. HISTORY

A history of the 50 years of the Board of National Missions (1923-1972) will be written by Dr. Kenneth G. Neigh, who headed the work of the Board from 1959 until last year. . .and now going to Princeton Theological Seminary as a Senior Research Fellow. The history he plans will not only give facts and figures, but will also interpret changes in American culture and their effect on mission. . .with special emphasis on the work of the Board during the last 20 years, which has never been chronicled.

Vol. 4 November, 1973 No. 9

Dear Friends in Mission:

NEW STYLE IN MISSION

We keep hearing questions and rumblings about what missionaries are doing-- some confusion here-- reflecting the fact that the role of the missionary is changing. . .more emphasis on strategic frontiers and less on geographic frontiers. United Presbyterian fraternal worker Jim Buyers outlines the new role in a letter from Brazil:

"In this second missionary century the true missionary must be committed to the guiding principle of John the Baptist in his relation to Jesus Christ: 'He must increase, but I must decrease.'

"Collectively, this means that no young church will accept ecclesiastical imperialism from North America or Europe. Individually, this means that a national church anywhere in the world in deciding its own destiny may often assign the missionary to a strategic frontier rather than to a geographic outpost.

Role of Servant

"In the servant role, a missionary couple may still be assigned to 'church planting' among Indians, or lepers, or 'natives'-- but that couple's location and type of outreach will be determined on the field by national leadership. And the missionary's permanent assignment remains, 'to work himself out of a job.'"

More Ecumenical

Also, "denominational barriers in many parts of the world are not as great as they have been in the States. Overseas Christians are seemingly more aware of the common enemy of secular indifference. . .An evangelistic campaign, or publishing project, or radio series may involve the evangelical community without asking if the 'help' is Presbyterian, or Methodist, or Baptist. Or as one Catholic teacher explained to my daughter's religion class, 'Boys and girls, God is not a Catholic.'"

This is the final issue of Mission Newsletter, which has been delivered free to a mailing list of some 75,000 Presbyterian leaders. Budget pressures and good stewardship necessitate using a more economical means for keeping church members informed. Starting with the January 1974 issue of A.D., you will find Mission Newsletter combined with the 4-page News & Notes for the Session-- a carefully prepared resource for Presbyterians who want the latest word on mission news and church actions in concise, direct style. Letter Exchange also has been discontinued as a separate publication, much of its content now appearing in A.D. "Mission Briefs." Thank you for understanding these changes.

HELP FOR RETIRED

More help coming for retired missionaries, pastors and other church workers, and surviving spouses struggling on small pensions. . .and it's coming from you, via the 1973 Christmas Offering-- mandated by the General Assembly this year to help bolster inadequate pensions.

Now Elder Paul J. Cupp of the Bryn Mawr (Pa.) U.P. Church has been appointed chairman of the major gifts campaign. . .while staff will be directed by the Rev. Wesley C. Baker, secretary of the Board of Pensions.

WOMAN HEADS NCC

Another "male barrier" comes down. . .this time the leadership of the National Council of Churches, where Ms. Claire Randall has been elected to succeed retiring general secretary Dr. R. H. Edwin Espy. A theologian, Presbyterian ecumenist, native of San Antonio-- and a good golfer-- Ms. Randall is associate executive director of Church Women United.

OUTREACH IN JAPAN

Continuing theological education for clergy and lay people has been launched by Tsurukawa Rural Institute in Japan, fraternal workers Dick and Mary Norton advise from Tokyo. "We are trying to devise new approaches which will place emphasis on 'team ministries,' relating clergy and laity to the single task of serving Christ in this land," they write, adding that "our fellow Presbyterian missionary, Arthur Kamitsuka, is helping to direct this new program."

PROGRAM IN BRAZIL

From the crowded shacks of Ceilandia in Brazil fraternal workers John and Jean Miller write of teaching skills to teenage girls-- with one result as follows: "The girls' mothers were soon complaining, 'And when are you going to do something for us?'

"Exchanging ideas with team members, they strongly voiced their needs: a sewing class, candy making and cake decorating to augment family income, first aid, nutrition, and sex education for themselves and their daughters."

This last request resulted in "a group of volunteers-- several nurses, a woman intern, and a gynecologist meeting with the mothers and daughters every Saturday to talk about first aid, nutrition, or sex education -- using a vast assortment of visual aids."

FREE SPEECH FOR OPPOSITION

The right of Carl McIntire to vent his views-- which have often been verbal brickbats aimed at the United Presbyterian Church and work it supports-- is defended editorially in the November issue of A.D. magazine. Mr. McIntire's radio voice, WXUR, was silenced in July by government order. . .and the A.D. editorial says in part:

"Notwithstanding the seriousness of Mr. McIntire's attacks on individuals and groups, we have an uneasy feeling that his freedom of speech has been infringed." Noting its strong disagreement with Mr. McIntire's views, the editorial also affirms that the U.S. Constitution "protects the rights of those with whom we disagree."

ECUMENICAL EMPHASIS.

The flow of news here indicates that ecumenical efforts have been quietly increasing on the home front as well as overseas. . .recent examples coming from New York and Alaska.

In New York

Services to children on the south side of Troy, N.Y. are being expanded in a project developed by four Presbyterian and two Roman Catholic churches in the area. . .their combined efforts this year serving hundreds of children in a section characterized by 16 percent poverty families plus many low-income families.

In Alaska

Presbyterians and Episcopalians cooperated this summer in an Eskimo-Indian youth conference on Communicating the Faith-- held at Harding Lake Camp in Alaska. . .and Cecil Corbett and Ivan Makil of Cook Christian Training School in Tempe, Arizona traveled north to provide the leadership.

REFLECTIONS BY VOLUNTEER

Plastic surgeon Richard L. Dakin of Greenbrae, Calif., has shared some reflections on missionary doctors after returning from a brief tour of volunteer service this summer at McCormick Hospital in Chiang Mai, Thailand:

On Missionaries

"The most meaningful part of my experience, I think, was seeing how happy medical missionaries seem to be in their work. Whether it was John and Magdalene Bissett working under very austere conditions in the Leprosarium, or John and Betsy Guyer and their enthusiasm in teaching medicine and the basic sciences, or Ed and Charlotte McDaniel with their planned parenthood and school trustee activities, all seemed completely and justifiably sure that they were doing needed work.

and Children

"The children of missionary families seem to respect their parents' activities, and I felt this contrasted very favorably with a resentful attitude toward parents' activities that one often finds in teenagers at home."

MIGRANT WORKERS AIDED

A program for migrant farm workers is being carried forward in Maumee Valley Presbytery in Ohio by Bowling Green Presbyterian Church. . . working out of the Wood County Head Start Program.

Sixty-two children are enrolled in a day-care nursery, freeing mothers to work and contribute to family incomes. . .while the children receive a program of mental and physical development, with breakfast, lunch and vitamins, plus medical aid. Their parents come together in monthly meetings with program staff to discuss topics of importance to the parents.

OUTREACH IN SOUTHWEST

Presbyterian Medical Services, Inc. in the southwest has expanded its rural health delivery system by adding an emergency vehicle-- a new Dodge van that will operate out of Embudo Presbyterian Hospital. . . with the interior of the van being altered and furnished with special equipment, including a resuscitator and eventually an oxygen system.

In another outreach-- in northern New Mexico-- P.M.S. has hammered out the Mesa Health Plan to provide another flexible program of health care for a rural area population. Staff has been working toward a contract with the state to provide comprehensive health services to Medicaid recipients on a prepaid capitation basis.

LADYBUGS FOR AFRICA

May sound crazy-- but a bit of the money you've contributed to disaster relief is being used to buy ladybugs for a sub-Sahara section of Africa . . .the story going like this:

Five drought years have dried up the grazing and watering holes for animals, main source of food and income for people in this area. U.S. satellite surveys indicated that water lay close under the surface in one of the stricken nations, Niger, so Church World Service contributed to well-drilling.

Meanwhile, the date palm provided the main alternative to animals as a source of food and income for these nomadic people. . .until the date palms became infested by insects that consume the chlorophyll in the palm leaves, eventually killing the trees. The answer to these chomping predators was not pesticides-- but ladybugs, those little spotted insects that children tell to "fly away home." The ladybugs are being imported from Iran, and each one consumes about 400 of the harmful insects per day. . .thus saving the date palms from destruction.

N. VIETNAM PROTESTANTS

"Protestant church life in North Vietnam continues unabated despite the destruction of church buildings by American bombers," according to an on-the-scenes report by a western clergyman serving with the World Council of Churches. He notes that the Evangelical Church of North Vietnam has some 10,000 members served by 26 pastors and preachers active throughout the country-- full-time pastors salaried by their congregations-- with two Sunday services plus an evangelistic service on Thursdays being usual.

Lutheran

GIRL OF THE MONTH

KAREN RAAUM, a 19-year old freshman at Central Washington State College, Ellensburg, has been selected as August's Lutheran Girl of the Month.

Miss Raaum is a music major at Central and plans to become a high school teacher. She is currently reigning as Miss Ellensburg.

A member of First Lutheran Church in that city, she has served as an officer in the Luther League both at the congregation and conference level. Miss Raaum also is a member of the choir and the Lutheran Student Association.

She was nominated by her pastor, the Rev. Silas E. Erickson.

Lutherans Move to Help Middle East War Victims

ALL AMERICAN and other international staff members of the Lutheran World Federation's extensive refugee aid program in Jordan escaped injury while remaining at their posts during the Arab-Israeli war.

LWF officials said the federation's Augusta Victoria Hospital on the Mount of Olives is believed to have been severely damaged but remained open and is still operating at about 50 per cent capacity.

During its annual meeting in Waterloo, Ont., Canada, shortly after the cease fire, the LWF Executive Committee authorized a $1,500,000 appeal to meet needs which have arisen in the Middle East in the aftermath of the conflict. The next day a special letter announcing the appeal was on its way to the approximately 12,000 pastors of The American Lutheran Church and the Lutheran Church in America.

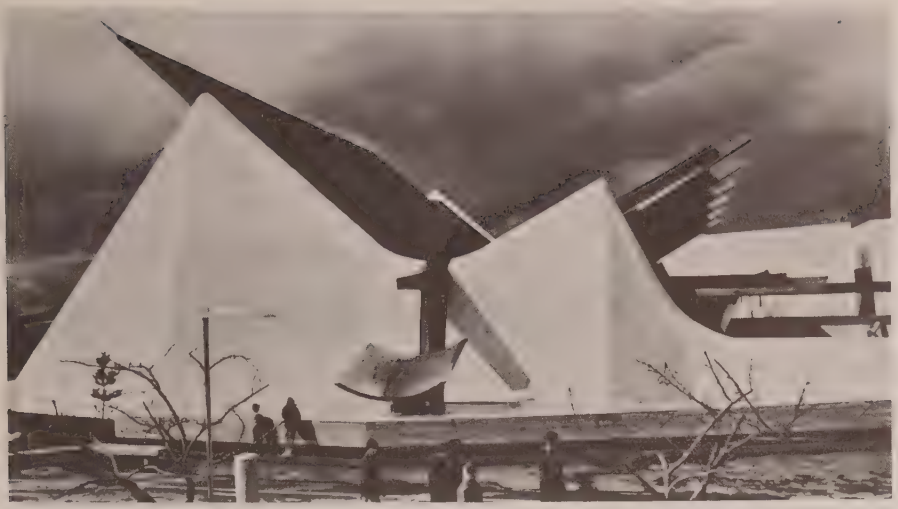
These two United States church bodies are among 73 LWF member churches in nearly 40 countries which represent 55,000,000 of the world's 75,000,000 Lutherans.

American members of the LWF Department of World Service staff in Jordan include the director of the Middle East office, Donald P. Scott of Menlo Park, Calif. He is a 34-year old layman of the Lutheran Church in America.

Other Americans are Robert J. Hoyle of Minneapolis, supervisor of material aid distribution, and Carl Onofrio, a former student at the Lutheran School of Theology, Chicago, serving as bookkeeper.

The international staff also includes Laimons P. Pavuls, 45-year-old Latvian who is administrator of Augusta Victoria Hospital, and two other members from Sweden.

Wives and children of staff members left the area and were in Geneva, LWF headquarters, awaiting further developments. There had been no word regarding Jordanians who were engaged in the aid program.



Augusta Victoria Hospital is part of a widespread LWF program started two decades ago to aid refugees in Jordan and Syria. Operated with a $500,000 annual budget, the program also includes material relief, mobile medical units, self-help and community development projects, and a variety of educational and vocational training facilities.

An additional $100,000 from a reserve fund has been authorized for emergency expenditures.

Dr. Fredrik A. Schiotz, LWF president, opened the Executive Committee's annual meeting with a prayer for the return of peace in the Middle East. "Perhaps God may out of the events of these recent weeks fashion a disposition to exchange the old armistice for a peace treaty," declared Dr. Schiotz who is also president of The American Lutheran Church.

UPPER FLOORS of Augusta Victoria Hospital shown rising high over the Mount of Olives, were believed to have been severely damaged during the Arab-Israeli war. The hospital is operated by the LWF Department of World Service.

Lutherans Cooperate in Unique Christian Witness at Expo

THE CHRISTIAN PAVILION at Expo 67, a unique venture in which Lutherans in Canada are cooperating, stands on the western shore of a small peanut-shaped island called Ile Notre-Dame.

Built on a half-acre site between the pavilions of Greece and the United Nations, the structure is among more than 100 spread across two islands and a peninsula in the Saint Lawrence River at Montreal.

Taking part in the venture, in addition to the Lutherans, are the Anglicans, Baptists, Greek Orthodox, Presbyterians, Roman Catholics, Ukrainian Greek Orthodox, and the United Church of Canada. The church bodies represent approximately 95 per cent of Canada's Christians.

The entrance features a large T-shaped cross, selected because of its lack of identification with any particular communion, and a garden. The building's exterior is concrete white, and its roof is sharply pitched and inverted.

The exhibit, largely audio-visual in nature, consists of three zones:

The first employs scores of still and moving pictures, prism-shaped blocks that produce different scenes, closed circuit television, and other devices designed to depict contemporary man.

An effort to portray the world of man is contained in the second zone. It also uses still photographs as well as a motion picture which bears the theme of the pavilion, "The Eighth Day," as its title.

The third zone involves a series of large, mural-type pictures along a 90-foot wall which are related to Biblical texts to show meaning and hope in Christ.

The exhibit confines traditional religious symbolism to the tau cross at the entrance. The cross also appears on the pavilion flag and on the identifying pins worn by the pavilion's hosts and hostesses.

Still photographs in the first zone range from portraits of children and adults to scenes from the office, the street, the beach, the theater, and elsewhere. Mirrors in their midst add the image of the visitors. Nearby along a ramp leading to the second zone, photography is used to depict such degradations as poverty and prejudice, sex deviation and narcotic addiction. The movie focuses on a half century of wars and their horrors.

Five wall-size photographs from the first zone, together with frequently changing illustrations above them, await visitors in the final zone. Biblical texts in English and French used with the pictures include:

—For us a Child is born. He is the Light of men.

—You do not live by bread alone. I come to bring you life, far more than before.

—He died for all that all might live. By this we know love.

—Why search for Me among the dead? I am with you always.

—You are called to freedom; now through love serve one another.

The Rev. H. Elmer Bartsch, a clergyman of The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod who serves as deputy commissioner of the pavilion, noted it has stirred some controversy.

"A few individuals have criticized us severely for presenting the negative so dramatically, and some have objected to the lack of clarity of the clear Gospel message," he stated. "Others have expressed delight."

Pastor Bartsch added that "the Christ whom the exhibit presents was certainly a controversial figure in history."

"Basically," the parish pastor observed, "the objective of the pavilion is to get the visitor to ask, 'How do I relate to Christ?' rather than to give him pat answers that he might get from an electronic device."

He said the exhibit appeared to be most popular among "the younger people who are oriented to television communication."

Construction of the pavilion began about a year before the exhibition opened under a budget of $1,300,000.

THE REV. JOHN RYDGREN, left, interviews Ron Miller of Moe Town Records for a segment of "Silhouette," a radio program combining hit records, "soft-sell" messages, and conversations with young people and celebrities in the recording industry.

'SWINGING SHEPHERD'

Radio Program Links Pop Music, Christian Gospel

A MINNEAPOLIS PASTOR has become known as "the swinging shepherd" because of his rock 'n' roll radio program which is now heard on stations in 14 cities.

The Rev. John Rydgren, director of television, radio, and films for The American Lutheran Church, created the program for teenagers and college-age listeners. Called "Silhouette," it combines the day's hit records with "soft-sell" messages and interviews with recording stars and young people.

"The messages," Pastor Rydgren said, "are designed to put across the point that the church, and more particularly, that Christ is interested in every part of the teen world."

He developed the program at the request of Scott Burton, program director of WDGY, Minneapolis, and is now shooting for a target of 500 to 1,000 stations. Response to the program is reported as "extremely favorable."

Criticism has been leveled at some of the contemporary pop tunes because of lyrics which dwell on sex and drugs. Pastor Rydgren concedes that selecting songs for his program does pose problems. "We try to be careful, but we won't hold back," he said. "And in our interviews with the young people, we encourage them to speak frankly about the problems they face."

Some interviews originate from conversations held at the "Silhouette Shack." Pastor Rydgren explained that "the shack is not a specific place. We move around like a floating crap game. The kids get together to listen to big beat music and to dance. I play the drums, and then we talk about such things as music, school, sex, Christ, and faith."

Pastor Rydgren also spends time "on the road," interviewing recording artists, songwriters, and young people in other areas. A recent trip took him to Los Angeles to tape conversations with the "Mamas and the Papas" and the "Righteous Brothers."

"It may seem unusual for a Lutheran pastor to host a radio program such as 'Silhouette,'" he observed, "but I put myself through the seminary at Columbus, Ohio, by working as a disc jockey at a rock 'n' roll station. I enjoy what I'm doing, and I like the music. Actually what we're doing is following Christ's pattern. He went where the action was, and our program goes where the teens are."

Lutherans In Review

• Formation of a religious foundation designed to seek solutions to the problems of poverty was proposed to a meeting of the Lutheran Laymen's Fellowship of Metropolitan Washington. The speaker was Curtis E. Staudte, a financial adviser in the Community Action Program of the U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity.

While suggesting that the concept be developed under the leadership of theologians, he stressed that his proposal stemmed from Christian concern as a Lutheran layman and did not reflect his role in government. Mr. Staudte contended that current programs of the church and government lack urgently needed innovations that penetrate the collective problem of unemployment, poverty, and delinquency.

• St. John's University, a Roman Catholic school at Collegeville, Minn., will exchange religion professors with Lutheran and Methodist colleges during the 1967-68 and 1968-69 academic year. The exchange will be conducted with Luther College, Decorah, Iowa, a school of The American Lutheran Church, and Illinois Wesleyan University, Bloomington, Ill., a Methodist-related school.

• Union at the communion table with other Lutherans should come before "hasty unions" with other Christian bodies, Dr. Robert J. Marshall, president of the Illinois Synod of the Lutheran Church in America, told delegates to the fifth annual synod meeting in St. Louis. "In the near future, Lutherans will grow closer together," he said. "Many other Protestants will work more and more under the influence of the Consultation on Church Union. Catholics may find a place in councils of churches. Lutherans will continue to hold a distinctive place for the time being."

• Increases in both baptized and confirmed membership during 1966 were reported by The American Lutheran Church. Baptized membership numbered 2,648,111 in 1966, an increase of 26,223 over the previous year. Confirmed membership rose 32,420 to 1,781,394.

• Approximately 300 students of Concordia College, St. Paul, a Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod school, visited 3,248 Twin Cities' area homes during a weekend evangelism thrust.

• Special programs designed to assist Lutheran ministry in the inner city areas of Cleveland and Chicago have been established by the Lutheran Human Relations Association of America. The Rev. George Hrbek, formerly of Altus, Okla., heads the three-year project in Chicago, while the Rev. Richard Sering of Kinloch, Mo., directs the Cleveland effort.

• For the second time in three years a Lutheran woman has been chosen American Mother of the Year. The 1967 selection is Mrs. Minnie Guenther, 77, of Whiteriver, Ariz., widow of a Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod pastor who served a half century among the Apache Indians.

'Consumer Religion' Threat Seen

PROTESTANT CHURCHES are increasingly offering their followers "a consumer religion" and the Roman Catholic Church is moving "in the same direction," a New York psychoanalyst told Christian theologians.

The charges by Dr. Ernest Van Den Haag drew no serious objections from approximately 100 Protestant, Roman Catholic, and Orthodox churchmen gathered for the second annual National Faith and Order Colloquim at Notre Dame, Ind.

Dr. Van Den Haag warned that Christianity "is no longer in danger from any other religions, but from indifference to all." He said Christianity in the United States is in danger of turning into a secular pseudo-religion which is not really Christianity at all.

"If religion is to be no more than a vague traditional sanction for an essentially secular morality which aims at the maximization of collective and individual welfare," he declared, "then the social role of religion has become positive—at least well adjusted—but it has ceased to be the Christian religion. It does not transcend our temporal life or preach redemption from it and salvation by divine grace."

He pointed to education, technology, science, urbanization, and industrialization as contributing to the secularization of Christianity through "a steady erosion of tradition, of faith and revelation."

There is a movement toward "an increasing belief in the infinite perfectability of man and the sufficiency of his reason," he added.

All this, said Dr. Van Den Haag, is done "in the name of God's relevance to contemporary man. Yet a truly religious man could never worry about God's relevance to man—he could only wonder whether men are willing to lead lives relevant to God."

Spiritually Illiterate

MORE THAN 95 per cent of United States college students have no contact with an organized church, the president of the Campus Crusade for Christ International reported. Dr. William R. Bright of San Bernardino, Calif., said students are "spiritually illiterate" often because nobody has talked to them about Christianity. Campus Crusade, an interdenominational movement, attempts to reach students through special "crusades" and follow-up meetings of small groups.

WHEN HE WAS serving in the armed forces during the Korean conflict, the Rev. E. D. Tollefson looked forward to receiving A Mighty Fortress. A favorite feature was the Lutheran Girl of the Month. "I remember thinking that the day might come when I would be a pastor and could recommend someone for that honor," he writes.

That day has come and his nominee is Joanne Bomersine who this fall will be a freshman at Pacific Lutheran University, Tacoma, Wash. "She's tops," enthusiastically states Pastor Tollefson of Grace Lutheran Church, Wenatchee, Wash.

At Grace Joanne has served in the Sunday school and vacation Bible school, sings in the choir, performs in plays, and regularly turns out for work parties. Active in Luther League at the local and conference levels, she was a delegate to the 1967 national convention.

Her high school activities included the Honor Society, French Club, Pep Club, Apple-Ettes Drill Team, Girls' Club, and Student Council.

NEWS IN CAPSULE

Lutherans, Catholics Set Talks; Missouri Acts on Social Issues

Top-level Lutheran and Roman Catholic scholars will engage in major theological discussions in 14 American cities during 1967-68 to mark this year's 450th anniversary of the Reformation. Cities selected are Austin (Tex.), Atlanta, Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Columbus (Ohio), Denver, Detroit, Minneapolis-St. Paul, New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, San Francisco, and Seattle.

The talks are an effort "to better understand each other," stated Dr. Malvin H. Lundeen, secretary of the Lutheran Church in America, who is chairman of the 450th Reformation Anniversary general committee. In addition to the dialogues, plans are being made to present jointly prepared radio and television programs and to make mutual use of the arts to emphasize the church's continual need for renewal and reform.

● Despite improved communications between Protestants and Roman Catholics, four Lutheran theologians from Europe said they see little possibility that the Catholic Church will drop its excommunication of Martin Luther during this Reformation anniversary year. Some Roman Catholic theologians have advocated that action.

● Meeting in convention in New York City, The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod acknowledged that a basis exists for closer relations with The American Lutheran Church, but postponed a decision on declaration of altar and pulpit fellowship until 1969 to permit further study of the issue at the local level. The Synod's president is to make "appropriate recommendations" on fellowship in conjunction with the Council of Presidents at the 1969 convention.

A few weeks earlier the ALC Church Council gave preliminary approval to resolutions which are the first step toward fellowship with three other U.S. Lutheran churches. One resolution named the Missouri Synod and the Synod of Evangelical Lutheran Churches, and the second aims at pulpit and altar fellowship with the Lutheran Church in America. Both resolutions will be processed by the ALC's 1968 general convention and could become effective in spring 1969 after ratification by 18 district conventions.

● The convention also moved the Missouri Synod deeper into the arena of social action. A program of "education and action" in support of open housing received overwhelming approval, and another resolution scored prejudicial attitudes and practices toward persons of other religious, races, and ethnic groups.

Delegates refrained from speaking out on the war in Vietnam and other global crises, but adopted a message to congregations urging members to "support the government while at the same time serving as an instrument of God's grace and healing." Selective conscientious objection to particular wars was condemned on the basis that it "tends to promote chaos and anarchy in time of national emergency."

● Membership in North American Lutheran churches totaled 9,170,298 at the end of 1966 according to a report issued by the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A. The figure includes 8,868,073 in the U.S. and 302,225 in Canada. There was a gain of 71,506 members over 1965.

● Participants in a three-day Lutheran seminar on world hunger were told that "the stork is outrunning the plow." Since the beginning of this decade, observed Herbert J. Waters, the annual growth in population has remained at nearly three per cent while the rate of food production has slowed. Waters, chief executive of the War on Hunger in the Agency for International Development, warned that failure to meet accelerating food demands will lead to political and social unrest.

Bakken Gives Cardinals 'Golden Toe'

By BUD THIES

Sportswriter, St. Louis Globe-Democrat

If there's one thing that riles Jim Bakken, it's parents who feel that if their boys can't do anything else on the football team, they can kick.

"Punting and place kicking take a lot of ability," he retorts. "They require as good an athlete as any other position. To be a topnotch kicker, one must have coordination, timing, rhythm, and a powerful leg."

Bakken ought to know. He's spent his entire athletic career at it, from back in grade school, through Wisconsin University, to his current success with the football Cardinals of St. Louis. For the past four years he's led the club in scoring with his golden toe. He had a string of 124 conversions without a miss spanning more than three seasons.

JIM BAKKEN—He's in there kicking with the St. Louis Cardinals. Jim has led the National Football League club in scoring for the past four years, including a string of 124 conversions.

"Once you've gained the finesse, it's all concentration," says Bakken of kicking. "It isn't like golf where each stroke requires a different finesse. Here you try to do the same thing in exactly the same way—except, of course, when you must allow for wind."

How did he get into it?

"Well, whenever I didn't have anything to do, I'd take a football and kick it, or I'd shoot baskets by myself in the backyard, or I'd hit a tennis ball against a wall. I enjoyed doing it.

"It also was strictly trial and error until I got into high school where my coach, Fred Jacobi, worked with me."

At Madison (Wis.) West High School, Jim lettered three years in football as a quarterback and kicker. During that time he was all-conference two years and selected the most valuable player as a senior when the team was unbeaten and rated the unofficial state champ.

In basketball he averaged 20 points a game, and his team won the conference title twice and went to the state tournament twice, finishing second and fourth.

A pitcher-third baseman with the high school baseball team, he also played in a summer league with such noted fellow Lutherans as Rick Reichardt, now of Los Angeles, and Dale Hackbart and Pat Richter, both pro football stars.

Jim was a sophomore quarterback on the Wisconsin University team that lost to Washington in the Rose Bowl. He was made a defensive back his last two years at Wisconsin and did the kicking.

Drafted by the Los Angeles Rams, he failed to make the club, one of the big disappointments of his life. But he was grabbed by the Cardinals, who haven't regretted it at all.

Bakken was injured during his first year, 1962. But in 1963 he hit on 44 consecutive conversion tries and 11 of 21 field goal attempts for 77 points. The next fall he connected on all 40 conversions and lofted 25 of 38 field goal tries for 115 points. His longest was 51 yards, still a club record. In 1965 he didn't miss in 33 conversion tries, and he made good on 21 of 31 field goal kicks for 96 points. Last year Bakken finally showed he was human—he missed one of 28 conversions. He added 23 of 39 field goal tries for 96 points.

His biggest thrills, he says, were beating Minnesota's top-ranked Gophers in the last game of his senior year at Wisconsin and going to the Pro Bowl in 1966. In the Minnesota game he kicked the deciding field goal and then knocked down a Gopher pass on a conversion try that would have tied the game.

Bakken, who grew up in Bethel Lutheran Church, Madison, now attends Bethel of St. Louis with his wife, Hope, and two children, Kris and Ellen. He's not an evangelistic preacher of his faith, although he's willing to talk about it to any group that invites him.

"I was never hit by any stroke of lightning when it comes to religion. My mother made me take a bath Saturday night and get up the next morning for Sunday school. My high school coach was a fellow church member. So was Pat Richter. And my pastor was an avid sports fan.

"I would play against Richter that night and sit beside him in church on Sunday.

"So I've grown up in a Christian environment and this has trained me to think in a Christian way. I play the game according to the rules, the Christian rules, because it just is natural for me."

That doesn't mean that Jim is above committing a bit of larceny on his friends. He didn't want it mentioned that he is a 2-handicap golfer. "I can't bargain as well if they know too much," he said with a grin.

He is a member of Zion Lutheran Church, Alamo, Tex. After basic training at Fort Polk, La., Dalager received image interpretation training at Fort Holabird, Md., and put his new skills to work at Fort Bragg, N. Car., before being assigned to Vietnam.

CAPT. LAWRENCE D. JOHNSON, JR., a member of St. Mark Lutheran Church, Roanoke, Va., has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross in addition to other medals for heroic service in Vietnam. Capt. Johnson, recently discharged after four years in the U.S. Army, received the DFC for "courage and aggressiveness" while leading seven helicopters in the evacuation of an infantry unit under heavy fire. Six lifts were necessary in the rescue.

"IT'S NOT A clean-cut pose, but combat Marines seldom look cute and wholesome," writes Cpl. Keith A. Haiser. With the First Marine Division, he'll conclude 20 months in Vietnam in October. Haiser, of Royal Oak, Mich., is a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, Clawson.

Lt. Raymond W. Johnson, a 33-year-old native of Minneapolis, in late June became the third Lutheran chaplain to be injured in combat in Vietnam. The Navy chaplain suffered a shrapnel wound in the right leg in a Mekong Delta battlefield.

A news dispatch said a New Testament in the left pocket of the chaplain's shirt stopped another piece of shrapnel and probably saved him from a more serious injury. Despite the leg wound, the report continued, Chaplain Johnson struggled back and forth between the muck of the battlefield and hospital ships in the nearby waters of the Rach Gia River to evacuate wounded infantrymen.

Chaplain Johnson is a clergyman of the Lutheran Church in America. He has been on active duty with the Navy for about one year.

SNOW-CAPPED MOUNTAINS provided a beautiful backdrop for the annual convocation for chaplains and laymen at the General Walker Hotel, Berchtesgaden, Germany. Marine Sparks Bible Reading Plan

More than 40,000,000 people will be participating in a new worldwide interfaith program combining the American Bible Society's Worldwide Bible Reading and National Bible Week of the Laymen's National Committee. Worldwide Bible Reading and National Bible Week will run concurrently Oct. 15-22. The WBR program continues through Thanksgiving. Suggested Bible readings for the period are listed in an adjacent column.

The concern of a group of businessmen during World War II gave birth to National Bible Week. On Dec. 7, 1941, the Laymen's National Committee radio program, commemorating the first anniversary of Bible Week, was interrupted with the announcement that Pearl Harbor had been bombed.

And in 1943 a lonely Marine on Guadacanal sparked the idea of Worldwide Bible Reading by asking his parents to join him in reading the same Scripture passage each day. His mother shared the thought with the American Bible Society which further developed the program. This year the program takes on a special significance with thousands of servicemen in Vietnam expected to participate as did their counterparts during World War II and the Korean conflict.

Protestants generally disagree with traditional Roman Catholic attitudes on only two points, writes Dr. Carl E. Braaten of the Lutheran School of Theology, Chicago, in a pamphlet on "The Ethics of Conception and Contraception." Protestants generally do not accept the Catholic contention that so-called artificial methods of birth control are immoral, and they question whether a "natural law" can be invoked to support teachings which are not supported by a consensus of Christian thought.

JOYCE GERDES, a senior at Dana College, Blair, Neb., who plans to become an elementary school teacher, is the October selection as "Lutheran Girl of the Month."

The 19-year-old, 5 ft. 4½ in. farm miss is maintaining a B average at Dana while completing the four-year course in three years, participating in the Student Education Association, serving as a volunteer tutor among underprivileged children in Omaha, and playing an active role in the student congregation.

Miss Gerdes was nominated by the Rev. William L. Jurgens, pastor of her home congregation, St. Paul Lutheran Church-Hickory Grove of Auburn, Neb. At St. Paul she was active in the Luther League and senior choir and taught in the Sunday school and vacation Bible school.

"Joyce has an openness and sincerity which reveals her attempt to apply Christian values in her relationship with people she meets," writes Pastor Jurgens.

ALC Youth Pray for Peace, Warned of Massive Hunger

Youths of The American Lutheran Church participated in a litany for peace in Vietnam as the Luther League opened simultaneous triennial conventions at two locations—Dallas, Tex., and Seattle, Wash.

The decision to start the twin sessions with the prayer for peace and to dedicate the conventions to those who have died in Vietnam was made by the Luther League board.

Prayers were said for American and Vietnamese victims of the Vietnam war, for "the millions of innocent who are uprooted from their homes and live in daily want," and for those Vietnamese "who have known nothing but the ravage of war in their lifetime."

Cmdr. James E. Seim, a Navy chaplain, spoke at the Dallas opening service. The speaker at the Seattle service was the Rev. Orlando Ingvoldstad Jr., retired Navy chaplain and currently ALC director of service to military personnel.

The conventions drew an estimated 7,500 youths to each city.

A unique feature of the meetings was that each day began with a TV Bible study piped into the youths' hotel rooms. Two speakers then continued the Bible study in each city.

In Dallas Paul Simon, Democratic member of the Illinois Senate and considered a possible opponent of Sen. Everett M. Dirksen in the 1968 national elections, told the young people that the United States must develop a long-range program to feed the world's hungry.

"Massive starvation beyond anything the world has known faces us unless the U.S. adopts a long-range plan to prevent it," he declared.

"The war against starvation is infinitely more important to the future security of the U.S. and of the world than the war in Vietnam and other crises which make the headlines each day," the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod layman continued.

"And, ironically, while millions stand on the brink of starvation, our nation is paying the American farmer $1.6 billion this year not to produce, to let land remain unproductive."

Mr. Simon noted that the President's Science Advisory Committee said in May that food production is the world's most pressing problem, that in February the State Department issued a warning of massive starvation, and that in January the President stated the world's race of food versus population was being lost. The speaker called for a change in attitude, including an awareness of the problem of starvation and a determination to provide decisive leadership.

RACIAL RIOTING, sniping, burning, and looting ravaged several American cities during the past summer. Here, firemen are shown battling a fire in Milwaukee. An inter-Lutheran effort was coordinated with activities of other church bodies in providing emergency aid to victims of the Detroit strife. Lutherans also were active in other cities. In the aftermath of the rioting, the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A. was asked to serve as a coordinating agent in helping the churches to meet future emergencies and in studying their response to the "urban crisis."

450th Reformation Anniversary Calls for Relevancy in Gospel Witness to Modern Man

THE year-long observance of the 450th anniversary of the Protestant Reformation reaches its climax on Oct. 29, Reformation Sunday. On that day Lutherans will gather in their congregations across the land to mark the anniversary with worship and to be confronted with the challenge facing the church in the modern world.

At 3 p.m. the bells of the congregations will ring out an invitation to the community to attend an open house and fellowship hour that will include a good, old-fashioned Lutheran coffee party.

Under the theme "Life . . . New Life," the 450th Reformation Anniversary has a dual objective:

"To proclaim Jesus Christ, the Lord of the Church and the Savior of men, and to present the Christian faith winsomely and persuasively as God's greatest provision for man's deepest needs, both present and eternal.

"To stir Christian people to greater faithfulness and devotion, helping them to realize anew the richness of their heritage and the greatness of the tasks to which God calls them in this day."

The event being commemorated was the historic act of Martin Luther on Oct. 31, 1517, when he posted on the door of the Castle Church in Wittenberg, Germany, his famous 95 Theses, attacking abuses connected with the granting of indulgences—excusing sinners from purgatorial punishments.

Luther did not seek to divide the church; his concern was its renewal. His statement was intended to be a basis for scholarly discussion that would clarify the issue. But events that followed led him to the conviction that no reformation was possible within the existing structure. From his first doubt of the Scriptural validity of indulgences, he began to question many other practices of the church.

At the Diet (assembly) of Worms in 1521, Luther resisted all efforts to persuade him to recant and reiterated his position that he could not renounce his beliefs unless convinced of his error on the basis of the Scriptures.

"It is neither safe nor prudent to do anything against conscience," he told the Diet. "Here I stand—I cannot do otherwise. God help me. Amen."

The struggle between Luther and Rome resulted from what has been called "the tragic necessity of the Reformation," and the Augustinian monk emerged as the father of Protestantism and the principal teacher of Lutheranism.

Over the years Luther arrived at the three principles from which most of his reforms are derived—doctrines stressing the primacy of the SCRIPTURES in witnessing to the Word of God in Jesus Christ and justification by GRACE through FAITH rather than good works.

The Rev. Dr. Malvin H. Lundeen, secretary of the Lutheran Church in America, is general chairman of the anniversary committee. He describes the theme of the observance as "an interpretation of the basic message of the Gospel, especially relevant for the modern world."

"To those outside the church, the theme is a call to the new life of fellowship with God through Jesus Christ," he said. "To those within the church—Lutherans and other Christians—'Life . . . New Life' calls to renewal and reform in personal, community, and ecclesiastical life."

Pointing out that Luther "related the eternal Gospel of Jesus Christ to the specific needs of men within the framework of the particular situation of his day," Dr. Lundeen said that "a worthy observance of the Reformation today would be to do for our time what Luther did for his."

"Man today," he observed, "is searching for life; he is disturbed by the meaninglessness of his life and its emptiness in spite of technological advances and creature comforts; he is obsessed by the problems of the inevitability of death.

"Thus for the modern man the offer of 'Life . . . New Life'—meaningful, purposeful, eternal—is particularly relevant."

Dr. Lundeen also emphasized the ecumenical dimensions of the anniversary observance toward Roman Catholics and other Protestants and among Lutherans.

He urged local initiative to continue and intensify the current dialogues between Lutherans and Catholics in efforts to heal the breach of the 16th century and to seek better understanding with other Protestants on the basis of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Dr. Lundeen further suggested that Lutherans seek to "realize anew the richness of their mutual heritage" and attempt to gain better understanding to meet the challenge of "the greatness of the tasks to which God calls us in this day."

Religious News Service Photos

THESE PHOTOGRAPHS of prominent Reformation sites were selected from Illustrated History of the Reformation by Oskar Thulin, a forthcoming publication of Concordia Publishing House, St. Louis. (1) The house in Eisleben, Germany, where Martin Luther was born Nov. 10, 1483. He lived there only a short time. The family moved to nearby Mansfeld where Luther's father became a businessman and a member of the small town's aristocracy. (2) Interior of the Cathedral of Erfurt where Luther was ordained in 1507, becoming a member of the monastic community called the Black Cloister of the Hermits of Augustine. (3) View into Luther's room in Wartburg Castle where he remained secluded more than a year after being condemned by the Diet of Worms in 1531. He was hidden by the Elector (prince) of Saxony, disguised as "Knight George." At Wartburg Luther translated the New Testament into German. (4) Cloister of the "Black Monastery" of the Augustinian Hermits in Erfurt where Luther lived from 1505-1508. His cell was at the upper left. (5) The Luther house in Wittenberg, a town where he went to teach in 1508. It was here that Luther lived with his wife, Katherine von Bora, and their children. Wittenberg was "home" to Luther for the remainder of his life. (6) An exterior view of Wartburg Castle which overlooks the city of Eisenach where Luther did some of his early school work. (7) The home of Philipp Melanchthon in Wittenberg. Melanchthon was one of Luther's most able young supporters in the Reformation and is credited with the major work on the Augsburg Confession. (8) Pulpit in the Castle Chapel at Torgau, a city not far from Wittenberg. In 1544 Luther preached from this pulpit and dedicated the chapel, first structure built as a Protestant church. (9) Luther's grave in the Castle Church, Wittenberg. In the background is a cast of his epitaph. At Luther's death, a series of wars broke out which prevented the original epitaph from being delivered from the city of Jena, where it remains today.

Lutherans in the Service

ARMY CHAPLAIN Alton R. Kieschnick, left, and Sgt. Carl J. Russell exchange greetings in Vietnam. Russell is a member of Faith Lutheran Church, Ottawa, Kan., now faithfully supporting Lutheran services in the Qui Nhon area. Chaplain Kieschnick served in Fort Bliss, Tex., Kaiserslautern, Germany, and Fort Polk, La., before assignment to Vietnam.

YOUNG PEOPLE from First Lutheran Church, Long Beach, Calif., recently attended a service on board the USS YORKTOWN. Chaplain Robert E. Foelber of The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod serves aboard the carrier.

CHAPLAIN WALTER R. BAUER gathers with an adult Bible study class each Sunday at Stewart Air Force Base, N.Y. The Missouri Synod clergyman is First Air Force assistant staff chaplain.

QUARTERMASTER SEAMAN Donald Trausneck is serving aboard the USS BENEWAH, a barracks ship operating in the Mekong Delta, 17 miles south of Saigon. A member of Ascension Lutheran Church, Wilson, N. Car., Trausneck was assigned to the BENEWAH in January. Among his duties are navigation and visual communications. The BENEWAH serves as a mobile support base and hospital for the U.S. Army's Ninth Infantry Division and is flagship for Capt. Wade C. Wells, Commander, River Assault Flotilla ONE.

CAPT. EVERT A. SCHMIDT and family depart Tachikawa Air Force Base after a three-year tour. Capt. Schmidt's voice was heard regularly over Far East Network, reporting the morning and noon weather from "Air Force Weather Center — Fuchu Air Station."

About the Artist

Mrs. Merle Chisholm is a member of Como Park Lutheran Church, St. Paul. She is a graduate of the Minneapolis School of Art and worked as a fashion artist until she was stricken with polio in September 1952.

Paralyzed below the neck and using some type of breathing aid at all times, she continues to draw with a pencil held in her mouth. Several years ago, while still a patient at the Kenny Rehabilitation Institute, Minneapolis, Mrs. Chisholm began designing Christmas cards. The drawing above is taken from one of the cards.

The artist and her husband, Robert, have one son, Gary, 17.

Christmas Eve

Dear Father above,

I was afraid it wasn't going to be much of a Christmas—
no family,
no children solemnly parading in cast-off bedspreads and clothes, yet managing to portray the story of the holy birth reverently and effectively, no Christmas tree struggling to maintain posture under its unreasonable load of lights, tinsel, and ornaments, no having the fun of watching loved ones, especially the kids, tear into the gifts I had for them, or watching their expressions (out of the corner of my eye) as I open theirs for me.

But, heavenly Father, as I hear the carols of this happy time and sing those carols—
the same songs my loved ones are singing at home tonight—
I know the joy and peace of Christmas do not depend on where I am
or what I am doing.
The fantail of a ship,
the altar on the hood of a jeep, even the base chapel, nice as it may be,
is a far cry from my church at home or that stable in quiet Bethlehem.
But none of that really matters when it comes down to knowing or being happy about or getting the good out of what Christmas is really all about.

Father, I want to sing tonight:
"Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, goodwill!"
I want to sing like the angels that holy night in Judea, for I have the same great joy to sing about:
"Unto you is born a Savior, Christ the Lord!"
Yes, that's the point of it all, the "glad tidings," the "great joy"
not just for hillside shepherds near Bethlehem long ago.
For "all people" this is good news.
For me!

O Father, I thank You!
I praise You!
I glorify You
as I remember that on this night, as Bethlehem's fields were bathed in angel light,
You gave us the greatest Gift of all!
You sent Your Son to a homely place far from home, to the world—for the world,
to us—for us,
as our Savior, our Hope, our eternal Joy.

"To Thee, then, O Jesus, this day of Thy birth
Be glory and honor through heaven and earth!"

GIRL OF THE MONTH

PEGGY SIMMONS, a sophomore at Wittenburg University, Springfield, Ohio, is the December choice as Lutheran Girl of the Month. A music major, Miss Simmons is a member of Kappa Delta at the university.

She is a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, Ashland, Ohio, where she has been active in the Luther League, choral work, and other congregational activities, reports her pastor, Dr. Robert S. Kinsey, who submitted her nomination.

During the past summer Miss Simmons was elected Miss Clark County.

LCA Pastors Warned Riot Dates Set

Pastors of the Lutheran Church in America have been warned that additional riots are in store for American cities—and that targets and dates have been set for the outbreaks.

The Rev. Rudolph Featherstone, Negro pastor of Detroit's Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, told an LCA Consultation on Race Relations in Philadelphia that he is "alarmed and disturbed" at the tensions still existing in the cities' ghettos.

"The tension remains so great and the fires so close," he continued, "that not only targets but dates have been set for additional riots."

The Rev. James F. Cook, white pastor of a storefront church in Cleveland, suggested the "fires" are closer than next summer.

Louis Michaux, director of the Black Nationalist Book Store in New York, told the consultation that the riots should constitute a lesson for the churches to repent.

"Riots started in heaven," Mr. Michaux asserted. "Riots are the only thing that got the federal government to listen to me . . . preaching and prayer didn't."

He was sharply critical of the church in his address. "You're not lifting up Jesus," he told the Lutherans. "You're lifting up yourselves."

Following the consultation, Dr. Franklin Clark Fry, LCA president, said the power structure of America must "listen and try to learn."

Dr. Fry conceded that he was part of the "power structure" criticized by the Negroes but asked that "no one expect perfection of his brother."

"Please let everyone strive for that perfection for himself," said the churchman.

At a press conference, Dr. Fry said he was "afraid that unless there are great improvements, there soon will be an explosion that will rock the entire world."

Meeting about two weeks later the LCA commission on Evangelism instructed its staff to give "high priority" to developing programs that will assist urban congregations to receive "all peoples within their communities" into the membership of the congregations. The recommendation stressed the serving of all peoples "regardless of race, culture, or nationality."

It also asked "that further cooperative programs be developed between suburban and inner city congregations to increase both dialogue and action concerning these matters."

The present "strategy of our church for assisting in meeting the needs of the Negro and other minority groups in the urban ghetto may be inadequate to the enormity of the task," the commission noted.

"EDGE," a new magazine for high school age young people, made its debut in November. A replica of the first cover is shown above. Cooperating in the publishing venture are youth agencies of The American Lutheran Church, the Lutheran Church in America, and The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod. "EDGE" will deal with current issues and problems that confront youth in their world today.

MARLENE JACKSON, a junior from Philadelphia, was voted homecoming queen by the student body of Thiel College, Greenville, Pa. The college is operated by the Western Pennsylvania-West Virginia Synod of the Lutheran Church in America. Miss Jackson is a chemistry major and has held various offices in a number of college groups.

Lutherans in the Service

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Thomas S. Johnson, instructor in psychology and counseling at the U.S. Army Chaplain School, Fort Hamilton, New York, has retired from active military service after more than 20 years service in the Army. During the retirement ceremony the Lutheran chaplain was presented the Legion of Merit by Lutheran Chaplain (Col.) Theodore V. Koepke, deputy commandant of the Chaplain School.

Chaplain Johnson entered the Army as a private June 27, 1941. He was promoted to first sergeant in June 1942 and received a battlefield commission to second lieutenant in the medical administration corps in February 1945.

After his discharge, he was graduated from St. Olaf College, Northfield, Minn., and received a bachelor of divinity degree from Lutheran Theological Seminary, St. Paul. Ordained into the Lutheran ministry June 5, 1950, he served a Centuria, Wis., congregation until entering the Army chaplaincy on Nov. 8, 1951.

● James R. Bentz, a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, Porterville, Calif., received the academic award among recruits in Company 040 upon completing boot training at Naval Training Center, San Diego. He also notched the highest score among 600 men taking the General Classification Test. Bentz now is studying missile firing systems at Mare Island, Calif.

● A1C Terrance J. Faure, a graduate of Milwaukee Lutheran High School, is on duty at Da Nang Air Base, Vietnam.

● Reporting for service at Clark Air Base in the Philippines was A2C John A. Niemeyer, a 1963 Lutheran High School graduate from St. Louis.

● Mark D. Hoffman, an air operations specialist at Duluth (Minn.) International Airport, has been promoted to A2C. He is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Herman Hoffman. How's this for coincidence. Pastor Hoffman serves two congregations: Bethlehem at HERMAN and Zion at HOFFMAN.

TWO BROTHERS, inducted into the Army on the same day, currently are serving in Vietnam and Korea. Roland and Wayne Gangler, members of Bethel Lutheran Church, Chicago, entered service May 17, 1966, receiving basic training at Fort Riley. Roland, left, has been in Vietnam since January 1967, while his older brother, Wayne, was assigned to Korea.

RADARMAN 2C Roger D. Roeder is on duty aboard the USS WILLIAM V. PRATT. The destroyer presently is stationed in the Vietnam area. During a tour in the Mediterranean area on the PRATT, Roeder was able to visit several sites in the Holy land. He is a member of St. James Lutheran Church, Harper, Tex.

A2C FILLMORE H. WENTZ visits with Chaplain Charles E. Seastrunk Jr. on the flight line at a Vietnam air base. Wentz is a member of St. Mark Lutheran Church, Williamsport, Pa. He is a grand nephew of Dr. Abdel Wentz who was a professor of Chaplain Seastrunk at Southern Seminary. The chaplain also had studied in a class taught by Dr. Frederick Wentz, a son of Dr. Abdel Wentz.

CAPT. RICHARD W. LEIGHTON, supply officer at the Portsmouth (N.H.) Naval Shipyard, has been awarded the Legion of Merit, the nation's second highest non-combat medal. The award is presented by Rear Adm. Roy S. Benson, commandant, First Naval District, for Capt. Leighton's exceptional service as commander of the Military Ocean Terminal, Bayonne, N.J. The Leightons are members of Our Savior Lutheran Church, Virginia Beach, Va.

Bible Stories Come to Life With Puppets

The ancient art of puppetry that has entertained centuries of people all over the world now is being used to help Sunday school pupils at the U.S. Naval Station, Keflavik International Airport, Iceland, gain a better understanding of Bible stories.

Use of puppets to portray Biblical characters was introduced at the Keflavik Chapel by Lutheran Chaplain Veryle Henriksen. The idea has grown in popularity with the children. And any skepticism that may have existed among adults has vanished.

Puppet shows have been scheduled monthly, supplementing regular Sunday school classes. Each presentation lasts five to seven minutes. But Chaplain Henriksen says he burns up as much physical and emotional energy as he would in a 20-minute sermon.

The chaplain is the chief puppeteer, ably assisted by his daughter, Kisten. He also is the voice for each character, ranging from the high pitch of a young girl to the thundering command of an Old Testament prophet.

Youngsters are spellbound by the presentation. Their increased retention of the story and its theme is demonstrated by their ability to answer Chaplain Henriksen's questions which follow each show.

Selecting a story which lends itself to this art form and which will bring across a Scriptural principle to the children is the hardest part of the job, Chaplain Henriksen explains. Once a story is selected, the chaplain writes the script and he and his daughter polish the performance with hours of rehearsal.

Credit for construction of the puppets goes to Mrs. Cheryl Campbell. She turned the chaplain's idea into reality by forming the characters from a lemon-shaped juice container covered with a white cotton sock (for the head), yarn, and other scrap material.

BEHIND THE SCENES there's a beehive of activity as Chaplain Veryle Hendriksen manipulates characters in a puppet show presentation of Bible stories for Sunday school children at U.S. Naval Station, Keflavik, Iceland.

Chaplains Face Greater Task

An All-Lutheran Chaplain Convocation in Washington, D.C., was told that military chaplains face a greater task than ever before because of increased "emotional turbulence" among many of the men they serve.

Addressing the three-day session was Congressman Thomas S. Kleppe, a layman of The American Lutheran Church. The convocation was the first of three scheduled for late 1967 in the United States under the sponsorship of the Division of Service to Military Personnel of the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A.

Congressman Kleppe said that in addition to the usual problems connected with military service "many in the armed forces are disturbed by conditions with the U.S. such as race riots, crime, and other critical issues."

"The GI needs someone to talk to," he continued, "and many servicemen, especially those bound for Vietnam, will turn to their chaplain for help regarding spiritual as well as a whole array of related problems."

More than 100 chaplains participated in the sessions.

Dr. William J. Reiss, executive secretary of the Division of Service to Military Personnel, reported that Lutheran chaplains on active duty with the Army, Navy, and Air Force total 387. Forty-six, he said, are in the Vietnam area.

He also noted that the first draft of a proposed Armed Forces Prayer Book and Hymnal has been completed by the Lutheran Council. It is currently under study and evaluation.

OUR NEW YEAR of selections for Lutheran Girl of the Month is off to a good start with this pretty candidate from the Air Force. Linda DeWall, an administrative specialist for the Chief of the Command Control Directorate, SAC, is described by her pastor, Chaplain D. J. Kalal, as a "Lutheran of conviction, not of convenience."

While in the USAF, Linda attends services beginning at 0745 one and one-half miles from the WAF barracks, teaches in the base Sunday school, and is an active participant in the Airmen's Group. She has been a Sunday school teacher for four years and a vacation Bible school teacher for three. In addition to her faithful service, she is praised for her "qualities of wholesomeness, devotion, and attractiveness"—a special kind of femininity.

PERSONAL INVENTORY

The New Year—A Time for Looking Back and Ahead

EDITOR'S NOTE: Chaplain Koepke recently was named commandant of the U.S. Army Chapain School at Fort Hamilton, N.Y. A Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod clergyman, he has been an Army chaplain for more than 22 years.

By THEODORE V. KOEPKE

As you enter a new year of grace, numerous areas of thought flash through your mind. War or peace, life or death, positive or negative service to God and country, combat areas or safe assignments, denial or rededication of spiritual values—you've considered some of these subjects as the New Year arrives.

Young men and women in military service, whether by choice or at the request of "friends and neighbors," are part of an organization that is unique. Compare each of us individually with the immensity of our military forces, and we're quite infinitesimal. This results, at times, in the unfavorable reaction of "laying down on the job" since our small contribution is not important. Or so we say. However, if we keep in mind that the structure will be weakened without our full support, we can regain the necessary perspective and realize that our country depends upon each of us.

Rule Six

In addition to dedication to positive values, do we try to follow Rule Six? This is an ancient Navy rule which, interpreted informally, means, "Don't ever forget your sense of humor."

The young soldier on a transport ship in World War II eased a tense situation by his shrill cry: "Has anybody seen the pin to my hand grenade?"

The rigors of Vietnam are eased by the fine American attitude that some humor exists in every situation. As a pastor I believe that a sense of humor is of such importance to life that I frequently include in my prayers, "Grant us the saving salt of a quick sense of humor that it may constantly savor the common fare of daily life."

A Dull Scythe

In our personal inventory do we trust that we'll be lucky or do we use all resources to prepare ourselves for future opportunities? When a farmer observed that his son was cutting weeds with a dull scythe, the son said there was so much work to do that he didn't have time to sharpen the scythe. "My son," said the father, "no time is ever lost in sharpening dull tools."

The soldier who will not absorb all he can while undergoing grueling basic training may find himself in serious trouble on the battlefield because he didn't sharpen dull tools during training.

Whether our emphasis is on doing our best, improving our sense of humor, or sharpening our scythes, we can learn from the book of Proverbs: "Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise."

Borne Up

A biologist tells of watching an ant carrying a piece of straw which seemed almost too heavy to drag. The ant came to a crack in the ground which was too wide to cross. It stood still a moment, as though perplexed, then put the straw across the crack and walked across on the straw.

It used its burden as a bridge! Have we ever thought of converting our burdens into bridges—of having them lift us up instead of we lifting them?

St. Paul learned the secret of being borne up by his burdens. Throughout his life he had been afflicted by a physical handicap. But when he once recognized his affliction as a part of God's good and gracious will for him, he exclaimed: "Most gladly therefore will I glory in my infirmities that the power of Christ may rest upon me . . . For when I am weak, then am I strong."

Whatever burden you carry, you can use it to God's glory—and to the welfare of your fellow men.

Jazz Ministry Example of Old Wine in New Wine Skins

By NAOMI FROST
Staff Writer, A Mighty Fortress

"We are here . . .
. . . in the name of God."
"In the name of Jesus Christ, the Church welcomes you."

This is the "Call to Prayer and Life" for Sunday evening jazz vespers at St. Peter's Lutheran Church in midtown Manhattan. The congregation often includes people who do not call themselves Christians, but who have come to hear the witness of those who do and to share a religious experience in music..

The services are part of a total jazz ministry sponsored by the Lutheran Church in America and supported by its Board of American Missions. It seeks to bring about rapport between the jazz community and the church.

Prime mover in the establishment of this rapport is the Rev. John G. Gensel. Among the activities that comprise Dr. Gensel's unique ministry are pastoral counseling with members of the jazz community and other members of the laity (often involving visits to jazz clubs), lectures, and arranging special performances, like those at New York's Town Hall and at the Newport Jazz Festival.

Starting in 1960

Pastor Gensel began this special ministry in 1960 after four years as pastor of the Advent Lutheran Church at 93rd and Broadway in Manhattan. Here he came into contact with people involved in the world of jazz. In 1965 he was given permission by the Board of American Missions to work full-time to develop further his jazz ministry and to explore the possibilities of jazz as a contemporary art form in worship. St. Peter's, at Lexington and 54th Street, became his base of operations.

Dr. Gensel quotes a musician as saying that "many of my friends believe but don't belong." They feel the institutional church spends too much of its time "playing little games" and not becoming involved in the critical issues of life.

"When we (Christians) break into other areas of life, people often are quite eager to become involved with Christ and with the church," he maintains, "because they see that you're willing to come to them, to speak their language, and to relate the message of the church to their concerns. When the ministry of the church stresses the servanthood of Christ, then things begin to happen."

Also a Coffee House

The jazz vespers are held in the church basement, a versatile den which seems to be an ideal place for "things to begin to happen." For example, it's also a coffee house on Friday evenings known as "St. Peter's Gate." The services have for their setting a simple altar with a gold cross flanked by two candles against a deep blue back-drop. Nearby is a prized grand-piano, a gift from Duke Ellington.

Approximately 150-200 musicians have participated in the regular evening services during the past two years: Eddie Bonnemere (a frequent guest), Howard McGhee, Robert Edwin, the Joe Newman Quintet, the Manhattan Brass Choir, and other well-known jazz musicians and groups.

Let's look in on a "typical" service. On this particular day, all the music has been composed by Al Dreers and is performed by his sextet. For the prelude, the instrumentalists play a melody called "Serene." Quiet waves of accompaniment roll under unostentatious yet virtuosic solos of sax, trumpet, guitar, and piano.

Applause in Place

Then in simple, modern language, the people pray the confession of sins: "Forgive us, God. We're stubborn fools and liars—dishonest even with ourselves. We don't love others . . . Spirit of God, speak to us and help us to listen. You know we're very deaf. Make these moments full."

THE REV. JOHN GENSEL'S special interest in jazz began during his pastorate at Advent Lutheran Church in Manhattan.

There follows a lively, robust anthem of praise—"Little Alfy"—as Al Dreers expresses gratitude for his 3-year-old son. The spontaneous applause does not seem too inappropriate, but rather, like a "Yes, yes, Amen."

Mrs. Sandy McGhee, wife of Howard McGhee, the well-known trumpeter, writes about this ministry in an article called "Old Wine in New Wine Skins" (July 1966 issue of Music Ministry): "There has long been an acknowledged need to make worship more personal as well as to discover some non-verbal means of expressing the various acts of worship. . . . The light of today must fight to filter its way through stained glass windows, and these, though magnificent, allow only a glimmer of illumination."

Music of Today

"We want to provide whatever dimension that contemporary music has to offer to the incarnation," explains Dr. Gensel. "We're using music of today, just like Luther and others used the music of their day."

A regular portion of the vespers following the sermon is a short discussion of the "issue of the week." On the occasion of the 450th Reformation Anniversary celebration, the guest speaker was the Rev. Malcolm Boyd (Are You Running with Me, Jesus?). Other discussions have centered on Vietnam and the New York teachers' strike. Today's topic, LSD, brings a great diversity of responses and opinions.

The offertory, "A Ballad for Trane," in memory of the musician John Coltrane, recalls to many present the moving jazz funeral which was given for him at St. Peters on July 21.

After prayers, the service closes with the benediction, "As you leave, may you find peace in knowing that the love of God, the mercy of Christ, and the comfort of the Holy Spirit are with you."

The congregation leaves the church to the joyful strains of a rousing postlude and with the memory of the last blessing of the pastor, "Go, Serve the Lord. You are free."

APPROXIMATELY 200 musicians have participated in the regular Sunday evening jazz vespers at St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Manhattan, during the past two years. The Ollie Shearer Quintet is in the background here as the Rev. John Gensel conducts the service.

TWIN BROTHERS in the Marine Corps, Soren, center, and Lars Prip, right, talk with the Rev. John Freed while worshipping at Shepherd of the Lakes Lutheran Church, Grayslake, Ill. Soren was scheduled for assignment to Vietnam while Lars, in Marine aviation, is stationed at Memphis, Tenn. Born in Denmark, the brothers came to Grayslake with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ebbe Prip, in 1957. They enlisted in the Marines in 1966 after graduation from high school.

UNDER ORDERS

Lutherans in the Service

Five former Lutheran military chaplains who died during the past 24 months and seven chaplains who were wounded by enemy fire in Vietnam or injured in helicopter crashes while helping evacuate wounded servicemen were remembered in a service opening a Lutheran chaplains' convocation in San Francisco.

The 65 chaplains in attendance also paid tribute to several hundred Lutheran GI's who have lost their lives in the Vietnam conflict.

The five chaplains who died were John W. Althaus, Army '42-'44 (died July '66); Chester O. Brecto, Army '43-'46 (died April '66); John M. Kleckner, Navy '41-'66 (died August '67); Alf M. Kraabel, Army '42-'46 (died October '67); and Alfred P. Pietrik, Air Force '41-'58 (died '67).

Wounded by enemy fire in Vietnam were Navy Chaplain Raymond W. Johnson, Navy Chaplain Hugh F. Lecky, Army Chaplain Donald White, Army Chaplain Conrad N. Walker, and Navy Chaplain Clark B. McPhail. Severely injured in helicopter crashes were Army Chaplain LaVern W. Gardai and Army Chaplain Max W. Wilk.

- A1C Jimmie D. Mader of St. Louis is on duty at Takhli Royal Thai AFB, Thailand. An aircraft pneudraulic repairman, he is a graduate of Lutheran Central High School.

- 2nd Lt. David J. Collison of Davenport, Iowa, has been awarded silver wings upon graduation from the U.S. Air Force navigator school at Mather AFB, Calif. He was undergoing specialized aircrew training before reporting to his first permanent unit. The lieutenant attended Valparaiso (Ind.) University and received his bachelor's degree in marketing from the University of Iowa.

- A2C Gregory B. Wilson of Wyandanch, N.Y., has been graduated from the U.S. Air Force radio operators' training course at Keesler AFB, Miss. He is a graduate of Long Island Lutheran High School, Glenhead, N.Y.

Teenagers Seek Help From Churches

Conservative Protestant teenagers want their churches to give them more counsel on sex problems, more information on vocational opportunities, and more instruction on marriage preparation. This was revealed in a survey of 2,646 young people from 197 congregations representing almost 46 evangelical denominations, it was reported to the National Sunday School Convention in Minneapolis.

MAJOR JAMES D. SMITH is in charge of operations with the 1st Battalion, 8th Cavalry, 1st Calvary Division in Vietnam. A graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, he is a member of St. Mark Lutheran Church, Coral Gables, Fla.

PFC WILLIAM DALLMAN takes time off his guard post, atop a bunker at Landing Zone Ollie in South Vietnam, to pose for a snapshot. Dallman is a member of St. John-St. James Lutheran Church, Reedsville, Wis.

PFC EUGENE R. KOCHER is division chaplain's assistant with the 1st Cavalry Division in South Vietnam. He is a member of Martin Luther Lutheran Church, Bucyrus, Ohio, where he was serving as organist before entering the Army. Kocher had been working with a children's choir in a Protestant church in Bong Son, teaching them to sing some hymns in English, prior to the time that his unit moved to a new area of operations.

Church News Capsule

"Revolution among the Romans" was the No. 1 religion story of the past year, according to Dr. Albert P. Stauderman, associate editor of The Lutheran, biweekly of the Lutheran Church in America.

"While Lutherans were observing the anniversary of a Reformation," he noted, "the Roman Catholics were undergoing one." Listed as evidences of the "revolution" were "tremendous changes" in Vatican organization, involvement of the laity in the church, the celibacy debate, the "new look" in nuns, and open criticism of the church by its members.

Dr. Stauderman ranked "dismay over Vietnam" second in his evaluation of the year's news.

● Though Dr. Stauderman placed the 450th Reformation Anniversary fifth on his list, 27,000 persons attended a Lutheran anniversary celebration in the Los Angeles Sports Arena.

Kenneth Hahn, president of the Los Angeles Coliseum and Sports Arena Commission, said that more people came to the event than to any other since the arena was built in 1960. Arena officials were forced to halt admissions when the total reached 17,179, but another 10,000 listened outside via loudspeakers.

● Representatives of religious and other groups concerned with adult education heard a U.S. senator, who is a Lutheran layman, advocate free higher education for all qualified Americans.

Asserting that about one-half of U.S. adults have no high school diploma, Sen. Vance Hartke (D-Ind.) said there should be no so-called "financial test" for those seeking a higher education. He addressed approximately 1,500 delegates in Philadelphia attending sessions considering the needs in adult education.

● The Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine, largest French Gothic cathedral in the world, will remain unfinished as a monument to "the present agonies in our cities," Bishop Horace W. B. Donegan of New York announced. The bishop said that the urban crisis in the metropolitan New York area prompted him to cancel plans made a year ago for completion of the building. The cathedral is located on the edge of Harlem.

● "The Antkeeper," an original 30-minute dramatic television production of the Lutheran Church in America, is being released to U.S. stations.

The dramatic story of creation and redemption makes use of live ants as "actors" for half of the program. A naturalist photographer spent a year filming this portion of "The Antkeeper."

THIS CROSS depicting the troubles and tensions which the world faces today was displayed at the annual assembly of the Disciples of Christ in St. Louis. The nine-foot cross was designed by John R. Fulton of Indianapolis. Some of the objects used to make it were brass knuckles, bullets, knives, rope, and empty whiskey bottles.

THE CREW of the nuclear submarine USS JOHN ADAMS presents a plaque to the American Bible Society through its Armed Services Liaison Secretary, the Rev. Steve P. Gaskins (left). Accepting the award was Dr. James Z. Nettinga, the society's executive secretary for national distribution. The award marks 150 years of ABS service to military personnel. The society recently distributed its 50 millionth Bible to the armed services.

Churches Help Low-Income Families Purchase Homes

Twelve Lutheran congregations in the District of Columbia have united in a cooperative parish to seek "congregational renewal and community involvement." Their first project is to help low-income families become home owners.

Home Buyers Inc. was formed by members of the Cooperative Lutheran Parish of Washington. The corporation already has provided the down payment on two homes and procured mortgages for two Negro families.

The families, in which both husband and wife work, pay rent to the group until the down payment is paid off, at which point the title is transferred to the occupants. Home Buyers Inc. hopes to buy one house a month for those low-income families now paying high rents in substandard living quarters.

Prepare Homes, Tenants

Operating capital for the corporation comes from contributions and 5 per cent debentures. Its members scout neighborhoods for homes in the $13,000-$25,000 price range which require low down payments. They do minor repair work on the homes and help the new occupants switch from tenancy to home ownership.

The cooperative parish has grown from seven Lutheran Church in America congregations to 12 churches, two of which are affiliated with The Luthern Church Missouri Synod and one with The American Lutheran Church.

The Rev. Daniel L. Pierotti, LCA pastor who directs the parish, explained the direction of the joint endeavor. The church has fallen into a "sociological trap," he claimed. "We've been drawing dividing lines between suburbs and cities, black and white, high-income and low-income. When we've been talking about community organization, we've only talked in terms of how to help the poor.

"We should talk about political viability, how to give birth to a body politic. In doing so we must put our institutions on the line and place the community above denominationalism. . . . The job is not to save the church but to make the city a fit place to live in."

Harlem Storefront

In another attempt to serve the community, a Harlem, N.Y., storefront, rented with funds given by the Lutheran Church in America, has been opened as the HARCAP (Harlem College Assistance Program) Information Center. The center will provide information on college programs, college admission procedures, and the possibilities and procedures of applying for financial aid.

HARCAP, which was started through efforts of Lutherans in 1964, also sponsors a tutorial program for high school students.

Others sponsoring the information center with the LCA are the Ministerial Interfaith Association, the Methodist Board of Missions, the Catholic Archdiocese of New York, and the Urban League of Greater New York.

Cooperating with the center are Columbia University and the City University of New York, which are providing counselors, and the College Entrance Examination Board, which is providing the program, resource material, and a staff worker.

Rufus K. Newlin, director of the center, noted that the group wanted a storefront to help not only students still in high school but also high school graduates in the community who felt they could not go to college. Newlin said that there were many "diamonds in the rough" in the Harlem community. "They have to be found and they have to be helped," he said.

Lutheran GIRL OF THE MONTH

TALENTED . . . UNDERSTANDING . . . reliable . . . warm . . . "the real queenly type"—that's the way they describe Miss Margaret Lee at Luther College, Decorah, Iowa, where she was selected as the 1967 Homecoming Queen.

Royalty is nothing new to our February selection as Lutheran Girl of the Month. Other honors at Luther include freshman lady-in-waiting, a member of the winter carnival court, and twice track queen.

Miss Lee, her parents—Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. A. Lee—and three sisters and two brothers are members of Bethlehem Lutheran Church, Baldwin, Long Island, N.Y.

She is a senior at Luther where she carries a double major—art and French. Teaching is in her future. "I love design," comments the lovely miss, "and I think that I would enjoy commercial art. But even more than that, I want to teach, to help high school kids understand the ideas and concepts that I love."

Miss Lee's varied activities at the college have included dorm counseling, co-chairmanship of the 1966 Arabian Nights homecoming festivities, and membership in the Nordic Choir and Honor Council. Among her hobbies are painting, sewing, and designing Christmas cards.

College Students Ask Building Moratorium

A resolution asking The American Lutheran Church to declare a moratorium on all church building for two years was adopted by a conference of 150 ALC college students meeting at Augsburg College, Minneapolis. Instead of buildings, it was proposed that the ALC's American missions division establish other forms of ministry including congregations without buildings, ministries without congregations, and programs of service.

Lutheran Schools Note Increased Enrollment

Student enrollments in Lutheran seminaries, colleges, and high schools in the United States and Canada reached 100,795 in the 1967-68 school year, an increase of 1,027 over the previous report. Statistics showed 4,181 students in 20 seminaries, 73,783 in 37 colleges and universities, 5,734 in 19 junior colleges, and 17,097 in church-related high schools.

Church Attendance Up, But Students Called Drop-Outs

How seriously do people today take their religious beliefs? What is the attitude of young people toward the church? What are people searching for in a religious faith?

These were some of the questions explored from various approaches in recent weeks.

For example, a nationwide Gallup survey shows that 97 per cent of the Americans interviewed attest to a belief in God.

Another poll by George Gallup's American Institute of Public Opinion found that church attendance, for the first time in 10 years, rose in the United States in 1967. During a typical week 45 per cent of all adult Americans —about 51,000,000 persons—attended a worship service, Gallup said.

Lutherans Higher

The sampling showed that 66 per cent of U.S. Roman Catholics worshipped, compared to 36 per cent of Protestants. Lutherans and Baptists have the best church-going records among the five major Protestant denominations.

Meanwhile today's college students increasingly are becoming a generation of church dropouts. Or at least so states Dr. John E. Cantelon, director of the school of religion at the University of Southern California. He contends, nevertheless, that the contemporary young generation is neither faithless nor irreligious.

"If religion is a matter of man's ultimate concerns and is related to such values as goodness, love, and decency, then today's young people are religious," Dr. Cantelon states. "But it must be admitted that this college generation, to a significant extent, has abandoned the God of their fathers together with the old theological formularies assocaited with Him."

Dogma vs. Life

The USC educator believes that many college students feel the church is so "tied up" with dogma that a basic element in religion—how a person lives—tends to be overlooked.

A similar chord is sounded by Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, general secretary of the World Council of Churches. He claims that younger generations in Europe and America are not rejecting the "authentic Christian faith" so much as they object to a popular heresy with which "20th century Christianity in the affluent nations has confused our Christian faith."

He termed the heresy as one founded on "a pseudo-scientific evolutionism" identifying God with nature and making successful competition and survival the goals of human effort. Not only are youth rejecting the heresy of the "successful," Dr. Blake said, but older persons are also finding it inadequate, "and this is the crisis of faith in America as we move from 1967 to 1968."

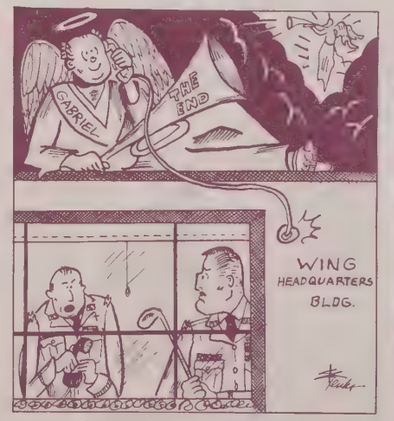
Meaning in Life

The No. 1 interest of 3,000 college age youth attending the nationwide University Christian Movement Conference in Cleveland was not the draft, nor Vietnam, nor racial justice, nor even sex.

Their main interest was in finding meaning, both in their individual lives and in the complex society of which they are a part, according to the conclusions drawn by conference leaders following a poll "built into" the meeting.

Layman Expands Ministry in Military Through Cartooning

"On the one side we have the LIBERAL theologians who would have us believe God wants us to debate and dispute the Bible . . ."



". . . On the other hand we have the CONSERVATIVE faction which tell us . . ."

"It says: 'Paul of Tarsus to the brotherhood of the church at Rome: Disregard last letter . . ."

"It"s the hotline, colonel! Sounds like something big!"

A layman carries on his Christian ministry in many ways—his family relationships, the concern he expresses for others, the words of witness he speaks, his faithfulness to the particular task to which God has called Him, for example.

This is true also in the military. A Christian discovers various opportunities to share the life in Christ that he enjoys. Some find that they have special gifts for communicating with people.

SGT JENKS

Such a man is Sgt Phil Jenks, a Baptist layman who speaks through an always fresh medium—humor. Some examples of his work appear on these pages.

Sergeant Jenks is a chaplain services specialist in the U.S. Air Force assigned to the RAF Station Woodbridge in Suffolk, England.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmore Jenks of Morrisville, N.Y., he is a graduate of Morrisville-Eaton Central School where he was art director of the newspaper and yearbook. He served as editorial cartoonist of the Mid-York Weekly of Hamilton, N.Y., in 1962-63.

Since enlisting in the Air Force in 1964, Sergeant Jenks has used his artistic talents in expanding his Christian ministry—drawing for chapel booklets and pamphlets and designing numerous posters and other materials for the chaplains' offices of RAF Stations Bentwaters/Woodbridge.

As a chaplain services specialist, he is responsible for the general office administration of Air Force chaplains at the base, including bookeeping, typing of professional and official correspondence, etc. In off-duty time he serves as lay adviser for a Protestant Youth of the Chapel group.

Sergeant Jenks' talents were brought to the attention of A Mighty Fortress by TSgt Raymond V. Morgan, noncommissioned officer in charge of the RAF Bentwaters-RAF Woodbridge Chaplain Section. He praises his co-worker for his "very good work" and for "an imagination to match his talent."

CHRIS THOMFORDE

Princeton's Lutheran Basketballer

This article is reprinted with permission from the Jan. 3, 1968, issue of "The Lutheran," copyright 1968 by the Commission on Church Papers, Lutheran Council in America.

BY THE CLOSING minutes of the second half, the game was no longer a contest, and nobody was more disappointed than the sophomore center.

It was late December 1966, and Princeton University was on the verge of its first basketball defeat of the season. This was not one of the young player's better performances. But he would not allow defeat to get the best of him.

A week later he was leading his team toward another winning streak, as Princeton went on to establish an all-time school record (25-3) and rank as one of the best collegiate quintets in the nation.

The Tigers are figured to post impressive performances again this winter. If they do, that disappointed sophomore of a year earlier will be a major contributor.

As one of America's top basketball players, Christopher Thomforde already owns a host of Princeton's individual records. Nationally renowned for his hardwood talents, Chris is more than an excellent basketball player.

Future Pastor

When he leaves Princeton in the spring of 1969, Chris expects to prepare for the Lutheran ministry. A member of The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, he is headed for Concordia Seminary in St. Louis.

"When I was in junior high school, I decided to devote my life to Christ," Chris declares. The majority of America's thousands of athletes are fine young men. But this does not sound like an ordinary basketball player talking.

Chris Thomforde is not ordinary.

At Princeton, Chris is a history major. Now a junior, he's studying medieval and Russian history, religion and Greek . . . and doing research on feudalism in medieval Europe.

Furthermore, this semester Thomforde is a "big brother" to 10 Princeton freshmen. He's a leading force in the campus fund drive, and works with the Princeton Evangelical Fellowship and the Student Christian Association. And he assists with confirmation classes at Messiah Lutheran Church in Princeton.

Ernest Gordon, dean of Princeton's chapel, says of Chris: "He is a highly dedicated young man with a delightful sense of humor, and an openness to the convictions of other people. He is one of the truly creative influences on our campus."

"Something Extra"

How do Thomforde's fellow students feel about him? "They don't make fun of you because you are a Christian," he says "They look up to you, feeling that you might have something extra. They're often anxious to learn why."

On Sunday mornings, he is very noticeable in the congregation because of his height. More than that, he is noticeable because he usually brings a group of fellow students to chapel with him.

His influence carries onto the basketball court. Says Princeton's new coach, Pete Carril: "He is an extremely hard worker, but his greatest contribution is his Christian behavior. In the future, he'll provide strength for this crazy world."

Headmaster's Influence

During his high school years, the Thomfordes were members of Trinity, Kirksville, Long Island. Chris went to Long Island Lutheran High School and was a member of its second graduating class in 1965.

He looks back fondly on his days at Lutheran High, and his association with the headmaster, Edward F. Visscher. "Pastor Visscher, aside from my family, was the most influential person in my life."

Visscher feels that Thomforde is a leader in every sense of the word. "He is willing to give of himself, but he also expects and demands the same of other people. And while he possesses many talents, he has always been unashamedly a Christian young man."

Pastor Visscher remembers Thomforde as a high school basketballer. "Chris was the first junior ever placed on the Newsday All-Long Island Team. Only five boys out of approximately 1,500 are so honored. The second year, he made three All-American teams."

The 6'-9" sophomore who paced Princeton in total points (419) and rebounds (270) last season, and who was voted to the All-Ivy team, the All-Tournament team of the NCAA Eastern Regional Championships, and honorable mention on numerous All-America quintets, was somewhat awkward as a high school

"THE PAWNBROKER"—just a suspense story of a Harlem merchant fighting for survival? Or can it give poignant insight into the problem of man's alienation to man? Rod Steiger portrays Sol Nazerman in the film which some see as a powerful parable of redemption through sacrificial love.

A New Look At the Movies

By ROBERT E. A. LEE

Department of Films, Lutheran Council in the U.S.A.

There's more to the movies than meets the eye!

I don't need to tell you that films have changed. The industry claims that they have become more "adult." Some observers believe that means that movies are more adulterous. At any rate, the bars are down. Almost any subject can now be treated on the screen. No one in our society is protected any more by censorship.

That means that there is more entertainment garbage with which to deal. It also means that there is more substantial content for us to consider. Another way to say it is that bad motion pictures are worse now than before, and good films are better.

Because we normally look at films to be entertained, both bad and good films will flourish as long as there is need to escape from reality into some never-never land. Movies transport us to a vicarious adventure and the public's appetite for laughter, tears, pathos, and bathos will continue to be served by the movie merchants.

Television Changes Things

Films are different today in part because of the impact of television upon our society. Films have changed in order to provide the public with an alternative to the superficial situation comedies and dramas of the TV tube.

What will happen next is anybody's guess, now that the most popular TV programs are themselves old (and not so old) movies. Will theatrical films move even further to extreme forms to compete with free movies on TV? Where will the cycle end?

I suggest that today's new kind of cinema presents the thinking person with a rare opportunity.

It begins with a search for the good vs. the bad film. This is not to be discovered by reading the advertisements. A picture cannot be evaluated by its title and not by its featured performers. The critical reviews are the best help. No one need be without advance notice on the content and worth of a film. Popular magazines and most daily newspapers make some kind of attempt to review films. One review usually is not enough. Comparing two or three reviews will give you a basis for deciding if you want to see the picture.

Look for Two Levels

The opportunity—assuming now the film is recommended by someone in advance—really comes at discovering what it means to see a movie on two levels:

The first level is the surface story and action.

The second level is the meaning of the story, the interaction of characters, the insights into life that come through on the silver screen.

For example, "The Pawnbroker" may be seen as a suspense story of a Harlem merchant fighting the battle of survival in the cold inner city jungle. Or it can give poignant insight into the problem of man's alienation to man—the sin of human exploitation—and can become for a viewer a powerful parable of redemption through sacrificial love (Can you think of a better symbol of redemption for contemporary man than a pawnbroker?)

Not All Sordid

Not all cinema metaphors are sordid stories—although so many do mirror man's inhumanity to man. But take a delightful, funny, uplifting film like "The Shameless Old Lady." In this French movie the heroine is a widow of more than three score and ten years. She has spent her entire life serving her husband and children. Others have learned to exploit her willingness to serve them.

Suddenly she learns what it means to celebrate life in freedom. We follow her in new adventures. It is exciting. It is delightful. We come to understand what it means to say "yes" to life. It isn't explicitly religious, but it is implicitly strong in affirming the sacredness of God's gift of life.

There are many other films that have important substance that help us to see what life is all about: sin, grace, love, forgiveness, freedom, pain, hope—issues of life about which every Christian should be concerned.

Guidelines for a New Look

Let me suggest some simple guidelines to help you take a new look at the movies. These are questions you may ask yourself before, during, and after you experience the picture. These suggestions are just the beginning—you can formulate your own guidelines to suit your particular needs.

1. What is the basic problem, the issue, the conflict in this story?
2. Is the picture the film presents authentic—true? Or is it phoney, unconvincing, a fraud with cardboard characters? Is there truth in it?
3. Are you in the film? That is, do you identify with any of the characters in the picture or any of the situations? Does this identification have any meaning to you . . . does it make any difference?
4. What does the film—the story, the interplay of characters, the self-revelation—say about your own relationships to others, to those you love or to any of your fellow human beings? Does it have anything to say about your relationship to God?

Take a new look at the movies! Sometimes this requires a second look. If it's a good movie, you may get double value by sitting through it twice. And while you think about these things, you can still be entertained, still have a vicarious experience, still laugh, still cry. Even more so!

Cage Star to Become Pastor

"Yet he demonstrated a tremendous capacity to improve himself," recalls Visscher. "Determination, as much as anything else, made him a fine basketball player.

"The strongest point of his game is involving other people. He is possibly the most outstanding team player in college basketball today. Not especially fast, he is in good condition for a big man."

Follows Bradley

Even opponents confess they're impressed by Thomforde. Jack Kraft, Villanova University's successful coach, vividly recalls a 1966 game against Princeton. "The only thing about him that was distasteful to me," grins Kraft, "was his rebounding. It was the major factor in our defeat."

Schools around the country were disappointed when Thomforde chose Princeton. A major reason for his selection was Bill Bradley.

Probably Princeton's all-time outstanding courtman, Bradley greatly impressed Thomforde when he attended a Fellowship of Christian Athletes camp where Bradley spoke.

"Bill talked about taking a stand for Christ," recalls Chris. "He emphasized the commitment between man and God. I felt that if there were people like Bill Bradley at Princeton, it must be a fine place."

The Fellowship of Christian Athletes includes hundreds of athletes from almost every sport. Founded in 1954, it is organized on high school, collegiate and community levels. Not an exclusive fraternity, the Fellowship wants athletes to witness for their faith.

At Princeton, where Thomforde is one of the Fellowship's leading lights, the 40-man group meets weekly. It conducts Bible studies and runs a basketball program in the town of Princeton.

Not for Pros

With another busy basketball campaign now in progress, Chris Thomforde doesn't get to spend much time at the Ivy Club. "Ivy" is one of Princeton's stately, historic "eating clubs." Woodrow Wilson was a member. So is Thomforde.

Yet sometimes of an early evening, Chris may be found there, chatting with classmates, playing ping-pong, relaxing in front of the television set, or explaining his plans to become a missionary.

Professional basketball does not loom in Thomforde's future. He feels he'll be out of condition for it by the time he finishes seminary.

Maybe he'll change his mind. Then again, his plans to do missionary work in Africa may develop precisely as he hopes.

But Chris Thomforde will be a forceful figure, no matter what he does.

The casual Sundays "at home" are arranged through the joint efforts of Mrs. Albert Huffman of St. Mark's and Chaplain Clarence T. Kuehn, assistant chaplain of the 2nd Basic Combat Training Brigade. The project grew out of picnic lunches which the Huffmans used to prepare for their son, Robert, and his friends in basic training. Robert now is a Signal Corps specialist in Vietnam.

The Sundays include 11 a.m. worship at St. Mark's, a home cooked meal, a drive to historical sites around Philadelphia or Trenton, and a few hours in the family's home. Usually four families serve as hosts for eight trainees each Sunday.

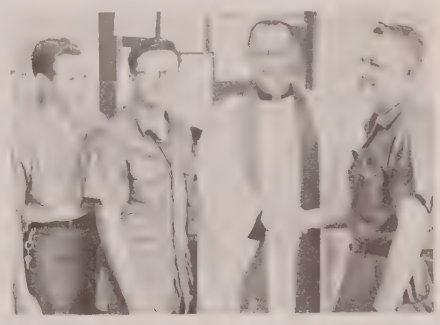
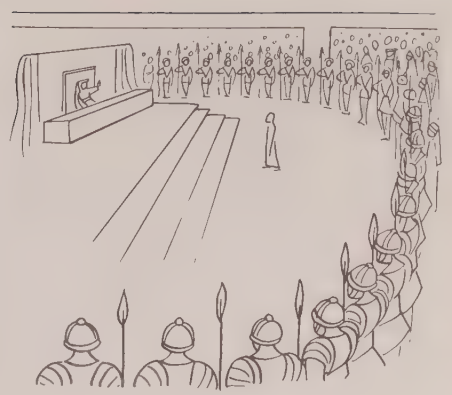
Cadet SSgt Mark Limmer is the training officer and flight sergeant of the Cadet unit. He'll solo as soon as he turns 16. Then there's Mini Cadet Tracy Limmer. A first grader, he's a CAP associate member and the unofficial mascot of the Georgia Wing.



MARGARET VOGLER, a west Texas farm miss, has been selected as the Lutheran Girl of the Month for March.

Miss Vogler, a member of St. Paul Lutheran Church, Lamesa, is a high school senior. She plans to enter Texas Lutheran College this fall. Active in the 4-H Club and Future Homemakers of America, she is the reigning Dawson County Farm Bureau Queen.



Miss Vogler has some understanding of military life. One of her brothers recently returned from a year's duty with the Marines in Vietnam. She has been instrumental in enlisting youth of the congregation to write regularly to six fellow members currently in the armed forces. At St. Paul Miss Vogler also is active in the Luther League.

"Margaret is an active Christian youth who is not afraid to witness for her Lord," writes the Rev. H. Charles Eckert of St. Paul. "She expresses her faith sometimes in a quiet way, yet at times with the vivaciousness which only a youth who is full of life can show."

Christ Lives and Reigns!

At every Passover Feast the Governor was in the habit of setting free any prisoner the crowd asked for. At that time there was a well-known prisoner named Jesus Barabbas. So when the crowd gathered, Pilate asked them, "Which one do you want me to set free for you, Jesus Barabbas or Jesus called the Christ?" He knew very well that they had handed Jesus over to him because they were jealous.

The chief priests and the elders persuaded the crowds to ask Pilate to set Barabbas free and have Jesus put to death. But the Governor asked them, "Which one of these two do you want me to set free for you?" "Barabbas!" they answered. "What, then, shall I do with Jesus called the Christ?" Pilate asked them. "Nail him to the cross!" they all answered. But Pilate asked, "What crime has he committed?" Then they started shouting at the top of their voices, "Nail him to the cross!"

When Pilate saw it was no use to go on, but that a riot might break out, he took some water, washed his hands in front of the crowd, and said, "I am not responsible for the death of this man! This is your doing!" The whole crowd answered back, "Let the punishment for his death fall on us and on our children!"

At noon the whole country was covered with darkness, which lasted for three hours. At about 3 o'clock Jesus cried out with a loud shout, Eli, Eli, lema sabachthaani? which means, "My God, my God, why did you abandon me?" Some of the people standing there heard him and said, "He is calling for Elijah!" One of them ran up at once, took a sponge, soaked it in wine, put it on the end of a stick, and tried to make him drink it. But the others said, "Wait, let us see if Elijah is coming to save him!" Jesus again gave a loud cry, and breathed his last.

Then the curtain hanging in the Temple was torn in two, from top to bottom. The earth shook, the rocks split apart, the graves broke open, and many of God's people who had died were raised to life. They left the graves; and after Jesus rose from death they went into the Holy City, where many people saw them.

When the army officer and the soldiers with him who were watching Jesus saw the earthquake and everything else that happened, they were terrified and said, "He really was the Son of God!" There were many women there . . . who had followed Jesus from Galilee and helped him. Among them were Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James and Joseph, and the mother of Zebedee's sons.

After the Sabbath, as Sunday morning was dawning, Mary Magdalene and the other Mary went to look at the grave. Suddenly there was a strong earthquake; an angel of the Lord came down from heaven, rolled the stone away and sat on it. His appearance was like lightning and his clothes were white as snow. The guards were so afraid that they trembled and became like dead men.

The angel spoke to the women. "You must not be afraid," he said. "I know you are looking for Jesus who was nailed to the cross. He is not here; he has risen, just as he said. Come here and see the place where he lay. Quickly, now, go and tell his disciples: 'He has been raised from death, and now he is going to Galilee ahead of you; there you will see him!' Remember what I have told you." So they left the grave in a hurry, afraid and yet filled with joy, and ran to tell his disciples.

Suddenly Jesus met them and said, "Peace be with you." They came up to him, took hold of his feet, and worshiped him.

MASHA RUE is "a very outstanding Christian girl in every way," commented the Rev. Peter Swiggum when he nominated her as our Lutheran Girl of the Month.

Marsha's outstanding abilities were recognized when she was recently selected in a state-wide competition as the 1968 Junior Miss of Iowa. This March Marsha was to be a candidate at the national Junior Miss Pageant in Mobile, Alabama.

A member of Lincoln Lutheran Church in Ridgeway, Iowa, Marsha has served as president of the Luther League and is presently secretary of the league. She is now completing the four year course in the high school Bible department of the church school. Marsha is a senior at Crestwood High School, an honor student, outstanding in the field of dramatics and forensics, editor of the school paper, and active in many other school affairs.

Young Lutheran Listed Among Scientific Elite

By WILLIAM KAMRATH

Reprinted with permission from Sept. 3, 1967 issue of "Lutheran Witness Reporter."

When West magazine devoted a special edition to science, it designated five Californians as "members of America's newest elite, scientific frontiersmen whose research takes them to the edge of man's knowledge and beyond."

First among this elite was the youngest, 32-year-old Dr. William B. Bridges, a member of Redeemer Lutheran Church, Thousand Oaks, Calif., and chief of gaseous-laser research at the Hughes Research Laboratories in nearby Malibu.

West, a weekly news and feature supplement of the powerful Los Angeles Times, characterizes Dr. Bridges as "the man who turned on the amazingly bright blue-and-green-gas laser, a significant event in laser technology because both the eye's retina and photo emulsions are more sensitive to these colors than to the ruby reds of the earlier crystal lasers."

"That," the article continues, "means the blue-green lasers are more effective in communications, as well as in photography and photo-chemical systems."

Dr. Bridges discovered the laser action in a special variety of argon gas which produced a continuous, high-powered beam in the blue and green. "Within three months after an initial observation," the article continues, "he found more than 130 new color variations, each of a different wave length, from varieties of gases."

The young frontiersman is credited with additional significant discoveries in the field of gas lasers and has contributed to the understanding of an electronic device—the diode . . .

Confirmed in 1957 at Zion Lutheran Church, Oakland, Calif., Dr. Bridges has been a member of Mount Calvary Lutheran, Beverly Hills, and of Redeemer, Thousand Oaks. . . .

On the job and in the neighborhood Dr. Bridges is an active missionary. A neighbor in Thousand Oaks and on the job in Malibu is also a next-seat neighbor during church services. The Bridges were a strong influence on the neighbor's decision to affiliate with Redeemer.

How does this scientist-frontiersman view the time-honored "conflict" between science and Scripture? Does he have problems in this area?

"Not personally," Dr. Bridges said, "but I've had a problem in discussions with other people. I think it's a matter of understanding.

"People generate the wrong ideas of what science is and what science says. If not religious, scientists may write off religion without knowing what religion is, without honestly seeking the truth.

"God is the author of science and the author of religion—and there is no problem. Where the two do not seem to fit together," he added, "you have to go on faith."

ANOTHER FULL Sunday morning ends for Dr. and Mrs. William B. Bridges at Redeemer Lutheran Church, Thousand Oaks, Calif. The youngsters are Ann, 7; Bruce, 5; and Michael, 2.

PHYLLIS RIBLET, known to ham radio operators as W5CXM, spends about three hours a day relaying messages to American sailors all over the world. Both Mrs. Riblet and her husband, Don, have developed strong friendships with many sea-going families.

Talking Is Her Hobby

By ROLF E. AASENG

Reprinted with permission from Oct. 3, 1967 issue of "The Lutheran Standard."

"The Ann Landers of ham radio" is how some of her friends describe Phyllis Riblet. By means of a short wave radio transmitter in her living room, she keeps in daily contact with American sailors all over the world, relaying messages to and from their families. "I keep wives informed as to the ship's location, when the men will be back, and how things are running," explains Mrs. Riblet. "Wives tell me the voyages seem much shorter because they know how things are going."

The locations of about 15 ships are kept up to date on a world map posted on the living room wall in the Riblets' suburban Houston home. Mrs. Riblet talks with four or five ships a day at a time and frequency previously agreed on. Often the messages are of an emergency nature, telling of illness or death. By means of a telephone "patch," it is possible for husband and wife actually to converse. Sometimes Mrs. Riblet relays messages by phone. As an example, she once talked with a shrimp fisherman in Nicaragua who had heard that his mother was desperately ill, but was unable to go home. "I called San Antonio and found his mother wasn't as ill as they'd thought, then let him know," she reports.

Friendships Developed

It isn't strange that strong friendships have developed between the Riblets and many sea-going families. "They always ask about my sister who is ill, and about Jeff" (The Riblets' eight-year-old son), says Mrs. Riblet.

The seamen rarely fail to call or visit the Riblets when they are in the port of Houston. As a consequence the Riblet living room has an assortment of unique souvenirs from all parts of the world.

Other Needs Served

Mrs. Riblet spends about three hours a day in her self-styled role as "den mother" to the sailors. She has no regrets that this schedule leaves no time for bridge parties, or even church women's organizations. "If each day I can bring happiness to someone, I feel I will have accomplished more than many people do."

Phyllis shares her hobby with her husband Don, an engineer. She is known as W5CXM; Don is W5HUX. Appropriately enough, they met by radio when he was working on a seismograph ship. "It's a big joke in my family that he married me for my radio equipment," laughs Phyllis.

They don't limit their radio conversations to sailors. After Hurricane Carla they relayed messages to and from disaster areas. The Riblets have talked with missionaries in South America whose only contact with the outside world is through short wave radio. (They wonder if there are any hams among ALC missionaries.) And they tell of the Peace Corps worker they talked with who would give anything for a popsicle. "You meet the nicest people in the world," they say.

Some time ago the Riblets were involved in a medical ministry too. Friends of theirs, Kirby and Harriet Woehst, had on several occasions acted as go-betweens to arrange for medical treatment, available in Houston, for people in other countries. This had led not only to transmitting messages back and forth by short wave, but also to opening their homes to families while one member was hospitalized. On one occasion the Woehsts could not care for a family from Peru and asked the Riblets to take over.

Christian Concern

These evidences of Christian concern in time of need not only led to the formation of friendships across international boundaries. They also changed the picture several South Americans had of what North Americans are like. Radio Free Europe and the Voice of America carried the story of a devout Roman Catholic family from South America being cared for by the Woehsts, a devout American Lutheran family in Texas.

The Riblets have more in common with the Woehsts than friendship with a Peruvian family and the hobby of ham radio. They had been friends for a long time, and the Woehsts always kept insisting that social activities should never interfere with their worship in church. Finally the Riblets decided they'd better find out what made church so important to their friends. As a result the Riblets are now enthusiastic fellow-members with the Woehsts of Faith Church in Bellaire.

To say that a person has a gift of gab may ordinarily be a somewhat dubious compliment. But in the case of people like Phyllis Riblet, the ability to converse is truly a gift, which she has put to a unique Christian service.

LCA Urges Social Action

At the annual meeting of synod presidents in Cincinnati, Ohio, Dr. Franklin Clark Fry, president of the Lutheran Church in America, presented the warning to "America and fellow-Christians" to awaken to "a racial emergency of gigantic proportions in the United States.

"Dear partners," he said to the 32 synod presidents, "for all who are not yet awake, a shrill alarm is sounding.

"Unstop your ears and be startled," Dr. Fry continued. "What is commonly called the 'racial crisis' . . . is real . . . Unpleasant as it is for me to say and for you to hear, the United States confronts a time of spiralling and spreading violence to make one's blood run cold unless a massive improvement of the lot of Negro ghettos comes quickly."

He went on: "Frighteningly outspoken Negro people are more and more expressing their willingness to die for what they believe is right, and they are not unwilling to have others die with them. Our black brothers and sisters are convinced that the greater share of the guilt lies on the other side and many of them are not disposed to take their lesser faults into account.

"You understand, I am speaking sympathetically of these people. If there is an explosive uprising, the heaviest responsibility will rest on white society which did not act when there still was a chance. We must find a way to deal with the problem of racism in our white neighborhoods and churches.

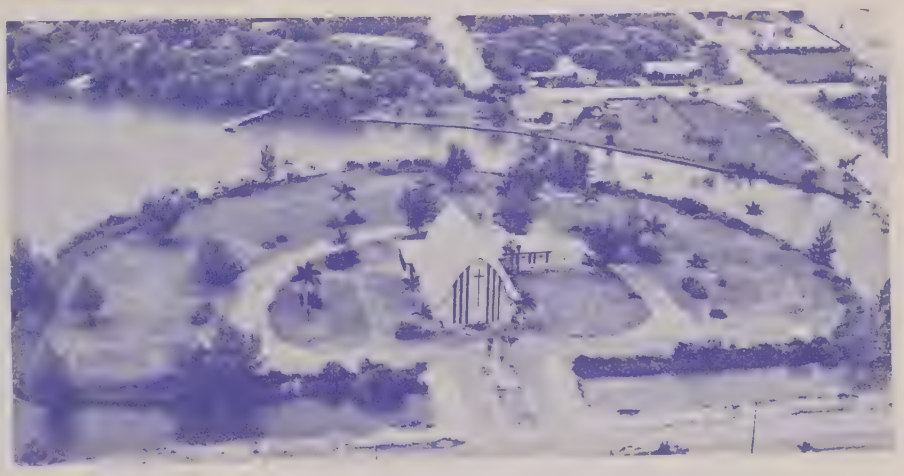
"I realize that this kind of a stand will alienate all those who believe that the answer lies simply in the increase of law enforcement and in heavier repression. But, as Christians, we must take the lead in compassion and for justice, no matter the consequences."

Dr. Fry concluded his plea with: "America, awake. Fellow Christians, let our consciences be stirred even more than our fears."

Moonport Church on Island

The Rev. George C. Serbe Jr. enjoys a unique ministry at the Lutheran Church of the Resurrection at Cocoa Beach, Florida, where he serves the space age community at Cape Kennedy.

What message does a Lutheran pastor have for people living in Moonport, U.S.A.? To this question Pastor Serbe replied: "The message of the good news of the Gospel—the good news of a God who in spite of all the advancements and accomplishments, complexities and uncertainties, problems and pressures of the missile age, still is God: big enough, wise enough, powerful enough to be the God of our expanding knowledge and exploration of our universe."



Pastor Serbe went on to admit he had deep concerns about serving this space age community.

"What could I tell men involved and absorbed almost completely in the . . . awesome task of preparing and launching vehicles and persons into space? What could I tell families whose daily diet of conversation centers around the next launch?"

Recalling his early discussions with adults after his arrival five years ago, Pastor Serbe continues, "I decided from all they told me that they needed basic, simple, and expository preaching to help them understand the person and nature of God and relate his teachings and purposes to their own daily lives."

The other unique aspect of Pastor Serbe's ministry is the church building itself. The congregation bought a 3½ acre island on which the church was constructed. Pastor Serbe can, and does, go from the parsonage to the church by boat. With a third of the church members having their own boats, the congregation plans to build a boat dock in the future.

MEANWHILE

At Home—At the Front

Chaplain John F. Seibert II was wounded late in January during an artillery and rocket attack on a Marine unit based near the Demilitarized Zone in South Vietnam. Chaplain Seibert, the eighth Lutheran chaplain to be injured in Vietnam, was awarded the Purple Heart.

● "A Time for Burning," an hour-long motion picture on race relations commissioned by Lutheran Film Associates, has been nominated for an Academy Award as a documentary feature: The Oscar presentations are scheduled for April 8.

Fourteen years ago "Martin Luther," a full-length film on the leader of the Protestant Reformation, was nominated for Oscars in the categories of cinematography and art direction.

"A Time for Burning" depicts an Omaha community in tension and struggle over race relations with actual incidents involving Negroes and whites filmed as they happened.

● Lutheran Service Centers around the globe recorded more than 250,000 visits by military personnel during the first nine months of 1967, according to a report filed for the second annual meeting of the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A.

The Division of Service to Military Personnel listed 263,743 visits to the seven overseas and 10 stateside centers.

As a regular part of its program, the division maintains service centers in Kaiserlautern, Germany; Olongapo, Philippine Islands; Awase Meadows, Okinawa; Guam; Tachikawa, Japan; Seoul, Korea; and Bangkok, Thailand.

As a special project, it also administers centers in San Francisco and San Diego, Calif.; Tacoma, Wash.; El Paso, San Antonio and Killeen, Tex.; Charleston, S.C.; and Jacksonville, N.C.

Florida Man Files Suit Against "God and Co."

Four years ago when George Albrecht sued the city of Lake Worth, Florida, for injuries sustained when a rain-soaked sidewalk collapsed under him, a jury ruled the claim was invalid, invoking the "act of God" rule.

Accordingly, Mr. Albrecht has filed suit against a group of defendants designated as "God and Co." Co-defendants with the deity are 32 local churches and synagogues. Copies of the allegations by plaintiff Albrecht have been delivered to each of the religious bodies, but court officials have been unable to deliver a copy to the principal defendant.

The Rev. James Magnuson of the Evangelical Covenant Church, said he believed the expression "act of God" is "a misnomer. If this keeps up," he said, "people will be suing the churches every time a tree falls."

The Rev. E. W. Zilch of Bethel Pentecostal Temple said, "If he brings the Principal Defendant into court, I'll be glad to testify for Him."

UNDER ORDERS

SSgt James M. McKnight of Belleville, Arkansas, on duty at Tan Son Nhut AB, Vietnam. Sgt. McKnight, a weather equipment technician, is a member of the Air Weather Service in support of the Pacific Air Forces. Before his arrival in Vietnam, he was assigned to the 9th Weather Squadron at Mountain Home AFB, Idaho. His wife Jean is the daughter of Chaplain (Major) and Mrs. Gilfred C. Newhouse, now serving in the Aleutians.

The Outstanding CST graduate for the cycle in the Fourth Combat Support Training Brigade is PVT Paul R. Burtis of Co C, 3d Bn. Mr. Nelson LaBorde, Alexandria Chamber of Commerce representative, presented the award to PVT Burtis as MG Ellis Williamson, Commander of Fort Polk, looked on. PVT Burtis is a native of Minneapolis, Minn., where he was a member of Woodlake Lutheran Church. Chaplain Just of Fort Polk writes of PVT Burtis' added leadership in his worship attendance. When asked about his views on worship, PVT Burtis replied, "The best bestower of personal security is God. In this area, homework is necessary." PVT Burtis lists his home as Bixby, Oklahoma, where his wife Barbara resides.

Three Lutherans participated in the development of the world's largest airplane, the C-5 Galaxy, unveiled to the public on March 2 at Marietta, Ga. The new jet transport will make it possible to deploy fully equipped ground force combat units of division size from the U.S. to points of crises in the world practically overnight. Mr. Roy C. Thomas (bottom left photo), an aerospace engineer, and Air Force Sgt Larry L. Pedersen, an accounts maintenance clerk, were assigned to the U.S. Air Force Plant Representative Office at the Lockheed-Georgia plant where the mammoth intercontinental cargo and personnel carrier was built. 2d Lt Donald M. Tench III, of Franklin Village, Michigan, (bottom right photo) serves as a procurement officer in the Air Force Systems Command's Aeronautical Systems Division at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, which developed the plane.

'I Am A Science Nut'

Janice Petersen, Westinghouse Science Talent Search winner, gives her views on careers, guys, religion and life.

Reprinted by permission of EDGE magazine, published by the Joint Youth Publications Council for Division of Youth Activity of The American Lutheran Church; Commission on Youth Activities and the Luther League, Lutheran Church in America; and the International Walther League, The Lutheran Church —Missouri Synod. Photos by John S. Kerr.

THE AFTERNOON was beautiful, cloudless, and warm. Our reporter slowed his car before a modest home on Balboa Boulevard in Van Nuys, California. His assignment: to interview the first alternate winner in the Westinghouse Science Talent Search, a national high school competition run by the Science Clubs of America.

At his ring Janice Lynn Petersen, 17, opened the front door. She stood there in tight stretch pants and a baggy sweat shirt, eyes sparkling, golden hair a-swing, a welcoming smile on her mobile face.

Prepared as he was for an intense intellectual (he admits that he expected someone lanky and earnest) wearing glasses (all female scientists wear glasses), the reporter followed EDGE's cover girl into the house in a daze from which he has still not fully recovered.

Then, over coffee served by Janice's mother while Janice drank a coke, the following interview took place.

Question: Can you tell me about the research you did that won you a trip to Washington, D.C. and that two hundred fifty-dollar prize?

Janice (obviously used to explaining a year's work in three minutes): I worked on a new brain protein, S-100. Blake Moore at Washington University discovered it in 1965 so there weren't many papers published on it.

S-100 is really neat. It's a very small protein, only has a molecular weight of 30,000 and it is the most negatively charged of the proteins. You find it in the glia. . . .

Question: The WHAT?! How do you spell it?

Janice: G-l-i-a. It's between the neurons and capillaries.

Question: ! ! !

Janice: Its function isn't yet known. Maybe it has something to do with learning or retardation. I wanted to find out what it did so first I had to find a way to measure it. I had this grant from the Committee for the Advancement of Science and I was working at the UCLA Brain Research Center under this wonderful guy, Dr. Charles Spooner.

It was really discouraging. I mean, I had a lot of false starts and it looked like I was getting nowhere fast. I was using electrophoresis . . . (pause—smile) That's spelled e-l-e-c-t-r . . . Electrophoresis is a way of separating different components in a mixture on the basis of their electrical charge. Since S-100 is the most negatively charged, it would flow to the cathode.

Janice interrupted herself a moment and went for the apparatus she used in her work. With animation and excitment she explained it to the interested but puzzled reporter.

Janice: I used a gel of polyacrylamide . . . p-o-l-y-a . . . as the vehicle and then separated the S-100 in a tube of the poly stuff. The different proteins formed different layers like little discs and I could measure them with a spectrophotometer.

This is where I really got discouraged. No one had done separations in polyacryl before. They used potato starch so I couldn't use published reports. When I separated the brain proteins I had to discover which one was S-100. This involved a lot of adjusting in the poly concentrate so it acted like a proper sieve and separated the protein well.

With gleeful gestures she explained the plastic contraption that looked like a large cylinder surrounded by smaller vials. A bunch of wires ran out each end.

Janice: You put on 400 volts and wow!, the proteins really move.

Question: How long have you been interested in science?

Janice: Ever since I can remember. Since I was four years old, sitting in the grass watching the caterpillars wiggle around. Then I had an eighth grade teacher who really taught me that science was groovy . . . .

Subsequent questioning revealed that Janet

Martin Luther King

Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., the slain civil rights leader who preached non-violence in his struggle for equal rights for poor people—both black and white—once stated, "From my Christian background I gained my ideals and from Gandhi my operational technique." His immovable position of non-violence, based on his Christian faith, led him to plead forgiveness when his own home was bombed, to suffer brutality and the indignities of imprisonment and still declare, ". . . we must not lose faith in our white brothers," and to untiringly continue his role as leader of the oppressed even in the face of danger and ultimate death.

When death came to Dr. King, an entire world was shocked.

Within hours of his death, statements were issued by Lutheran leaders. Dr. Franklin Clark Fry, president of the Lutheran Church in America, commented that "as an American, I am profoundly ashamed; as a member of the white race, I feel a sense of revulsion and guilt; as a fellow member of the Christian Church, I grieve at the death of one who exemplified non-violence that he learned from our common Savior. I pray that his spirit and the deep motivation of his life prevail."

Dr. Fry attended the private funeral services at Ebenezer Baptist Church, Atlanta, where Dr. King had shared the pulpit with his father. Later a processional march led the mourners to the college where Dr. King had studied and to a public service at the campus quadrangle. Dr. Fry read the Scripture lesson at the public service which included the Beatitudes.

Dr. Fredrik A. Schiotz, president of The American Lutheran Church, stated that "a great oak among the Negro people has fallen and another blot of shame has spilled over the history pages of our beloved land. But Martin Luther King has not lived in vain. His dedication to complete the actualization of the Emancipation Proclamation will be carried forward by millions of people to full realization in our generation."

A statement by Dr. Oliver R. Harms, president of The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, echoed similar feelings when he said, "The synod I serve recently observed a Sunday of repentance and prayer appealing to God for forgiveness for our nation and its people, especially for the many godless acts of loveless people against the unfortunate. I pray that God have mercy upon us all."

Amplified by his death, these words of Martin Luther King continue to challenge America today as they did in the summer of 1963. At the conclusion of the awesome march of some 200,000 Negroes on Washington, Dr. King stood on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial and said:

"Even though we face the difficulties of today and tomorrow, I still have a dream. I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal.'"

Blind Seminarian Listens to Smiles

By RUTH ANN SODEN
Kitchener-Waterloo Record Religion Editor

Reprinted by permission from the Waterloo Lutheran University "Campus."

Have you ever heard someone smile?

If you haven't, it is simply because you didn't listen. Walter Gibbons, a blind student at Waterloo Lutheran Seminary, is always listening to hear how people smile. That is one way he tells what people are like.

Although he has been blind since birth, he can pick out a good-looking girl.

"I listen to her footstep, and to her voice, and to the way she handles herself and to her smile. When a person smiles their top lip tightens and it cuts off the p's and t's. Oh, I've got a lot of little tricks," he said, laughing and slapping his leg.

Walter, 22, is from Colonia, N.J. He and his brother James, 26, have both been blind since birth. Neither one ever attended schools for the blind. Both have university degrees.

"There is no reason a blind student can't go to university if he is willing to get out of himself a bit and see what is really real in the world."

Walter has kept up to his fellow students and more. While in his last year at Upsala College he spent 70 hours each week in extra-curricular activities and still graduated with a B-average. He is classed as a semi-professional guitarist and is self-taught, even though he was told he couldn't play because his fingers were too short.

"As soon as you tell somebody he can't do something you're passing a judgment on him. You have to take each blind person individually."

Walter's sense of humor never stops. If someone is having trouble doing something he tells them to give it to him and he'll do it with his eyes closed. One of his favorite tricks is to walk into a room full of people in the evening and turn out the light.

Walter has wanted to be a minister since he started going to Sunday School at the age of six. His own synod refused to ordain him because of his blindness. "They didn't think I could handle a parish. But I don't want to go into parish work anyway. The three things I would like to go into are chaplaincy at a university, radio-TV ministry and institutional work in blind schools."

One advantage he has over his sighted friends is that he can read in the dark. Not only that, when he has a sermon to give, he can read his notes without anyone realizing he is doing it because he looks directly at his congregation while his fingers slide along the braille.

Lutherans in the Service

In June 1967, CHAPLAIN K. DAVID NORDSTROM (photo right) visited a community of approximately 7,000 refugees in the village of Doi. "I . . . knew that our people at home could and would help," writes Chaplain Nordstrom. "Over $1,200 in cash alone has been sent plus many boxes of clothing." Contributions came from Saunders County, Neb., St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Tribune, Kan., and St. Timothy's Lutheran Church, New Orleans, La. Money was also sent by the Protestant and Catholic Chapels at the Naval Air Station, Corpus Christi, Tex., Chaplain Nordstrom's last duty station. "It's been an inspiration to carry out the final phase of other people's love and concern for those in need," said Chaplain Nordstrom.

MSGT GLENN A. WELZ (photo left), a member of the 14th Field Maintenance Squadron, has been selected as the Airman of the Year for Nha Trang Air Base. A veteran of more than 13 years service, Sergeant Welz was graduated from a Strategic Air Command noncommissioned officers preparatory school in 1960 and the SAC NCO Academy in 1965. In addition to his extensive military training, he has attended the University of Maryland (Europe); Bethany College, Linsborg, Kan.; Black Hills State College, Spearfish, S.D.; and holds a bachelor's degree in psychology from the University of Omaha. Sergeant Welz was assigned to Nha Trang in April 1967 to set up a jet engine shop. Upon arrival, the facility was completely nonexistent, and the building in which it would be housed was still under construction. During the following months he was responsible for equipping the facility and arranging for personnel. Sergeant Welz is shown checking the angle on impeller blades of a T-58 jet engine. A member of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Joliet, Ill., he has been active in the Lutheran program at Nha Trang Air Base. PVT TONY GORKO (center photo above) shows off the first white shirt he's worn since arriving in Vietnam a year ago—a familiar story to the men over there. PVT Gorko, a member of Hope Lutheran Church, Philadelphia, Pa., is with the 1st Shore Party Bn, 1st Marine Division. CHAPLAIN SAMUEL L. HOARD, still busily engaged in his work with servicemen in Vietnam, is shown here (photo right) at Landing Zone English immediately following the baptism of PFC BRUCE LEE BAEHNE.

CAPT PAUL F. KRAMER (photo left) has received his second award of the U.S. Air Force Commendation Medal at Ramstein AB, Germany. Capt Kramer was decorated for his meritorious service as chief of administrative services, 7232nd Munitions Maintenance Group at Ramstein. He is now aide-de-camp to the commander of the Seventeenth Air Force, Ramstein, as a member of the U.S. Air Forces in Europe. While serving in Vietnam prior to his assignment in Europe, Capt Kramer received the Bronze Star. Capt Kramer and his wife Audrey are life-long members of Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, Brooklyn, N.Y. SP/4 LON DANNENBRING (center photo), a member of American Lutheran Church, De Smet, S. D., is working with heavy artillery in Vietnam. He is shown holding a zone three powder charge near an ammunition supply. A1C JOHN K. WOODRING (photo right) was named Squadron Airman of the Month for his outstanding duty performance in the Protective Equipment Section of the 4407th Combat Crew Training Squadron at Hurlburt Field, Fla. Airman Woodring is a member of St. John's Lutheran Church, New Castle, Pa.

'God is gorgeous . . .'

is one-time president and now vice-president of her youth group at Christ the King Lutheran Church in Reseda. Her mother teaches fifth grade church school. Her father is a church councilman. Both are Luther League sponsors.

Question: How has your study of science affected your religious faith? Has it enlarged your idea of God or has it given you problems?

Janice: That's a tough question. I am a science nut because for me everything is beautiful. I realized everything was neat. I may have felt this way because I know about God—or maybe it was the other way around. I'm not sure.

I love math, too. Math and science go together because both of them are beautiful, both come from people's minds and they are beautiful. People are gorgeous. God is gorgeous, so science has to be beautiful. And besides, science is a lot of fun.

Question: You're a bright gal, Janice. In many areas you are smarter than lots of adults you meet. How do you feel about adults telling you things, or the church telling you things?

Janice: Authority is a puzzle. Like in right or wrong. That really interests me and my friends. I like situational ethics because it is fun to bat around those wild possibilities, you know, "What if . . ." Absolute ethics, no. . . . I can't accept that.

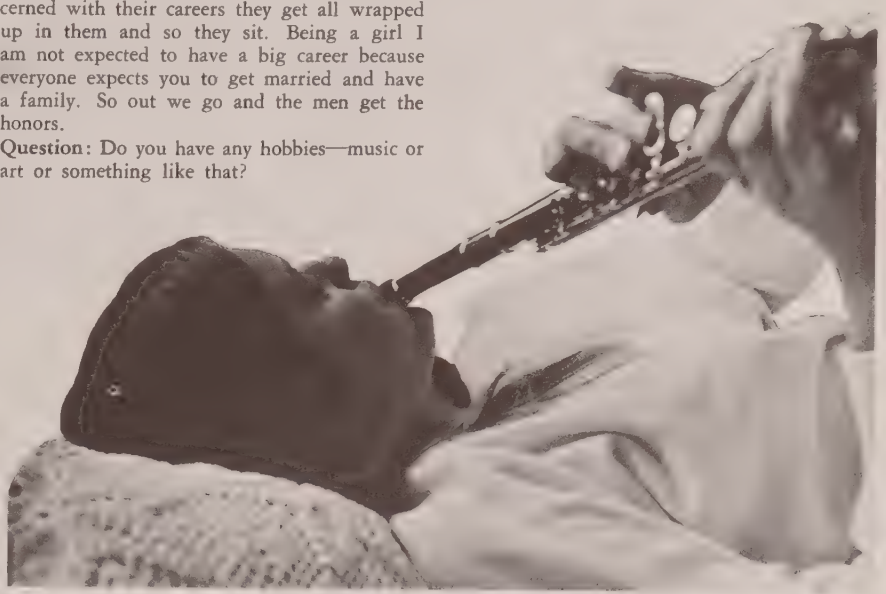
Religious authority, like the church, is in some ways good. My first impulse is to say, "No, religion shackles men's minds." And this is true. But it also gives you some security. Too much freedom scares you. You need rocks to stand on. When someone wants to tell me something, I say, "Go away." But if you want to find answers, the means should be available. . . .

At the moment I am at the stage where I am thinking about the church. I love God—and I mean if I love Him I should go worship Him once a week because He's great and I love Him or I'd be pretty crummy and dishonest. But when I am in church I have to admit I am not really concentrating. Something's wrong; I know it.

In our church we aren't especially active or concerned with the community. I sit there, too, I know, but we don't do anything. Christ said go out and don't sit in a little cave. I think I'd like to go into the Peace Corps. That's doing something. . . .

Question: What does it mean to you to be a woman? How does it all fit in?

Janice: . . . There is fantastic discrimination against girls in science. Scientists are so concerned with their careers they get all wrapped up in them and so they sit. Being a girl I am not expected to have a big career because everyone expects you to get married and have a family. So out we go and the men get the honors.



Question: Do you have any hobbies—music or art or something like that?

Janice: I like all kinds of records. My friends think I am nuts, but I really do—folk, rock, Beatles, jazz, Stones, the whole bit. I like different styles at different times. When I get up I tune in this station that plays folk. I like that in the mornings. Janis Ian impresses me, she's so out-spoken. "Society's Child" is good—great words, terrific arrangement and harmony. But sometimes she gets too explicit. I don't like to be revolted.

Question: How about your social life? Do you find you have to turn your mind down to get along with the male ego?

Janice (blushing): There're lots of intelligent guys. I don't have any trouble.

So this is Janice Petersen, or better, about two per cent of Janice. Her wonderful combination of youthful vitality, exciting good looks, penetrating intelligence can never be caught on paper.

A MIGHTY FORTRESS

Vol. XVIII New York, N.Y., June 1968 No. 2

ONE OF THE FACTS of life is that there are "facts of life" with which one must come to terms or he does not survive. One such fact, for example, is that an individual must have bread in order to live. His body must be nourished. Another fact is that man does not live by bread alone but requires nourishment for a quality of "soulness" that makes him more than an animal. Now, one can deny these facts, ignore them, act as though they are not true, but he cannot do this for long and survive.

Man has been equipped with a mind and sensitivities to perceive the "facts of life," that is, to make him aware of the world around him so that he can sift the important from the unimportant, right from wrong, those things that have value from those that have no value. In short, mankind is able to survive because he is not subject to blind, uncontrollable forces but has some power to discriminate and determine his destiny.

It is this writer's contention that anything that impairs such power to discriminate or distorts the perception of the "facts of life" with which one has to deal should be treated with the greatest caution. Alcohol, mind expanding drugs, marijuana are to be placed in this category. Each individual must determine for himself how drugs are to be handled, but because of their mind "changing" characteristics, the capacity to perceive and react to the facts about life can be altered.

A lonely, married G.I. away from home who has met an attractive, lonely young woman could no doubt have different patterns of behavior toward her, depending upon the presence and the quantity of alcohol or some drug. All that is being said here is that the perception of reality, the relationship to unavoidable facts about life can be distorted to the mind through the use of a drug.

Some years ago this writer heard the late Paul Tillich react to a question about drugs in an informal conversation. Dr. Tillich pointed out that the basic thrust of the message of the New Testament was a pronouncement of liberation: from sickness, disease, sin, death—from every bondage that imprisons life. The dependence upon any device to provide the meaning of life other than life itself is an aberration, a new bondage. He said that the use of drugs must always be therapeutic; that is to say, they should be administered only to assist a person in coming to terms more successfully with reality, so that in the end their use leads to a liberation from a dependence upon them. Psalm 104 mentions the gratitude we must feel because the Lord brings food from the earth and "wine to gladden the heart of man," but if that is the only thing that gladdens the heart or opens the joy of living, an unfortunate dependence has arisen.

The matter seems to be resolved to this: if the meaning of life is available only through "blowing grass" or "dropping acid" or a "high" on alcohol, is that which is revealed truly "real" about life and its purposes? Is one truly coming to terms with the basic facts of life in a creative way? An illustration of the kind of distortion that can occur is expressed by a button worn by a coed to worship one Sunday. It read, "Reality Is A Crutch!" This, then, is the ultimate in confusion: the unreal being "real" and the real being an illusion.

If there is ever a group that must perceive the facts of life clearly and unmistakably about man, his nature and destiny, what his purposes are, it is the church. As she perceives, declares, and is faithful to the "truth" she will survive. To the extent that she ignores certain facts about life, is blind to realities that are both creative and destructive, is fuzzy and sloppy in her thinking, to that extent she will disappear.

36-Foot Masterpiece For Tan Son Nhut USO

It started out as an ordinary evening. A family in Pittsburgh, like millions of other families across the nation, had settled down to watch a TV program—the Bob Hope 1966 Christmas Special from Vietnam. The results of that particular evening of television viewing were quite extraordinary.

The family is Mr. and Mrs. Roger F. Davis and their daughters Elaine, 17, Marcia (called Marcy), 15, and Diane, age 11.

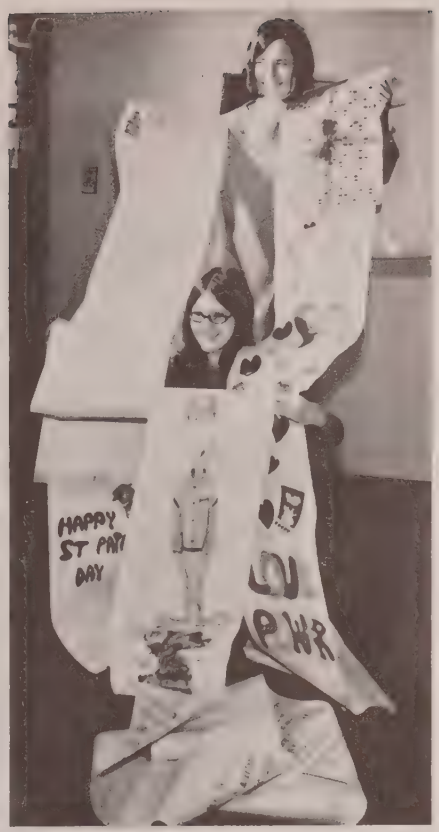
Elaine tells what happened that evening: "Marcy and I were so touched and moved after viewing the program that the next day I wrote to Bob Hope's studio asking for some names of G.I.'s who wanted to correspond. When I received an answer, it was a list of U.S.O. clubs rather than addresses of individuals. Because we could think of no way to write to whole clubs we postponed our writing until this past summer.

"I can't remember whose idea it was, but in May of '67 we began our first letter—36 feet long on a roll of shelf paper."

Obviously these were not going to be ordinary letters and Elaine goes on to explain just what they contained.

"In the June letter we included the following: first we introduced ourselves and our family (including Mi Mi, our dog) with photographs. We also wrote a brief paragraph describing our interests and activities. Next, we taped several comic strips from the (Pittsburgh) Press onto the roll. Third, for the G.I. with a birthday we included a large square piece of birthday wrapping paper made to resemble a package. When lifted up it showed 'Happy Birthday' in brilliant letters. Fourth, for the 4th of July, Marcy used some scraps of material to make her modernistic interpretation of the flag. It also lifted up and underneath was a match and sparkler with the phrase, 'Just a little something to sparkle up your day.' "

Other items included in the letter were a letter from a G.I. to his parents published in Reader's Digest along with a few words of encouragement and appreciation. They borrowed a book of modern prayers from their Sunday school teacher and included about eight of the prayers in the letter.



When the letter was completed they read down the list of U.S.O. clubs that Bob Hope had sent them and selected the first one they had never heard of which happened to be the Tan Son Nhut U.S.O.

"We wrapped the letter and sent it off on June 10th. We went on our vacation and returned two weeks later to find five letters from appreciative G.I.'s who had read our letter. Immediately, Marcy and I answered them. Since then we have received so many letters that we found it necessary to divide the mail and start a chart in order to keep our correspondents straight," said Elaine.

In addition to subsequent 36-foot-long letters to Tan Son Nhut and their other letters to individuals, they baked 25 dozen cookies this past Christmas and sent them to the men who had written to them. Over the months they have corresponded regularly with a few men who are remembered on their birthdays with a small gift and card.

Elaine and Marcy were thrilled with a letter of thanks they received from the men at Christmas. As Elaine describes it, ". . . everyone who saw the letter signed it—353 names—they used an adding machine roll!"

Their letter-writing sounds like a very ambitious project but Elaine and Marcy don't spend all of their time on it. Elaine likes to sew and finds time to make most of her clothes. She's a varsity cheerleader at high school, is past president and vice president of the Luther League at Prince of Peace Lutheran Church, Pittsburgh, where her family are charter members. Elaine plans to attend Indiana University of Pennsylvania in June where she wants to major in math in preparation for teaching in high school.

Marcy is a ninth grade cheerleader, Luther League member, also enjoys sewing and experiments in many different art media. "Marcy," says Elaine, "does most of the art work on the letters while I . . . plan them."

Elaine was asked what their boyfriends think of the project—writing to all those servicemen. Her reply was as unusual and refreshing as she is: "Neither of us have a steady boyfriend and some of the guys we know have volunteered to participate . . ."

In spite of their busy schedule, Elaine and Marcy have suggested that we include their address for those readers of A Mighty Fortress who would like to correspond with them. "But our circulation is well over 100,000," our interviewer warned them. Elaine replied, "Marcy and I can handle 'em if they can write 'em!"

Elaine and Marcy Davis live at 358 Tara Drive, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15236.

With all of her cheerfulness and bubbling enthusiasm, we did find a very serious side to Elaine Davis, creator of the "masterpiece," as the servicemen refer to the letters. Her own personal philosophy is: "Great trials are often necessary to prepare us for great responsibilities." Such a statement is not a surprise coming from a young lady who feels a need to show her concern for the men who are facing great trials on the battlefields of Vietnam.

Life Provides Biggest 'High'

The individual who is faced with the opportunity to use mind altering drugs must make his own decision about them, of course. Some people feel that the most decisive factors have to do with legality, or "kicks," or health hazards. Others report that definite benefits are derived from the use of drugs, particularly the milder form. Many students tell me that this is true. But I have not seen enough to come to a firm conclusion about the matter.

However, the issue is settled for me when I realize that life itself can provide a big "high," the biggest. (A former heavy user known to this writer says, "I used to be hot on marijauna, but now I'm too hot on life and living to let lesser things interfere.") And whether we like it or not, certain facts do have to be faced. We can't ignore them or permit ourselves to be anesthetized to them by the use of some drug. This spells ultimate disaster and for me drives pretty close to the heart of the matter as to how one should handle drugs.

This West Berlin memorial commemorates those Germans who have died seeking freedom by climbing the infamous Communist wall dividing East and West Berlin. (RNS Photo).

Dear Friend –

Letters From a Serviceman

Editor's note: We are grateful to SGT Anthony S. Otto for allowing us to print these excerpts from letters that he wrote to a friend from his home church in Tampa, Florida. SGT Otto is currently serving in Germany with the 50th Security Police Squadron.

We always welcome letters from servicemen who wish to speak frankly of their problems, concerns, and observations. Your letters help us to serve you better through "A Mighty Fortress."

Fall 1967

I want to tell you about Berlin. It is the most modern city in the world. It is much newer than anything in America and is practically slum free. It has buildings like the Europa Center, with 25 restaurants, an ice rink, three theatres and an art gallery in one building; and the Kadewe, kind of a Macy's East . . .

One evening I had dinner on the Kufurstendum, Berlin's answer to Times Square and Picadilly Circus and more impressive than either one. I was still in uniform and was beseiged with questions from people, friendly people, for in Berlin the people know what America's presence in Europe is really for.

. . . I guess I knew it would be there and eventually I would come upon it, but the first time I saw the Wall I just stopped and stood gaping at it in the rain; and I think I cried—for the first time in a long while. The effect it has on your mind is difficult to describe. First there's the cleared strip of land cut right down the middle of the city, then the massive ugliness of the Wall itself topped with electric wire and glass. Then the huge stone towers come into view, manned by the grim Vopos (or People's Police) waiting silently for the next desperate dash to freedom by one of their countrymen. It was a gripping scene but I was not to fully appreciate it until the next day when I went into East Berlin itself.

. . . During the war East Berlin like West Berlin was 95 per cent destroyed. Today East Berlin is still 95 per cent destroyed. It's really hideous—over a million and a half people living in rubble that's been there since World War 2. Traffic is almost nil, there are no street lights . . . there are only a few empty stores; there is nothing. The subways are deserted, there are a few battered buses running around, but that's it. There is one brand-new prefabricated hotel; however, it's for foreigners only. An impressive thing there was the Russian War Memorial . . . I wasn't allowed to use my camera . . . It was a very depressing day.

From what you say of your church, I find myself fascinated by it. I've tried to think of ways of stimulating not only strangers to the church, but regular members as well with a more provocative, or at least more stimulating program of worship and fellowship. Being a "fuddy-duddy old conservative" as you know, I don't favor change just for the sake of change. But the church cannot play ostrich and hide from ideas. Whether right or wrong an idea should not be ignored. For example, a jazz service conducted by a hippie minister who may spice up his language may shock or disgust some; if it is needed to transmit a message or to reach a mind, may it not be of merit? Birth control, civil rights, abortion, the death penalty, premarital sex, etc., may not seem to be in the realm of the church, but can the church afford to ignore an issue? I hope I can attend a service there at your church one day.

. . . I took a three day leave over New Year's to Berlin . . . if anything, the other side of the city is worse over the holidays than during the rest of the year. In addition to the absence of street lights and neon advertisements, there are no Christmas decorations of any kind. In a city of almost 2 million this absence leaves one cold and very depressed. I went to the student Mensa, or cafeteria, at Humbolt university where it is about the only place you can find anyone willing to talk to you. Even there I stuck out like Moshe Dayan at an American Nazi party meeting as I was required to wear my uniform as usual. I took a large table to myself and after about 10 minutes two students came over. Soon there were nine or ten sitting at the table and everyone wanted to talk and not just about Vietnam. They are not as indoctrinated as their profs would like and we had an amiable and very friendly time. You know who they wanted to know about? No, not LBJ, not Nixon, but Andy Warhol! I'm afraid they know even less about him now.

. . . (the town) just outside the gate is in full swing; if there's a vice to be had, this town's got it. I guess maybe I shouldn't talk about it, but I'm forced to deal with these people and I must discuss them with someone who operates from basically the same moral base that I do.

There is no one around here with whom I can talk of these things on this level, and I hope you will not be offended. First I want to talk about race. In the military, as you know, there is supposed to be no discrimination; and this is basically true. We all eat together, sleep together and do the same job. I know a number of Negro boys, a couple I like to consider close friends. I like them very much and I think they feel the same way and yet, when we have some free time, they seem to voluntarily segregate themselves. There are, of course, some southern boys (and not just a few nothern boys) who are not too subtle in encouraging this sort of thing. The Negroes have their own bars downtown and there's not a "whitey" that would go in one alone. I've had to cover more fights than I care to think about between white and black and yet, over here, it's a taboo subject. The evil exists but no one will admit it's there. What's going to happen when these people go home?

I had a friend when I first got here, a colored boy from the Detroit ghetto area. He had a quick, sharp mind and a relaxed, easy humor. When he left I begged him to write, and he did, three times. The first letter was happy—happy to be home, to be seeing old friends, looking for a new job, etc. The second letter was friendly but included little news of what was going on. The last letter I think he only wrote because I wrote him so much. It was short and he said nothing. Now I often think of him. Was he in the riots? If I were to go to Detroit would I be welcome in his home? I know we are breaking down the barriers of race but will it be soon enough?

Now I want to talk about sex. (Don't we all—maybe I should switch to red ink) . . . Over here it's a big business. For example, in Amsterdam the women sit in windows and you shop around for a while until you see one you like . . . knock on the window, haggle for a while, then consummate the deal. They're even government inspected, like meat . . .

. . . I am required to cover and witness the results of much of the infidelity and adultery that goes on and it makes me very sad. I couldn't at first believe that such things were so common but I really believe they are the rule rather than the exception. Are we so corrupt?

Well, I guess I'll "hang up" for a while and polish my boots. Goodnight.

Two Lutherans Awarded Top Combat Medals

Two Lutheran servicemen recently have been awarded medals for their outstanding conduct in action in Southeast Asia.

First Lieutenant Clyde A. Anderson has been decorated with the Distinguished Flying Cross (DFC) and the eighth through the twelfth awards of the Air Medal at Tyndall AFB, Fla. Lieutenant Anderson received the DFC for valor while leading a flight of four F-4 Phantoms on a combat mission deep in enemy territory. He was awarded the Air Medals for outstanding airmanship and courage in the successful accomplishments of aerial missions under extremely hazardous conditions. During his tour of combat duty, the lieutenant served with the 555th Tactical Fighter Squadron at Ubon Royal Thai AFB, Thailand. He is presently assigned to Tyndall as an instructor pilot with the 4756th Flying Training Squadron.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Erland Anderson of Tracy, Minn., Lieutenant Anderson has been a member of Tracy Lutheran Church where he was active in the Luther League, church choir and received the Pro Deo et Patria award as a Boy Scout. He received his B.S. degree in mathematics from Augustana College, Sioux Falls, S.D., in 1964.

Captain David Reiss has been awarded one of the Army's top combat medals, the Silver Star, for his conduct during the recent battle for the city of Hue, Vietnam. After being pinned down by Viet Cong fire outside the city, Captain Reiss successfully directed the counter-attack through his radio man which resulted in 64 enemy killed and 20 captured. Captain Reiss, commander of Alpha Co., 2nd Brigade of the "Screaming Eagles" of the 101st Airborne, has also been recommended for the Bronze Star for his conduct in an earlier action in Cu Chi.

Captain Reiss is the son of Dr. William J. Reiss, executive secretary of the Division of Service to Military Personnel, Lutheran Council in the USA. During World War II, Dr. Reiss was division chaplain during the 101st Airborne's campaigns in France, Belgium, Germany, and Austria.

Captain David Reiss is on his second tour of duty in Vietnam.

Lucky is the Marine whose sister is this smiling beauty. She is CHARLENE THOMASSON, a member of Calvary Lutheran Church in Seattle, Washington. Miss Thomasson is described by her pastor, the Rev. John T. Green, as a girl who has "taken an active part in the work of her church and her Lord."

Miss Thomasson took time out from her many activities this past year to reign as Miss Iceland and to participate in the Nordic Festival at the Seattle Center. She is presently employed by the Boeing Company in Seattle.

Her chief interests are music and art which she studied at the University of North Dakota.

Charlene is looking forward to her brother's return soon from a tour of duty with the Marine Corps in Southeast Asia.

HOLLYWOOD TO WAIKIKI

Actor Finds New Role— Minister to Youth

PRINCE OF PEACE Lutheran Church, on Hawaii's Waikiki Beach, for the past nine years has served a large number of military personnel, both those assigned to Hawaii and those in transit.

Today it offers an expanded ministry to the military—as well as to other young adults—with the addition of a full-time youth minister, Bob Turnbull, to the congregation's staff.

Turnbull, who has been in Waikiki since February, is a Hollywood actor-on-leave. You may have seen him in such films as "Camelot," "Absent-Minded Professor," "The Prize,' or "Beloved Infidel." Or in television episodes of "My Three Sons," "Petticoat Junction," "The Fugitive," "Man From U.N.C.L.E.," "Smothers Brothers," "Red Skelton," "Dr. Kildare," "Perry Mason," "Combat," and "Mr. Roberts."

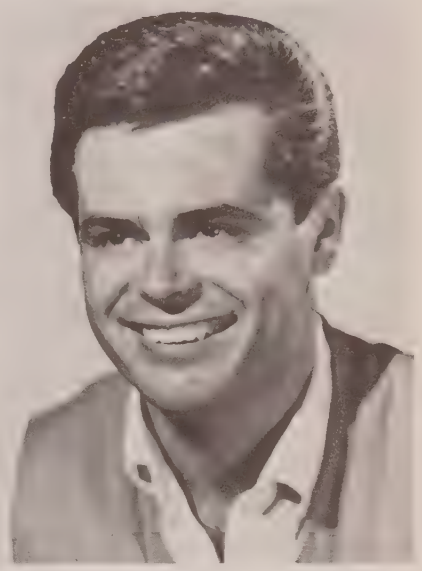
Several years ago Turnbull accepted the Christian faith. In the years that followed he continued his Hollywod career while devoting considerable time to a ministry to youth. He has traveled across the United States as a guest speaker to youth groups.

Sensing the unique opportunity for a dynamic witness to youth in Waikiki, an area highly populated with young adults, Turnbull accepted the call to give his full time to the ministry of Prince of Peace Lutheran Church for at least a year.

Challenging youth of Honolulu—and all of Hawaii—to truly "come alive," Turnbull is in charge of a service every Sunday evening in the congregation's unique "penthouse" setting. The church is located on the 12th floor of a retirement home.

He also conducts a two-hour program on Hawaii's only all-talk radio station every Saturday morning. The program encourages youth to call in and participate in the discussions. In addition Turnbull hosts a weekly television show, "Come Alive."

Turnbull expands his contacts by serving as assistant track coach at the University of Hawaii, as chaplain for Oahu's vice squad, and as chaplain-at-large on Waikiki Beach. He also makes himself available for personal counseling at any time.



His ministry is directed as well to the large number of military personnel from all over Oahu who descend upon Waikiki for the weekends. And he has a special concern for the hundreds of men from Vietnam who are in the area on R&R at any given time.

VANESSA REDGRAVE watches in horror as the mailed knight, played by Bob Turnbull, slays a tatooed villain in "Camelot."

"PENTHOUSE" LOCATION of Prince of Peace Lutheran Church—on the 12th floor of a retirement home—is headquarters for Bob Turnbull's ministry to Waikiki youth.

ACTOR BOB TURNBULL is spending the next year working with youth at Waikiki Beach.

Every Wednesday night an average of 50 young adults gather in the "upper room" of the "Penthouse" church for in-depth Bible study which is directed by Turnbull. This group—the College and Career Club—during the past two years produced 19 young men who have indicated their intention to prepare for the ministry. It also sponsored the call which the congregation extended to the 6 ft. 1 in., 200-lb. Turnbull.

The Rev. Norman L. Hammer is pastor of the Waikiki congregation.

Turnbull's direct approach to the Christian faith is expressed in a brochure which he wrote:

". . . I was plain sick and tired of the phony and superficial living in Hollywood. It really wasn't Show Biz that was 'bugging' me. It was myself! We can't call the entertainment profession sinful. How can any business be sinful? If anything is sinful, it's the people. I was just that and very unhappy. I was ignoring the abundant life Christ promised us when He said, 'I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly' (John 10:10). This I wanted."

THE CHAPLAIN'S ASSISTANT

A Job for Many Skills

He may be found arranging an altar of a church service, working his way through a knee-deep stack of paper work, applying some handy carpentry skills in constructing an office, operating a motion picture projector, leading a discussion group, directing a choir, or installing some needed plumbing.

Or a hundred and one other things.

This individual is the chaplain's assistant, a member of that valued corps of specialists which helps free the military chaplain for greater service to the men within his responsibility.

A chaplain's assistant doesn't just happen. He's the product of intensive training. For example, a recruit accepted for service as a chaplain's assistant in the Army completes basic training—and possibly also advanced training combat courses—before heading for four weeks of training in administrative skills and procedures—typing, filing, correspondence, accounting, etc.

Four-Week Course

Then he's assigned to the enlisted training division of the U.S. Army Chaplain School, Fort Hamilton, N.Y. The four-week course at Fort Hamilton includes subjects ranging from history and mission of the Army chaplaincy and fundamentals of leadership to combat operations and funerals.

He learns the requirements of various religious denominations, is acquainted with the administration of the chaplain funds, discovers skills in graphic arts, and receives intensive instruction in audio-visual equipment.

Competition is stiff for chaplain's assistant posts. A rigorous screening precedes acceptance of a volunteer for the training program.

Though a high school diploma is the only educational requirement, the average assistant in the Army has had some college training. For example, in a recent training group at Fort Hamilton six were college graduates, nine others had some college education, and the remaining three had the minimum requirement of a high school diploma.

May Serve Anywhere

Each assistant must be knowledgeable about all major religious faiths. He must be able to arrange an altar for a Jewish service as well as a Roman Catholic mass.

An assistant is not necessarily assigned to a chaplain of his own faith, although that may be the case. Therefore, he must be prepared to serve wherever he may be assigned.

Chaplains regard their assistants or specialists as their "right-hand men." But the assistants as well as the armed forces are quick to point out that the men are not intended to replace the chaplains.

However, he often plays a "middle-man" role, helping to bridge the gap between the serviceman who is reluctant to seek help and the chaplain. Though a chaplain's assistant does not become involved in counseling, he may have opportunity to encourage a hesitant serviceman to approach his chaplain.

Being a chaplain's assistant doesn't mean that a man can forget about being a soldier.

"We usually try to get the best sharpshooter of the group," commented Chaplain Theodore V. Koepke, a Lutheran who is commandant of the Fort Hamilton Chaplain School. "He may be the only defense standing between me and the enemy."

While chaplains are noncombatant under the Geneva Convention, the assistants are not among the "protected personnel." They must be prepared to defend themselves and their chaplains in a combat situation.

A Full Week

Being a chaplain's assistant can involve more than a five-day, 40-hour week. Weekends, of course, may be fully occupied with religious services. Then there may also be a morning service on a weekday, an evening service on another, one or more chapel-related gatherings, weddings, funerals, baptisms, and other unforeseen situations which consume more time. Still, hours must be found to accomplish the paper work that's part of the job.

But that doesn't seem to phase the highly motivated chaplain's assistant.

"I caution the men when they first enter the school that this experience may change their life goals," states Chaplain John P. Ettershank, supervisor of the enlisted training division at Fort Hamilton. "Some have been moved to enter the ministry."

The chaplain's assistant training program was inaugurated Sept. 11, 1967, at Fort Hamilton. Four classes are taught concurrently with about 25 men graduating each week. An extension program provides assistants with an opportunity to increase their military and professional knowledge on the job.

Chapel Chuckles

Another thing. Next Sunday we could use a better prelude than "Sleepy Time Gal."

TALENT AND BEAUTY combine with an active faith to make a truly outstanding young woman in the person of Miss Karen Nan Anderson. Her special qualities were duly recognized when she was chosen "Kansas Junior Miss 1966." Karen was one of 10 finalists selected from among 40,000 contestants to participate in the national Junior Miss pageant at Mobile, Ala., and was a winner of the "Youth Fitness" contest there.

A scholarship student and 1968 Yearbook Queen at Kansas State College, Fort Hays, Miss Anderson sings with the College Jazz Band, has organized an all-girl performing unit called the "Tiger Debs," is a member of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, and still finds time to maintain a "B" average in all her studies.

Described by her pastor, the Rev. Warren Schmidt, as an "active and faithful member" of Messiah Lutheran Church, Hays, Karen dedicates her musical ability and teaching skills to its work. She has taught Sunday school and vacation Bible school and sings in church services as both choir member and soloist.

San Antonio Churches Add Witness to Fair

San Antonio Lutheran congregations are cooperating to bring a Christian witness into activities of HemisFair '68 in the Texas city. Through an Inter-Lutheran Impact Committee, the congregations are sponsoring several projects.

One, the "Ox-Cart Project," consists of short dramatic or musical presentations performed 14 times per day at two ox-carts located at strategic areas of the fairgrounds.

Another part of the cooperative program is a series of dramas, concerts, and lectures held at St. John Lutheran Church near the main gate of HemisFair.

The world's fair continues through Oct. 6 in downtown San Antonio. Approximately 35 countries are participating in the event which carries through the theme "The Confluence of Civilization in the Americas."

Military personnel and their dependents enjoy reduced rates for admission and for paid attractions at HemisFair.

President Presents Medal of Honor to Lutheran Medic

A 21-year-old Nebraskan has become the first Lutheran and the second U.S. Army medic to receive the country's highest military award for heroism in the Vietnam war.

Presented the Congressional Medal of Honor in Washington, D.C., was Sp5 Charles C. Hagemeister, a member of Calvary Lutheran Church, Lincoln.

The young medic and three other servicemen, each from different branches of the armed forces, received the medal from President Johnson during dedication ceremonies of a "Hall of Heroes" at the Pentagon.

The commendation accompanying the Congressional medal award to Hagemeister related the following story of gallantry:

On March 20, 1967, while serving as a medical aid man with Company A, 1st Battalion, 5th U.S. Cavalry, his platoon suddenly came under heavy attack. Hagemeister raced through "a hail of fire" to two seriously wounded comrades and, after learning that the platoon leader and several other soldiers had been wounded, crawled forward to administer aid to them as well.

When he attempted to evacuate the seriously wounded, an enemy sniper opened fire from close range. The medic seized a rifle from a fallen American soldier, killed the sniper and three other enemy soldiers attempting to encircle his position, and then silenced an enemy machine gun that was spraying the area with deadly fire.

Still unable to remove the wounded to a less exposed location and noting enemy attempts to isolate his unit, he dashed through "a fusillade of fire" to secure help from a nearby platoon. With their assistance he was able to evacuate the wounded.

Hagemeister is the son of Mrs. Alvina E. Hagemeister of Lincoln. He had attended the University of Nebraska prior to entering the Army May 19, 1966. After graduation from the Army Medical Training Center, Fort Sam Houston, Tex., he was assigned to Vietnam in November. He was transferred early this year to McDonald Army Hospital at Fort Eustis, Va.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON congratulates Sp5 Charles Chris Hagemeister upon his decoration with the Congressional Medal of Honor. Hagemeister is a member of Calvary Lutheran Church, Lincoln, Neb.

Its Members Are Up in the Air

EDITOR'S NOTE: This article is reprinted with permission from "The Lutheran Standard."

By DELORES E. MOORE

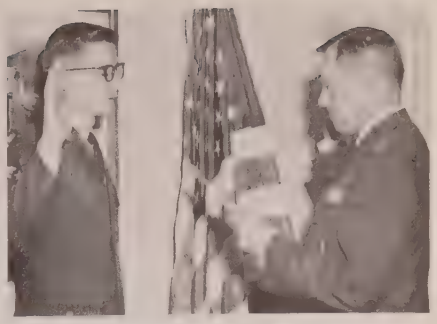
All congregations are unusual, but how would you feel if the membership of your church changed almost 100 per cent each year, in an area that is 80 per cent unchurched?

This is the situation in which Ascension Lutheran Church, Emerado, N.D., finds itself. The church is strategically located across the road from Grand Forks Air Force Base, which has an on-base population equal to the fifth largest city in the state of North Dakota. More than 90 per cent of the congregation are military families.

This leads to some unusual problems. For instance, at an ALCW meeting the Bible study was just beginning when an alert was called. Most of the women had to leave for home immediately because husbands who were caring for children had to report for duty as soon as possible. . . .

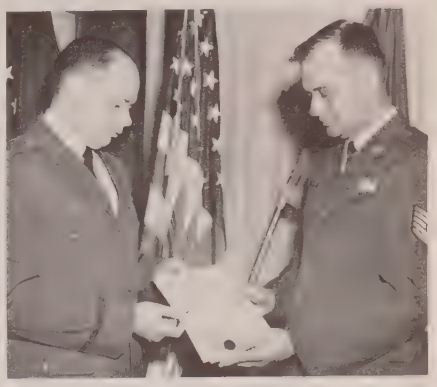
Our membership is unusually young; the average age of all baptized members is less than 23 years. Even so, there is an average winter attendance rate of 65 per cent of the membership each Sunday. This is about the maximum possible because many of the military work regular eight and 12-hour shifts on Sunday.

Pastor Lloyd A. Nelson can draw on his experience as an enlisted man and an Air Force officer as he ministers to this almost all-military congregation. . . .



The cry, "I got orders today!" is a common refrain in the congregation. In just over four years, 776 members of Ascension were transferred to other bases. . . . Where else could you lose (as we did) the council and ALCW presidents plus the leader of Junior Lutherans and the Luther League advisers in one month?

Even though the people move often, many are reached by Ascension's ministry. They join the adult information class, are baptized or confirmed, take an active part in church activities—and then receive orders to another base. The average tour of a military family here is less than 2½ years.



This is discouraging, of course, but the people leave our midst eager to become established in a new church. Therefore, Ascension actually has become a training center for churches world-wide. We have friends and helpers around the world. New arrivals at the base are beginning to come to our church, saying that someone previously stationed at GFAFB told them about Ascension Lutheran.

A 220-lot trailer park across the street from the church provides another mission field. Approximately 300 children live in the court. The majority have never been inside a church, but this is gradually changing as the church-sponsored Cub Scout Pack and Boy Scout Troop make contact with some of the families.

In the future, who knows what an impact could be made on the unchurched 80 per cent in this court and on the base?

JOYCE MEIBOHM likes secluded mountains, clear air, fresh spring water, and "sunny, warm Arizona"—appropriate tastes for a summertime Lutheran Girl of the Month. Essentially an outdoor girl, she enjoys swimming, horseback riding, and the excitement of Rodeos. At school she is a member of the Pep Club, Gymastics Club, cheerleading, and the girls' Varsity gymnastics team for '68. She's been saving money from babysitting and piano lessons to help finance a trip to Los Angeles this summer to compete in the Olympic gymnastic tryouts.

Miss Meibohm is well acquainted with personnel in the armed services. At Fountain of Life Lutheran Church, Tucson, of which she is a member, one-third of the membership consists of service people, most of whom are stationed at Davis-Monthan Air Base. Joyce's two brothers-in-law, Dave Langille and Bill Brennan, are captains in the Air Force. Dave trains pilots at Williams Air Force Base and has flown 123 transport planes in Vietnam. Bill Brennan, stationed at San Diego, has also served in Vietnam.

At Fountain of Life Miss Meibohm directs the Junior Choir and teaches a sixth grade Sunday school class. In addition, she substitutes for the church organist.

This fall, Miss Meibohm will enter the University of Arizona.

First WAF Enlistee Now Service Center Director

On September 30, 1948, Miss Ray Ross of San Antonio, Tex., was sworn in as a member of Women in the Air Force (WAF), which was established on June 12, 1948, when Congress passed the Women's Armed Services Integration Act of 1948. There wasn't anything too unusual about Miss Ross joining WAF. She was just one of many women who had enlisted. However, the official day for swearing in of new WAFs was to have been October 15. So by an accident of an overly zealous WAF sergeant, Miss Ross became the first enlistee in the Air Force, having been sworn in two weeks before the others.

During June of this year, over 6,800 distaff members of the Air Force team celebrated the 20th anniversary of the WAF. Miss Ross, who served as a personnel interviewer, pla- ephe until her discharge in March 1951 today serves the Division of Service to Military Personnel of the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A. as director of the Lutheran Service Center in Jacksonville, Fla.

Enlisting in the WAF wasn't a particularly unusual idea to Ray Ross since she had a brother who had served in the Army and a brother-in-law serving in the Air Force. "Military life wasn't completely unfamiliar to me," said Miss Ross as she briefly recounted her Air Force career.

When talking with Miss Ross about the past, the conversation continues to switch to present events as she expresses her concern for today's servicemen and her work at the service center. "We not only minister to American servicemen but to seamen from other parts of the world when their ships dock here." Several years ago the service center was rocking when nearly 300 men of the Royal Swedish Navy arrived on the training ship ALVSNABBEN. A square dance was held at the center for the sailors and friends from the community.

As times have changed, so have the events at the Jacksonville Service Center. Recently a dance was held and everyone was invited to attend a psychedelic happening dressed as hippies. "We all had a lot of fun," Miss Ross said with a laugh as she described the strange costumes some of the people wore, the decorations and colored lights and the rock and roll-type music. "The most- that group made almost- [illegible]

Shortly after the psychedelic party, Ray Ross received someone important. "We've been seeing an increase at the service center. In 1948 these four members of the first group to be trained by the Air Force were photographed at Randolph Air Base after completing their WAF basic training at Lackland. Pvt. Ray Ross is standing second from the left.

Miss Ross, now the director of the Lutheran Service Center in Jacksonville, Fla., is shown with RAdm. (retired) I. Floyd Orcutt during a visit to the center when he was Director of the Chaplains Division of the Bureau of Naval Personnel.

'Mr. Protestant': Dr. Franklin Clark Fry

Dr. Franklin Clark Fry, described by Time Magazine in a cover story a few years ago as "perhaps the most influential leader of world Protestantism," died June 6, 1968, at the age of 67. Death was attributed to cancer.

His death occurred a week after he had offered his resignation as president of the 3,288,000-member Lutheran Church in America, the largest of the nation's three major Lutheran church bodies. At that time he had confided to close associates that he was "gravely ill."

Dr. Fry was elected head of the LCA at its constituting convention six years ago. Prior to that, he served as president of one of its four predecessor bodies, the former United Lutheran Church in America, for 18 years. As a staunch advocate of confessional, ecumenical and interdenominational unity, he was a prime mover in the formation of the Lutheran World Federation in 1947, the World Council of Churches in 1948, the National Council of Churches in 1950, and the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A. in 1967. Without doubt, Dr. Fry was at his superlative best as a presiding officer, a view shared by reporters who ranked Dr. Fry as the foremost of church parliamentarians. He came into a meeting saturated with knowledge of every matter due for consideration, its past, present and possible future.

Out of an awesome combination of attributes, he forged an unrivaled record of leadership in church activity at home and abroad for a quarter century. Since his work over the years included nearly all areas of non-Roman Christendom, he became known as "Mr. Protestant."

Dr. Fry was eulogized at funeral services in New York City as "the ecumenical colossus of our age. Attending the services were Protestant, Roman Catholic and Orthodox leaders, clergy and laymen. Also in attendance were Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman and Mrs. Freeman who are members of a Lutheran church in Maryland. Secretary Freeman, representing President Johnson, gave Dr. Fry's widow a note of condolence from the President which praised the clergyman as an "outstanding leader of his church . . . who won the respect and affection of members of all creeds."

Preaching the sermon was Dr. Robert W. Stackel, pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Holy Trinity in Akron, O., a congregation which Dr. Fry served for 15 years during the early part of his ministry. During the sermon Dr. Stackel referred to Dr. Fry's administrative skills by observing that the "parliamentarian par excellence has not been gaveled down by death. Rather, the Presiding Officer of eternity has moved, seconded, and carried him to everlasting life."

"The long shadow of his influence will reach into the 21st century with no effort at all," Dr. Stackel concluded, "but his significance will span eternity."

John Ylvisaker—musicologist, troubadour, song composer and editor—is a teacher and choir director at United Theological Seminary, St. Paul, Minn. He has recorded "Mass for the Secular City," his own composition performed at Carnegie Hall, and "$900,000 Debt," both for Avant Garde Inc.

To spend an afternoon or even part of an afternoon with John Ylvisaker is an exciting experience. His quiet voice and almost withdrawn manner are overcome by a genuine enthusiasm for music and the church. And the experience of an interview can be repeated many times, for John is an ever changing, ever moving, always thinking individual who constantly looks for the new vista, the new break through, for worship in song.

When I first met John some time ago, he considered himself just a song leader. He was known basically for individual performances before youth groups, where his music was a kind of folk commentary on the life of the church. His partners during this era, all of whom have become well known performers, often joined him in the composing of many of the songs they performed. But John was not satisfied. He talks now of his music during this period as "cute." While the message was sharp, he was troubled that the music did not reach the standard he felt should be maintained in the church.

This standard of music does not depend upon any single type of music, such as that usually found in the church, but it requires that whatever the style, it should be good.

John's musical background helped him to improve his music constantly. His training includes a degree in music from Concordia College, Moorhead, Minn., as well as graduate study at the University of Minnesota in musicology. At one time he had a record collection of every work of J. S. Bach. He has successfully conducted church choirs and also one of Minneapolis' best known boys' choirs. Out of his constant concern for integrity and his sound musical background has evolved in the past few years a new sound.

While still basically a vocal presentation, it now has solid instrumental backing. John's wife Mandy plays the organ, flute, or recorder, and a drummer and another guitarist usually round out the group. The attempt, usually highly successful, is to present the best of the many styles of modern music, from folk to psychedelic, as background for the message which the vocal still carries. Music becomes as bright and fresh as the ever new message of the Word. It is this freshness and vitality that John wants to return to the life of the church.

A performance by John alone is also an exciting experience. Though he is considered more than just a song leader, his appearances before audiences continue to evoke great response and participation. These performances have been held throughout the country, including one at Carnegie Hall, and are available on records.

It is John's contention that congregational singing is a pretty pitiful thing. Most of us would agree. He believes that the major responsibility for this is the hymnal. These SP/4 DOUGLAS L. GUM, known to her friends as "Dukie," is currently serving in the WAC Detachment, 4th U.S. Army, Fort Sam Houston, Tex. She recently was selected as Headquarters Special Troops Outstanding Soldier of the Quarter and will represent the Fort Sam Houston installation in the 4th U.S. Army Soldier of the Quarter competition. Her beautiful soprano voice and ability to lead the first and second grade children in the Sunday church school are missed by the members of her home church, Grace Evangelical Lutheran in Waynesboro, Va.

SP/4 JERRY R. MENSINGER (photo left), who served one year in Vietnam at Long Bien with the engineer battalion, is shown with one of his machines on Highway 1. He is currently stationed at Fort Riley, Kan. After his discharge in October, Jerry will return to his home in Commanche, Ia., where he is a member of Immanuel Lutheran Church. CAPT. ROBERT F. HERMANSON (center), is shown stepping from his F-100 Super Sabre after completing his 320th and last combat mission over Vietnam. His mission total was one of the highest in the history of his unit, the 31st Tactical Fighter Wing at Tuy Hoa AB, Vietnam. He is scheduled for reassignment to Vance AFB, Okla., where he will be a flying training instructor pilot. Captain Hermanson is a member of American Lutheran Church, Enid, Okla. LCPL WILLIAM R. PEARSON (photo right), 2nd Battalion, 9th Marines, has returned to combat in Vietnam after being wounded last fall. Bill was an active member of A Mighty Fortress Evangelical Lutheran Church in Charlotte, N.C., before joining the Marines.

ontain, naturally, only hymns. This that from the start they are limited to static form for both words and music. take years to produce, so that any to be contemporary is lost in the time lag between conception and printing. Because they are expensive and hard to produce, they are made to last for a long period of time and this means they cannot blaze too many new trails.

John has an answer for this dilemma of the church- "Instant Worship." His proposal is to bring out the liturgy in magazine form for a specific period of the church year—it could be a month, week, or an entire church season. Such a publication would include appropriate liturgical settings inside the covers, as well as the necessary scripture lessons, collects, prayers, etc. It might also contain news of new developments in church music and liturgy to keep the congregation aware of the possibilities for change. The back would contain some simple melody lines. Usually these would be like a refrain. Words of various hymns would also be printed, as well as appropriate songs of the day. While some songs would be sung by the whole congregation, much more use could be made of a person having a role like that of the Jewish Cantor. Our first Lutherans' churches in Europe also made use of this type of person. He would usually sing the verse with the response or refrain sung by the congregation. At times the choir could sing the verse, with congregational response. The psalm settings of the French priest Gelineau directly employ much of this responsive technique and have proved to be very popular in congregations where they have been used. In Gelineau's concept, and in John's thinking, the emphasis is on simple, singable tunes that really give everyone a chance to sing and participate.

Being produced quickly and cheaply, this new type of congregational music manual could be kept current and alive. It could respond to new developments in music and in the world about us. We could literally sing of our concerns and our missions. While "Instant Worship" may seem out of reach to some, it does not have to be the case that such a revival in the liturgical life of the church [illegible] that express [illegible] love and concern for the church and you have a man who loves to sing and be creative thinking, can contribute mightily to worship by all of us.

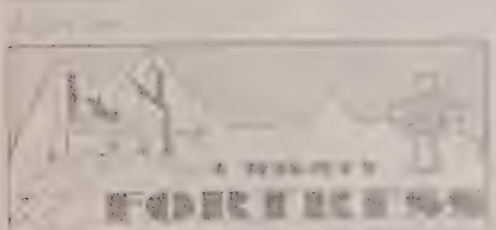
Editor's note: The Lutheran Church in America, largest of the four Lutheran church bodies, held its biennial convention in Atlanta, Ga., June 19-[illegible]. It is interesting to note that the convention heard a report that the Inter-Lutheran Commission on Worship hopes within the coming year to complete preparation of two softcover paperbacks, one containing 20 new hymns, and one containing various contemporary liturgical rites.

Norway's King Greets Lutherans

When the King of Norway, Olav V, visited the Norwegian Lutheran community in Minneapolis recently, he received a grand welcome. At a Sunday service at Norwegian Lutheran Memorial church, small Norwegian and American flags decorated the ends of the pews and many women attended wearing native Norwegian dress. Dr. Fredrik A. Schiotz, president of The American Lutheran Church, presented King Olav with a silver replica of the first house of worship erected by Norwegian immigrants in the U.S.



Most of the service was in the Norse language, as is their custom. But a Sunday school song, "This little light of mine, let it shine [illegible]," sung in English by a group of toddlers, seemed to be especially enjoyed by the king.

At a later visit to St. Olaf College, the king was presented with the St. Olaf College Centennial Medal. During a visit in 1939, the school bestowed an honorary degree on the then crown prince. Perhaps the biggest change the king observed in the college in the 29 years since his last visit was to find a Negro as president of the largely Nordic student body. The student president, Leavy Oliver of Alabama, and Dr. Marie Mahmin Meyer, retiring professor of English, invested the king with the medal.

King Olav V of Norway greets Dr. Herman Jorgensen, 90, on his visit to the Ebenezer Home in Minneapolis. Dr. Jorgensen, a native of Oslo, is former editor of the Norwegian-Language paper, The Lutheraneran. He received awards from the Norwegian government in 1945 and 1950. Both presentations were made by King Olav's father, King Haakon. (RNS photo)

A MIGHTY FORTRESS

Vol. XVIII New York, N.Y., October 1968 No. 6

Some servicemen haven't completed high school. Others are returning to civilian life without the education necessary to meet job requirements. This is the story of how two men found an answer to the big question—

After This

What Will I Do?

Alan found a refuge from a lot of problems when he joined the Army.

He was restless and unhappy with no one to give him any attention or guidance. The symptoms were not uncommon—high school was a bad scene and his grades were poor, he didn't get along with his parents, and he couldn't visualize any real goals for the future.

"I knew I would have to serve my two years eventually, so joining the Army seemed the best way of getting away from home," Alan said, shifting nervously in his chair. "Mom did a lot of yelling . . . but Dad had run away from home when he was 16, so I guess he sort of understood why I wanted to join up."

Now Alan is at the end of his two years of Army life and he finds himself right back where he started. He's a high school drop-out who is once more faced with the prospect of trying to make it in civilian life.

Jack is another serviceman with two years of the Army quickly coming to an end. When Jack graduated from high school in 1965 he wanted to go on to college. But his grades were too poor for a full scholarship, and his family couldn't help him financially.

"I thought I would work for a year and save my money for a year of college," Jack explained. "First I couldn't even find a job. At least not one that paid enough so that I could start a savings account. And most people who interviewed me didn't want to hire a guy who would get caught up in the draft. The only solution was to join the Army, get it out of the way, and then take advantage of the GI Bill to help me with my college education."

Alan and Jack share this concern about the future with many servicemen who have not completed their education.

Under the current GI Bill (The Veterans Readjustment Benefits Act of 1966), veterans who are honorably discharged are eligible for education and training assistance allowances. This financial assistance includes the areas of high school training, college, farm cooperative training, apprenticeship or other on-job training, and flight training.

Educational assistance is computed at one month for each month of service on active duty, not to exceed 36 months. Eligibility ends eight years after the date of release from active duty.

Allowances are paid monthly to veterans enrolled in qualified courses. When Jack begins college, he will receive $130. This amount increases for men who are married and continues to climb for each additional dependent.

The monthly allowance is lower, of course, for those men who are attending school on a part-time basis.

Alan will be able to receive an educational assistance allowance while completing his high school training without a charge against his basic entitlement. This means that after he receives a high school diploma (or an equivalency certificate), he will still be entitled to an assistance allowance for the full 24 months of higher education that he earned while in the Army for 24 months.

Now that Alan and Jack understand the educational benefits to which they are entitled under the GI Bill, they must select a school and course of study.

Alan is probably more confused than Jack, who has always wanted to take an engineering course.

Alan admitted that after being in the Army for almost two years, he still wasn't sure what kind of work he is best suited for.

"I really like a lot of things, I guess. I used to spend a lot of time keeping my dad's car in good working order. And in school my favorite subject was math. My dad was a salesman and I always thought I might be good at that. But I've never really decided on a specific kind of work."

Again Alan discovered that as a veteran he would be able to obtain educational and vocational counseling through the Veterans Administration. They will help him evaluate his interests, experience, and abilities and direct them toward an occupation.

Meanwhile, Jack has to decide which college to attend. There will be many factors to consider in making a choice. He will want to locate a school that offers a good program in engineering as well as a school that he can afford.

"The public library has a wealth of information about colleges," said Jack. "I've written to six schools so far, but it will probably take a little time before I decide which one I want to attend and then am accepted."

Neither Jack nor Alan are faced with the bleak future that they once thought was their fate. They have served their country well, and now their country will help them to achieve their goals.

Why Wait?

In the preceding article, two servicemen waited until they were discharged to continue their education. They could have continued their schooling while on active duty.

The Armed Forces are spending over $10 million a year on their General Education Development Program.

Whatever your background, wherever your assignment, you can continue your education by attending night classes and taking correspondence courses.

From the Army comes this information on how you can continue your education while in the service:

DEAD END? or NEW LIFE?

The author, Chaplain Theodore J. Kleinhans (Lt. Col.), is now serving as base chaplain at Stewart AFB, New York. Prior to this assignment he was in Vietnam.

The hardest day King David ever lived was the one on which his son died. Absalom. Though he had long feared for the youth's life, David still was not ready. When the news came, he broke down and cried, even though he was a lifetime warrior and a longtime companion of death. The Scriptures picture his grief: "Would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son."

Whether on the hills of Judea or anywhere else, death still comes hard. Why Absalom? Why John? Why Tom? Why Fred? Why not someone else? Why a new husband? Why a father of three? Why such a swell guy instead of a bad one? Why him? Why not me?

Staring death in the face when a friend dies is often harder than facing it yourself. In either case it's not easy. Death is man's worst and oldest enemy. Without God, death is the end of things. There's no way out. Dreams, friends, hopes, school, career, parents, wife, children—that's all over.

God really wasn't trying to destroy us when He let death come into our world as a result of our sin. Because of our shortcomings, we all have to face up to it. We only die once, but we all die—once. From the human standpoint there is no escape. No way out. Only honorable death.

But in God's eyes man does not die. Man is far more than a handful of elements—iron, potassium, oxygen. He has a soul, a spirit. He is the very image of God.

When he does what God expects, he is a credit to his Maker. When he does not, he is a disappointment. But that does not mean that God disowns him and treats him like an outcast. God still loves him.

Death is what makes life meaningful, what gives it purpose. That is why our thinking about the death of one who was close to us is not altogether sad. God even chose to send His only Son through the valley of the shadow of death.

For us, as for Christ, death is no dead end street—no final ringing down of the curtain. It is a gateway. Even as Christ led the way, all who believe in Him have a future beyond that gateway—a joyous, new life with God in life everlasting.

Why Paul Bush?

Soon after graduating from Thiel College in 1966, Paul Bush entered the Marine Corps. He and Patricia Ann Dissen were married April 15, 1967. Paul was active in his church, Holy Trinity Lutheran Church in Greenville, Pa., and everyone who knew him thought of him as "a fine Christian man."

On March 22, 1968, 1st Lt. Paul W. Bush, 23, died from wounds suffered during battle in the vicinity of Quang Tri, Vietnam. For several weeks before his death, Lt. Bush had been commander of a company that guarded part of the Khe Sanh perimeter.

A Greenville businessman and Thiel College trustee, Luther J. Kuder, was so moved by the death of Lt. Bush that he established the Paul W. Bush Memorial Scholarship to be awarded annually to a deserving student at Thiel College.

Paul Bush was special—special in the sense that each of us is special. Special because every man is the object of God's creation and redemption. Special because man is made to love and to be loved—by wife, parents, friends, buddies.

Paul Bush—a good Marine, a great guy, a loving husband, a faithful Christian. Just like other men who fall in battle every day.

In remembering Paul Bush, we pay tribute to all who place their lives on the line in a cause that they believe just. No matter where it comes, death comes hard.

But even in death the Christian's focus is always on life—the new life that is our hope in Christ. And it is in that light—the light of God's new life—that we see Paul Bush and his comrades.

LUTHERAN CONTACT PASTORS, ACTIVE DUTY CHAPLAINS AND SERVICE CENTERS

OCTOBER, 1968

Military personnel are invited to contact these pastors, chaplains and centers. Home church pastors of the ALC and LCA are encouraged to send the names and addresses of their members in military service to them. LCMS and SELC home church pastors should send the names and addresses directly to the Armed Forces Commission of the LCMS which will forward them to the appropriate chaplain or contact pastor.

APO and FPO addresses for the ALC and LCA may be referred to the Division of Service to Military Personnel. For the LCMS they should be sent to the Armed Forces Commission.

Churches are indicated as follows:
ALC, American Lutheran Church;
LCA, Lutheran Church In America;
LCMS, The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod;
SELC, Synod of Evangelical Church.

New Center at Olongapo

The Lutheran Service Center in Olongapo, Philippine Islands, will move into new quarters late this year.

Work is now progressing on the new facility, which will serve military personnel and their families from the nearby United States Navy installations at Subic Bay. Completion is expected sometime in December.

The new center will be less than a half block from the present site on Olongapo's main street, Rizal Avenue. But it will have a more favorable location: right across the street from the city park.

The first floor will include a chapel, music and library room, game room, lounge, office, and kitchen. The second floor will provide living quarters for the service center pastor and his family. To cope with the weather conditions of the Philippines, the center will be air-conditioned and built to resist typhoons.

The center at Olongapo is one of six overseas facilities sponsored by the Washington-based Division of Service to Military Personnel of the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A.

Others are located at Seoul, Korea; Awase Meadows, Okinawa; Tachikawa, Japan; Agana, Guam; and Kaiserlautern, Germany. In addition, a service pastor has been assigned to Bangkok to provide a similar ministry in Thailand.

Back to School

High schools and colleges near Army installations generally offer night courses for soldiers. Classes may even be held right on post in places where the military enrollment is high. College training is offered overseas by branches of stateside institutions. If you take a college night course, the Army may foot the bill for 75 per cent of your tuition. In addition, 46 colleges offer courses at reduced rates for military personnel.

Army Education Centers conduct organized group study at 283 installations throughout the world, offering courses in academic, vocational and technical subjects.

The Enlisted Civil Schooling Program offers you a chance to attend the college of your choice as a full-time student. If you are selected for the program, your tuition will be paid in full by the Army and you will enjoy full duty and pay status while you are going to school. For each year you go to school, in the program, you agree to remain in the military service for two years.

The Degree Completion Program gives enlisted men and officers a chance to get their college diplomas if they can finish their requirements in a year.

Correspondence courses in 200 subjects are offered by the United States Armed Forces Institute (USAFI). The courses, now taken by more than 100,000 Army servicemen, offer subjects normally taught in high schools, trade schools and junior colleges. An initial fee of $5 will cover all USAFI courses you ever take.

Civilian college correspondence courses are also offered in cooperation with USAFI. You pay only for your textbooks, while the Army picks up the tab for the lesson costs.

All these programs are offered for your benefit, at a fraction of the cost you would pay as a civilian.

70 Lutheran Colleges Offer Varied Programs

A discussion of education would be incomplete without mentioning the opportunities available at the 70 Lutheran colleges, universities and seminaries located throughout the United States and Canada.

Following are brief descriptions of five Lutheran schools that offer a variety of programs. Other listings will be included in future issues of A Mighty Fortress as space permits.

Information about these schools can be obtained by addressing your letters to the Director of Admissions.

CAPITAL UNIVERSITY, Columbus, O. 43209. College of Arts and Sciences grants B.A., B.S. in Education, B.S. in Business Admin. Conservatory of Music grants the Bachelor of Music and Bachelor of Music Education degrees.

LUTHER COLLEGE, Decorah, Ia. 52101. Liberal arts program prepares students in various fields, including languages and literature, fine arts, natural sciences, social studies, philosophy and religion, psychology, education.

WAGNER COLLEGE, Staten Island, N.Y. 10301. Liberal arts program. Foreign campus at Bregenz, Austria, offers program in the humanities and social sciences.

WATERLOO LUTHERAN UNIVERSITY, Waterloo, Ontario, Canada. Only Lutheran degree-granting institution in Canada. Undergraduate program includes liberal arts, science, business administration, and pre-theology.

VALPARAISO UNIVERSITY, Valparaiso, Ind. 46383. Only Lutheran college of engineering. College of arts and sciences. College of business administration. School of law.

GIRL OF THE MONTH

This month's Lutheran Girl comes to us from the Air Force Academy in Colorado, and we were certain the men there would want to know something about a girl who's at the Academy. We can't give you her phone number, but on Sunday morning you will probably find SUSAN BULLOCK at the chapel where she and her family participate regularly in the activities, including the choirs. Susan's father is on the staff of the Air Force Academy, which explains why she's there.

Susan is President of the Senior High School Protestant Youth of the Chapel organization and is a senior in the Air Academy High School this year. Chaplain Dean C. Hofstad, Protestant Chaplain at the Air Force Academy and a pastor from The American Lutheran Church, in nominating Miss Bullock said, "She is in my estimation, one of the finest young people in our community."

The First Lutheran Messenger from Albert Lea, Minn., described the long route taken by this issue of A Mighty Fortress as "a tribute to the government whose postal workers so persistently try to deliver mail to every serviceman no matter how many changes of address are involved." If your address has changed, notify your congregation so that your mail will not be delayed.

Lutherans In the Service

Since most servicemen spend much of their time griping about the bad chow, we thought you would like to know that a fellow Lutheran, SP/4 PRESTON H. KEPHART, is working hard at improving the meals at Camp Young, Korea, where he is assigned as a cook and baker. Kephart, a member of St. John's Lutheran Church, Sinking Valley, Pa., is shown (left) with some of the good hot rolls that he bakes. • A1C LARRY ROTH, right, saws lumber being used in remodeling the home of Mr. George Hafner, left, a blind member of Faith American Lutheran Church, Marysville, Calif. Roth has been attending the church while stationed at nearby Beale AFB. When he heard about the remodeling job, a project sponsored by the men's group at Faith Church, Roth volunteered his services. Mrs. Hafner helps hold the wood as the airman saws. • MAJ. FRED W. EISELE (right), a recipient of the Bronze Star, was selected as the first Army officer to attend the Air Force senior officers' communication course at Keesler AFB, Miss. Maj. Eisele was assigned to Vietnam in June 1967 and served as commanding officer of the 267th Signal Company, Bien Hoa, and later as S-4 officer, 36th Signal Battalion. He is a member of Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, Philadelphia, Pa., and attended Pennsylvania State University. Maj. Eisele said that while in Vietnam, he used part of his time doing something he always wanted to do—reading the Bible all the way through. This was accomplished by reading a couple of chapters each evening.

Air Force SGT. WESLEY C. WOODS (left) of Severn, Md., is shown comforting a 2-year-old South Vietnamese girl. Her medical treatment is part of the Nha Trang Air Base civic action program. Woods, who has been in Vietnam for nearly two years, has traveled throughout Khanh Hoa Province working with medical action teams, food distribution missions, and refugee housing projects. He is supervisor of civic action programs at Nha Trang. • In Vietnam it often takes ingenuity on the part of a chaplain to make arrangements for worship services. The photo above (center) was taken near Nha Trang as CHAPLAIN ROGER B. SCHALM held a field service during which he baptized PFC ROGER PHILBRICK. The baptismal water was contained in a helmet. • MAJ. RUSSELL A. STARKMAN (right), a member of Grace Lutheran Church, Ely, Minn., has been decorated with the Silver Star and his third Distinguished Flying Cross for heroism in Southeast Asia military operations. Maj. Starkman was awarded the Silver Star for gallantry as an F-105 Thunderchief pilot flying against an enemy-surface-to-air missile (SAM) position in North Vietnam. A 14-year Air Force veteran, Maj. Starkman is now an operations staff officer with the Aerospace Defense Command at Ent AFB, Colo.

A MIGHTY FORTRESS

Vol. XVIII New York, N.Y., November 1968 No. 7

"I was in Vietnam for a whole year fighting for something I thought was pretty important. And when I got home I found this Catholic priest, Father Groppi, marching with the Black people in Milwaukee trying to get them open housing. I guess you could say there's a battle being fought here and overseas to get people their freedom."

"Just because I never got sent to Vietnam, folks at home act like I didn't do anything during those many long months in the Army. Everyone expects you to be a big hero!"

"The first week I was home from the service, I met this guy at a church dinner who was a conscientious objector. Right away he starts telling me why he's a CO and how it would hurt his conscience to kill somebody. That really bugged me. Here we go to the same church and he acts like I thought killing was some kind of great pastime just because I was in the service."

Counting the days until discharge, thinking about returning home, making plans for civilian living are common practice in the service. Going home is a great feeling. You think you know what you will find and what you can expect when you get there. But like the fellows who just spoke, going home isn't always what you think it will be.

These years called "Vietnam" have made a lot of changes in your life. By the time you go home you'll be a different person than when you left. How different?

For instance, do you still want to go back to your old job when you get out? Or do you feel the courage to try something else? Perhaps your military training can be used as a stepping stone to a more satisfying job.

Did you drop out of school and join up? Better do some serious considering if you think drop-outs can get good jobs just because they have some military experience. The facts of civilian life haven't changed; to get a good job you still need a good education.

How do you think you will respond to civilian living and to the thoughts and actions of the folks back home? A good place to start is understanding your own feelings about your past experience.

"BEEN AWHILE SINCE I CUT IT!.... EXPECTED YOU HOME A LITTLE SOONER."

This article was developed with the help of Dr. Luther E. Olmon, retired Navy chaplain now serving as campus pastor in Los Angeles.

Do you feel like a hero? A martyr? Or a loyal citizen? Feel cheated out of some of your life? Do you believe war is necessary to stop communism and promote democracy? Do you resent demands that have been made of you? Feel guilty about your part in the war?

Better spend some time sorting out your feelings because you will be confronted with a variety of feelings and opinions at home. Some people feel that Vietnam is not of primary importance in the face of our domestic needs. Others feel that the war is wrong, others believe it is just. Not everyone will agree with you or listen to you. Hostile remarks against the war and its participants shouldn't be taken personally—no matter how personal they may sound.

And if discovering what the folks back home think about the war isn't enough to give you an Excedrin headache, here are a few more changes you will have to get accustomed to:

While you were gone—girls' skirts went up another inch or two; acid rock hit the music world; the local river is so polluted that swimming is no longer allowed; the air is polluted, too; Black Power is very real now and no longer just a phrase; college students are rebelling against their school administration; and everytime you turn around you see a picket line. So how's a guy who just spent some important time of his life in the service supposed to react to all this? There are different ways you could react. There's the way you would have reacted if you were a few years younger—like you were when you went into the service. You were just a kid then and not too interested in the problems of your community or country. But that was a long time ago.

How are you going to react to problems now? You've had time and experience to do a lot of growing up and maturing. You could react by giving everyone a fair chance to be heard before you finalize your opinions. Listen carefully to ideas, even the ones that appear to threaten your goals. Understand what people are saying.

The relationship you have with your family and your community will depend a great deal on how well you understand people and are able to communicate with them. Openness, willingness to participate, and accepting the challenge and risk are personality traits that are needed in our society. You are needed by your community to participate and to act as a responsible citizen.

Accepting yourself as the person whom God accepts in Christ is the basic relationship that will facilitate the re-establishment of old relationships and the developing of new ones. You may have to unlearn some of the ways of military life and be open for learning new ways in civilian living.

Going home isn't really such a hard job. There are lots of people waiting for you: family, friends, employer, church, community. They will also be waiting to help you. But one thing you can count on, nothing back home will seem exciting or worthwhile without Christ at the center of your life. He was with you throughout the service and brought you home safely. Don't forget Him.

Lee Brumback leans on a pole as he talks with some Vietnamese. Both he and the author, Aase Dybing, are Lutherans serving Vietnam Christian Service

A Tractor In Every Village

Fresh air, green fields and mountains, no barbed wire, no green uniforms or visible artillery: it is as if the Montagnard inhabitants of Di Linh have stopped the war for a moment.

Di Linh is one of eight places outside Saigon where Vietnam Christian Service is working. Before the Tet offensive there were four VNCS workers here. After the offensive the administration suggested that the Americans leave Di Linh, but Lee Brumback, a Lutheran from Virginia, who had worked here a year, who speaks the language and likes the area and its people, insisted on staying. Fred Gregory, a Quaker from Oregon, moved from a unit in Quang Ngai to join him.

Brumback, an agriculturist, takes care of rice growing projects, vegetable gardens and rabbits. Gregory, who speaks Vietnamese, works with handicraft projects and a loan program. With two Montagnard assistants, they make an efficient team which operates in about fifteen Montagnard villages near Di Linh.

They make arrangements for bringing more tractors for the rice fields, transporting Montagnard handicrafts to Saigon for sale, finding Montagnard teachers for children and adults.

A successful project is a small loan program which extends loans over two years at two per cent interest. "The Montagnards," Gregory explains, "use the money to rent land, buy animals and farm equipment. So far every single borrower has paid back. Let me add that only very few of these people can sign their names."

Another success is the sale of handicrafts. Montagnard blankets, crossbows, skirt material, musical instruments, bracelets, knives and baskets are sold at a shop in the USO in Saigon. Gregory adds that the Montagnards are making a good profit from the sale, but "of course we realize that this is a temporary business which will stop when the Americans leave. When the war is over most of these people will go back to their farming, which the war now prevents."

One tractor is now at work in the rice fields of Di Linh. It is owned by VNCS which rents it, along with a driver. Brumback would like to have a tractor in each village. The farmers are eager for it too, since water buffaloes are increasingly rare.

A remarkable strain of rice from the Philippines was used in the recent planting. Brumback will watch for its outcome in the November harvest. He has been promoting vegetable gardening, but Montagnards were not interested at first. He hopes for results, however, since the local school teacher has begun to stress the importance of vitamins to her students. So far, a fish pond has drawn more attention than the demonstration garden.

Brumback also brought rabbits to the Montagnard villages, starting the project by teaching school boys to build cages and giving them rabbits. Soon each village had ten rabbits; and gradually the Montagnards learned to like rabbit stew.

Much of their work was disrupted by the Tet offensive, but Brumback and Gregory look to the future. They would like to increase their staff, improve the dispensary which is run by their two Montagnard assistants, and concentrate on schools. "The Montagnards have got to get a better education," Lee Brumback urged, adding a plea for "more tractors, a hardware store, an irrigation pump, more pigs, to mention a few things . . . but first and last, schools."

A Typical Man In Vietnam

The following appeared in the newspaper of the USS Isle Royale and was sent to us by the Royale Courier's advisor, Chaplain Edwin E. Sandvig.

Most of the guys over here are 18 and fighting to make it to 19. The average age of the combat soldier in many units here is 18½. And what a man he is—a pink-cheeked, tousled haired, tight muscles fellow who under normal circumstances would be considered by society as half-man, half-boy, not yet dry behind the ears and a pain in the unemployment chart.

But here and now he is the beardless hope of free men. He is, for the most part, unmarried and without material possessions except possibly for an old car at home and a transistor radio here. He listens to rock 'n roll and 105 millimeter howitzers.

He just got out of high school, received so-so grades, played a little football, and had a girl who promised to be true.

He has learned to drink beer because it is cold and "is the thing to do." He is a private first class, a one-year military veteran with one or possibly three years to go.

He never cared for work, preferred waxing his own car to washing his dad's, but he is now working or fighting from dawn to dark, often longer.

He still has trouble spelling, and writing letters home is a painful process. But he can break down his rifle in 30 seconds and put it back together in 29. He can describe the nomenclature of a fragmentation grenade, explain how a machine gun operates, and use either if the need arises.

He can dig a fox hole, apply first aid to a wounded companion, march until he is told to stop, or stop until he is told to march. He has seen more suffering than he should have in his short life. He has stood among hills of bodies, and he has helped to build those hills. He has wept in private and in public and has not been ashamed at doing either because his pals have fallen in battle, and he has come close to joining them.

He has become self-sufficient. He has two pair of fatigues, washes one and wears the other. He sometimes forgets to brush his teeth, but not his rifle. He keeps his socks dry and his canteen full.

He can cook his own meals, fix his own hurts and mend his own rips—material or mental. He will share his water with you if you thirst, break his rations in half if you hunger, and split his ammunition if you are fighting for your life.

He can do the work of two civilians, draw half the pay of one and find ironic humor in it all. He has learned to use his hands as a weapon and his weapon as his hands.

He is now 19, a veteran, and fighting to make 20. . . .

GIRL OF THE MONTH

"Valerie Engkjer always has a pleasing smile which springs from a radiant Christian personality," declares her pastor, the Rev. Lyle A. Rich. "She brings a ray of Christ's light wherever she goes."

Valarie was graduated last spring from Truman High School, Truman, Minnesota, where she was a member of the drama club and sang in the school choir and in a folk singing group. She was also a member of the 1967 Minnesota All-State Choir.

Trinity Lutheran Church in Truman has made good use of Valerie's musical ability; here she sings in the senior choir and directs the children's choir.

Valerie's talent and beauty have been recognized by qualified connoisseurs. She was chosen "Miss Truman" in 1967 and in 1968 was runner-up in the Minnesota Junior Miss Pagent.

At Thanksgiving

God, it's hard to be thankful, truly thankful, even in the best of situations. Harder still when you're some place that you don't want to be.

I thank "my lucky stars" when things go right. And curse "my fate" when they don't. All the while I keep forgetting that this is Your world, God, that You are in charge.

God, I want to rely on You. I want to feel that You're here with me—right now. Help me.

And help me to see all that I have for which to be thankful—Your continuing acceptance through Christ, family and friends, a church that cares, the privilege of serving You and my country.

Make me an instrument of Your peace that others may know Your presence. In Jesus' name. Amen.

Flightline Chaplain A Welcome Sight

By SGT. Edward K. Miller

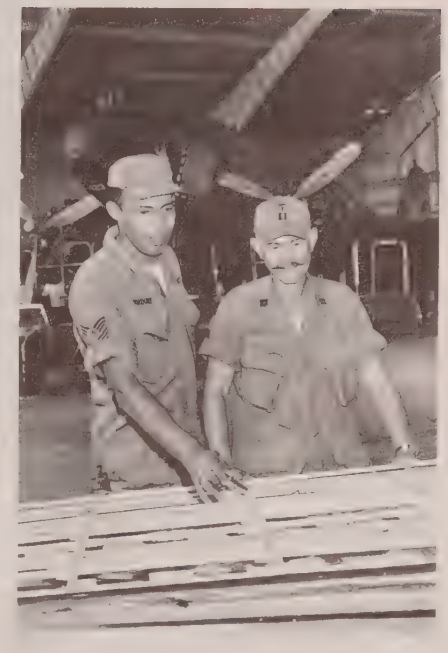
When a man is hard at work on the flightline under the broiling Vietnam sun, repairing an aircraft engine or loading cargo, and a guy comes out there to greet him with a friendly word and a grin, well, they appreciate a man like that.

Chaplain (Capt.) Charles E. Seastrunk Jr., Columbia S.C., Protestant chaplain at Nha Trang AB, performs so much of his ministry on the flightline that the men jokingly consider building a revetment for him.

"I believe in getting out there and getting to know the men, their jobs and their problems," said Chaplain Seastrunk. "It's easier to establish communication with the men when you're dealing with them in their own environment, on their jobs."



The chaplain, a former Army enlisted man during the Korean War, is a familiar sight to air crews, maintenance men and mechanics as he roams the flightline day and night, counseling, discussing problems and scaling them down to their proper perspective with his humor and insight.

He is a hard man to keep up with, and his spirit and vigor are contagious. Men working on top of aircraft spot him as he hikes down the flightline, and yell out the number of days they have left before they go home, especially if they are "shorter" than Chaplain Seastrunk.

"The morale here is much higher than it usually is on a remote base," he commented, "because these men see the job that is being done by the Air Force everyday and realize the importance of their jobs in this war."

The Chaplain has flown in every type of aircraft in use by the 14th Air Commando Wing at Nha Trang.

"I believe my church attendance has increased because the men know that I am personally concerned about their physical and spiritual welfare, their morals and their morale.

Chaplain Charles E. Seastrunk, right, gets some advice on wing repair from Master Sergeant James L. Oxendine, Pembroke, N.C., noncommissioned officer in charge of structural repair. Seastrunk, who has made a special effort to know the men and their jobs around the flightline at Nha Trang AB, is a pastor of the Lutheran Church in America.

I don't bug the men too much about church attendance. They know what I'm for, why I'm here and what I expect from them. Sometimes I invite a man to attend my Sunday morning 'preventive maintenance' meeting for a spiritual tune up. They get the idea," commented the chaplain.

Chaplain Seastrunk goes where the action is, and that includes a word with members of the 14th Security Police Squadron as they patrol the flightline.

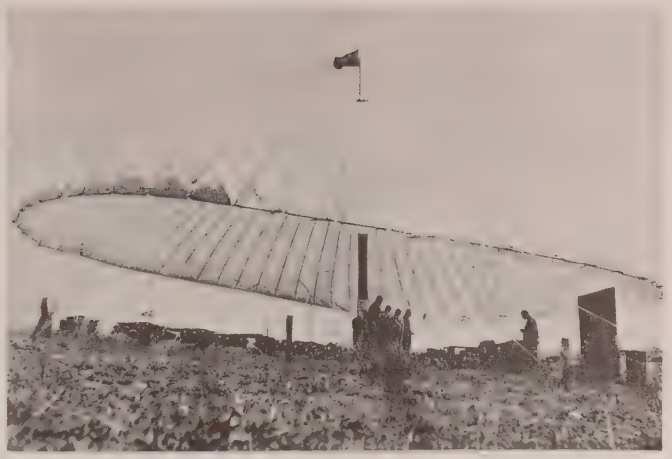
U.S. Air Force Capt. Donald W. Neal and SSgt. Clifford D. Weiser, who were classmates at Burbank (Ohio) High School, and are also fellow Lutherans, recently met half way around the world at Da Nang AB, Vietnam. Capt Neal, left, an AC-47 Dragonship navigator with the 4th Air Commando Squadron, Phu Cat AB, Vietnam, stopped off at Da Nang and immediately looked up his old basketball teammate, Sgt. Weiser. The sergeant is a heavy equipment operator with the 820th Civil Engineering Squadron at Da Nang.



"We lived on adjoining farms just outside Burbank," said Capt. Neal. "In fact I lived with the Weiser family for six months during my senior year of high school when my family moved to another part of the country."

"The last time we met," stated Sgt. Weiser, "was in 1955 when I was returning from a tour of duty in Guam. I was being assigned to Stewart AFB, Tenn., so I decided to stop in Columbus, Ohio, where the captain was attending Ohio State. I didn't know at the time that we would have to go half way around the world to meet again."

Sgt. Weiser's home congregation is Salem Lutheran Church, Wooster, Ohio. Capt. Neal and his family are now members of First Lutheran Church, Waco, Tex.

Sgt. First Class William Harvey was presented a plaque in appreciation of his work in the Lutheran program at West Point. Sgt. Harvey, who retired from the Army after more than 35 years active duty, has served the Lutheran group for over 15 years. Looking on as Maj. Darrold Brickson presents the plaque are graduated cadets Louis J. Hansen (left) of Glendale, Mo., and John Frinak, Stanley, Wis., who also received plaques for their work with the Lutheran group.

Chaplains serving in South Vietnam have reported a shortage of chapels for worship services, but troops of the 101st Airborne Division have not let the lack of a building deprive them of services. They used this huge parachute as an outdoor chapel. They call it a "Prayerchute" and it is used in all religious services. (RNS Photo)

in search of Christmas

The search for a place for the Christ-child to be born, told in the Gospel of St. Luke, is depicted by New York artist Barton Lidice Benes. The original work is oil on canvas. The young artist studied religious art at the New York Theological Seminary. (RNS photo)

Vietnam is a lousy place to spend Christmas. So is Thailand. So is Korea. So is Germany. So is Alaska. So is California if you live in New York.

There's only one place to be at Christmas time. Home. Mom and Dad. Turkey and mincemeat pie. Decorating the Christmas tree that always starts out looking too tall or too scrawny but somehow manages to turn out looking quite spectacular on Christmas Eve.

> Harriet, every year it's the same thing. You send me out into that crowd at the shopping center to pick out a tree and then when I bring it home you tell me it's too sparse. I keep telling you to come with me and help pick out the tree so you'll be happy with it, but you're always too busy.

The day before Christmas. The ritual preparations. Smells of Christmas baking permeate the house. Mom in her crisp little apron applying the star, holly, camel and sheep-shaped cookie cutters to the rolled out dough.

> Joe, would you have time to go to the bakery for me and pick up a fruit cake and some fancy Christmas cookies? I just didn't have time to make any this year.

And the joy of buying gifts. Gifts that are carefully secreted in the back of a closet until Christmas morning.

> Every year I swear I won't get stuck in the Christmas rush. But here I am again with the same old problem of what to buy for Mom and Dad. I could get Dad a shirt, but I just got him one for his birthday. And Mom talks about wanting things that I can't afford. If only this store wasn't so darn crowded.

Mystery Surrounds Christ in Jungle

Standing in front of the 4th Engineer Battalion Chapel at Camp Enari, the 4th Infantry Division base camp, is a statue of Joseph with his son, Jesus. Just how a beautiful statue found its way to an Army camp in the central highlands of Vietnam was related to us by Dr. Frederick H. Roever, an Army medical officer and member of the Lutheran Church of the Holy Communion, Philadelphia, Pa.

Some months ago, a 4th Division Infantry platoon was carrying out a reconnaissance mission. The platoon had tramped many miles through the vast, desolate, primitive forests of Vietnam's central highlands and having marched deep into the jungle, the soldiers were very tired. But they pushed on, expecting enemy contact at any moment. They were far from any villages; the only inhabitants of the jungle were wild animals and the enemy.

Just as darkness was setting in the men approached a small clearing. One of the soldiers thought he saw a human figure. They all stopped suddenly. Several soft clicks were heard as the M16's were adjusted for automatic fire. Cautiously and quietly they approached the clearing, not knowing what to expect.

The figure was not the enemy. It was a beautiful white stone statue of Joseph with the child, Jesus. The troops were astonished. Their discovery was almost unbelievable. Why would such a beautiful and delicately carved statue ever be placed in the midst of the jungle, deep in the mountains and very far from any roads, people or churches? How did the statue ever get there? It was very heavy and the terrain was extremely mountainous and covered by dense jungle.

Other questions arise from this strange incident, such as what was the purpose of having a statue of Jesus with his father, Joseph? Was the statue sculpted by a Vietnamese artist or a western artist? Was the statue a result of work done in that area by Catholic priests during the French occupation of Vietnam?

The statue was taken back to Camp Enari where it now stands outside the chapel—a reminder of the incident in the jungle, and a source of questions that may never be answered.

The mystery of Christ in the jungle remains unsolved, but the message it conveys is important to us all, especially to those who are far from their homes and churches this Christmas. The Lord is with us always, even unto the ends of the earth—even into the depths of the Vietnam jungle.

Lutheran Chaplain To VN Top Post

Chaplain (Col.) Gerhardt W. Hyatt, a pastor of The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, has been named to the top military chaplaincy post in Vietnam. He assumed duties in mid-October as staff chaplain in the United States Military Assistance Command.

Assigned to the headquarters of General Creighton W. Abrams, this country's commander in Vietnam, Chaplain Hyatt will supervise the religious activities of all allied forces chaplains there.

Chaplain Hyatt has been director of personnel in the Army's Chief of Chaplains Office in Washington for the past two years. He was responsible for the personnel management of approximately 2,000 Army chaplains stationed around the world.

Chaplain Hyatt entered the chaplaincy in 1945 in response to the call for chaplains following the Battle of the Bulge. He served as a troop transport chaplain in the Pacific until the end of World War II.

At the start of the Korean conflict, assigned to the 24th Infantry Division, he joined Task Force Smith, the first United States Army unit to confront the enemy.

Christmas 1968

Christmas 1968. Are you spending it in a lousy out-of-the-way place with a funny name? Where the people don't even hang tinsel and big blinking plastic stars over the streets? Where there are no Santa Clauses on every corner and no television commercials to tell you what your favorite girl wants for Christmas?

Then you may have the chance of a lifetime to celebrate the birth of our Lord in an atmosphere devoid of the commercialism that plagues our civilian world. For once in your life you will be able to look at this annual festival through eyes not blurred by the glare of too much tinsel and plastic ornaments.

Imagine the busiest street in your home town during the Christmas season, full of decorations and advertisements geared for the holiday buyer. Now try to imagine that same street, those same stores and windows without any vestiges of Christmas—between Thanksgiving and December 25. "Impossible," you say. "That just wouldn't be Christmas," you also say.

Perhaps. Perhaps not. It is up to you to discover for yourself what the spirit of Christmas really is.

Depending on where you are stationed, you may find the responsibility for celebrating Christmas completely on your shoulders. You may not be in a society that reminds you every moment of the day how many shopping days are left. You may not find yourself in a situation where the church can take care of planning your Christmas celebration.

On your own, you will be able to decide just what the spirit of Christmas is—for you. You may discover that regardless of whether or not the world around you is celebrating the birth of our Savior, it is still a festival of our church, a time of joy when we celebrate the new life that became ours when God chose to leave the comfort of His heavenly home and come to earth to live as a man and to suffer the pain of man.

You may remember this some day as the time you spent Christmas alone with God, just the two of you celebrating new life. Or perhaps it will be a different kind of Christmas with a few buddies and God. Or it may turn out to be the time you spent Christmas with people who sang "Silent Night" in a language you didn't speak, but you knew the meaning of the words to the hymn.

Someday when you are out buying a Christmas tree at the local shopping center and wondering what to get your wife for Christmas and how you're going to pay for all the presents you bought for the kids, remember that once you were alone in a strange country and discovered that Christmas is truly in the heart of man.

Walther League Reshaped; LCA Holds Youth Convo

Restructuring of their organization into a youth-led and issue-oriented ministry of the church was voted by an overwhelming majority at the International Youth Gathering of the Walther League, youth auxiliary of The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, held at Purdue University August 19-23.

Some 2600 Lutheran teenagers representing 4500 youth societies throughout the U.S. and Canada gathered in Lafayette, Indiana to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the organization and rechart its structure.

The new youth-led program will be directed and administered by a youth council composed of six elected general representatives and six appointed regional staff members. Each of the staff members is assigned to a specific region of the United States or Canada to counsel and guide local league societies in developing their own structures and programs and in tackling the first issue chosen by the reorganized League.

The League's "Gathering" adopted as its first major special-issue project "The Hunger Chain"—involving the youth directly in hunger's "many links, including the causes, results, . . . and most especially ourselves personally with the PEOPLE who are the victims and attackers of hunger."

The resolution stated: "The Hunger Chain involves the linkage of several problems which are created by/or result in hunger—such as poverty, racism, apathy, selfishness, ignorance, over-population and other types of involvement which may grow out of local needs."

Letter to Pres. Johnson

A special letter calling for "priority" action "now" by Congress in confronting the problem of world hunger and bearing the signature of over 2000 Lutheran teenagers was sent to President Johnson.

Citing "hunger-induced" deaths daily of some 10,000 people and the severe malnourishment of two-thirds of the world's population, the letter said: "We do not see why 60 million acres in the United States should be earning money by NOT being farmed when statistics exist such as those quoted earlier. We are aware of the problems inherent in bringing the land back into use, but we think the United States is more than able to pay the price."

The letter concluded: "Hunger should not be a party issue. It goes beyond party lines. All Congress needs is to know that people ARE concerned. We hope our letter is a start in recognition of this fact."

Dr. Oliver Harms, president of The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, commended the assembled teenagers for their seriously informed approach to major world problems and urged them to "confidently do your very best to make whatever you decide here operate as effectively as possible in the years immediately ahead."

The new League will function as one special youth ministry program of several under general sponsorship and supervision of the Board for Young People's Work of The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod and its various District Youth Boards, with whom it will also maintain close consultative and advisory relations. Newly appointed executive secretary of this Board is Mr. Ben W. Eggers, who will supervise the Synod's new "Office of Youth Ministries" at its headquarters building in St. Louis.

LCA Youth Discuss War, Poverty, Race

A statement critical of U.S. involvement in Vietnam but asking young people "to strive to obtain knowledge and understanding to contribute to the formation of a national will to find a just solution" in the Southeast Asian conflict was adopted by Lutheran Church in America teenagers at a Youth Convo held at Lenoir Rhyne College in Hickory, N.C.

The 211 persons attending the Youth Convo sponsored by the Commission on Youth Ministry of the Lutheran Church in America met Aug. 18-21 to discuss the issues of War, Poverty and Race.

Steve Corriher of Salisbury, N.C., said that the statement of war "certainly does speak for a majority, but a very simple majority." He added that it "overlooks the atrocities and immoralities of the other side." He also charged that Convo planners had provided the young people with one-sided materials on the war discussions.

Convo manager, the Rev. Clair Hoifjeld of Philadelphia, replied that although anti-war groups had responded with materials, government agencies requested to send materials had not done so.

The statement on Vietnam said in part that the United States "through international and domestic political mistakes, has created an ungodly and hideous condition in the Republic of Vietnam."

It charged that the U.S. had failed in Vietnam militarily "in its original intention as an advisor," and in its attempt to "unify" the Vietnamese through a pacification program.

The group reporting on race relations presented a statement entitled "A White Christian Pledge," which states: "We have a responsibility. We must realize that we are a nation divided by white racism. We caused this division between black and white.

"Yet, we must understand that there is only one race—the human race. Black is beautiful, white is beautiful, people are beautiful."

An "Open Letter to Those Who Love" adopted by the Youth Convo declared: "The church spends more money on stained glass windows than on the poor. . . . We have learned to cry this week for 40 million Americans who live in poverty and the 10 million who are starving."

Offer to help ACT

The group reporting on its discussion of poverty spoke of the $6.5 million urban appeal the LCA approved last June at its annual convention in Atlanta, and demanded that youth be a part of the appeal.

"We as concerned Christians voice our overwhelming support for the issues which underscore this goal, and we offer ourselves to the LCA to actively participate in the work involved in the raising of these funds from local congregations and in the approach of justice and social change in the church."

In response to this request, the Rev. Dr. Robert J. Marshall, president of the LCA, announced that Mr. G. Frederick Schott had been appointed youth chairman for the emergency needs appeal. Mr. Schott, 25, is in his senior year at Lutheran Theological Seminary at Columbia, S.C., and will be engaged primarily in rallying the youth of the church to support ACT—Act in Crisis Today, as the 15-month drive is called.

I enjoyed reading the article, 'Can a Christian Participate in Killing?' (Sept. 1968). I have one question . . . The Bibles that are given to the soldiers here are very nice. But the commandment that says 'Thou shall not kill' is written differently. It says: 'Thou shall not murder.' Would you explain this (difference) to me.

PFC Darrel L. Gust
Good Hope Evangelical Luth. Church
Garden City, Michigan

You did not indicate what Bible you were given (there are various translations). However, the American Bible Society translation of the New Testament, entitled Good News for Modern Man, published in 1966, chooses to translate the Greek word soneveuseis with the word "murder." Older translations into English uniformly use the word "kill" as the translation of Matt. 19:18. The reason for so doing is probably that "murder" is more nearly the modern equivalent of what we believe the meaning of the original text was. The ancient Jews were not hesitant to kill animal life for food. In fact there are some who would argue that the prohibition applies only to a fellow-Israelite. In our time "murder" is a term restricted to the description of an act which takes the life of another human being. There are even degrees of murder distinguishing between those acts which were premeditated, spontaneous, or unavoidable. But all meanings of this term involve the destruction of a fellow human being.

A Mighty Fortress invites you to write to us if you have a question or comment about a point that is made in an article. Letters should be sent to: Editor, A Mighty Fortress, 315 Park Avenue South, New York, New York, 10010.

We would appreciate receiving the name of your home congregation. Letters must be signed; names will be withheld upon request.

Caution: Cigarette Smoking May Be Hazardous To Your Health

By DAVID BARKER

Reprinted by permission from The Lutheran, December 4, 1968.

I'm the kind of person who needs to belong. When a pack of cigarettes is passed, I take one and light up because it gives me the comfortable feeling that I'm part of the group. A cigarette is a sort of common denominator.

For me, a cigarette is a way of talking without words—communing I think they call it. It's a way of declaring, "Sure, I'm one of you. We like to do the same things." The blue haze that rises wherever we get together is a part of every smoker's vocabulary. We say it with smoke.

So much for one cigarette. But I'm not sure this explains the forty or so I inhale every day. I have my first one before I dress in the morning. (After twenty-five years who should have to prove to his wife he belongs?) And one after coffee and one driving to work and one before I punch the clock and one when I get to my lathe. Forty a day.

I didn't intend it that way when I started. I just took an occasional one to be sociable—to keep from explaining all the time. But soon I was carrying my own and it wasn't long before I was smoking by reflex.

Programmed for Smoking

Right hand to left shirt pocket, two raps on the pack, left hand to left jacket pocket, a couple of flicks of my thumb on the lighter, a cheek-hollowing suck to get the smoke into my innards and a fumble to put the pack back into my shirt pocket. My hands got trained to the motions. Forty times a day really sets the habit. You're programmed.

But I think it's worth it for my friends' sake. Or I thought it was until two weeks ago. That's when they came to get my neighbor, Leonard, three doors up the street. The black station wagon sitting there with its back door gaping open gave me the creeps. It looked like a tomb. The whole neighborhood was quiet that day.

Len was forty-six. He had a lobe removed from his left lung seven months ago. It seemed like no time before he was walking around the yard, and went back at his job. What a whiz these modern doctors are! But then he went back to the hospital. They hadn't got it all. He started on cobalt treatment, and was he sick!

I saw him in the hospital. He was courageous. We both were. He talked about what he was going to do when he got out and I cheered him on. But when our eyes met, I knew what he was thinking and he knew what I was thinking. I didn't offer him a cigarette for fellowship. I didn't even smoke in his room.

We communed all right—there were no words—but I didn't like what we were saying to one another. I remembered the time he was raking leaves and I went over and we stopped for a smoke together. One of my forty for the day. One of his fifty. Neither of us wanted to talk about old times.

Dad Was a Smoker

I think I'm different from Len, though. I'm a stronger man, more athletic, with a good health record. I get plenty of exercise and don't notice any shortness of breath. I tell my wife this when she worries that I'm smoking too much, but she asks me why I cough like I do when I first get up. Sometimes I explode and wheeze and strangle till I think I'm going to turn inside out.

My father used to cough like that when I was a boy growing up in Kansas. He'd start the day with a cigarette and then while he was fixing the furnace I'd hear these awful hacking, heaving, strangling sounds as he coughed and gasped his lungs into working order for the day. He died when he was 57.

I'll have to admit that when I found Len in a ward with three other men trying to recover after lung surgery, I felt fluttery in my stomach. Maybe he isn't such an exception as I thought. Quite frankly, I'd just as soon not think about the way I felt when I left the hospital that day. Four fellows in one big room!

To make matters worse, the American Cancer Society keeps saying these sly little things to me on radio and television: "If you think you're dying for a smoke, you may be." A long pause. And the other day while I was driving home from work a commentator referred to some study showing that eighty out of eighty-one people operated on for lung cancer were smokers. Maybe I'm not such an exception either.

I'll admit, as brave as I act, I'm a smoker who's nervous. When my buddies and I make our little jokes—some of them pretty raw—

A MIGHTY FORTRESS

Vol. XVIII New York, N.Y. Feb. 1969 No. 10

I laugh as hard as any of them. When my wife pleads with me about our two little boys, four and seven, I turn her off with a blue-fringed word or two. So far as others know, nothing gets to me. I keep rapping the pack and flicking the lighter. Forty times a day.

But inside, I'm not as tough as I pretend. It's not the cost or smell or inconvenience that bother me. I can handle those arguments. If I feel a bit cornered, I just hurl a few hard words against "the Puritan ethic" and turn my mind elsewhere.

What really gets to me is something deep and mysterious I know about myself. It's out of style to talk about it, so I never do. But that doesn't keep me from thinking about it. Whenever someone else mentions it, I shut him up fast, especially if anyone is around. But I do this because I'm sensitive. I know that what the other fellow is saying is true.

A Lack of Respect

The deepest truth I know about myself is that somebody made me. I don't mean my mother. I heard a scientist talk about the processes of life—biochemistry he called it—and it was pretty sharp. But while he was talking the thought struck me—who made him so he could learn all this stuff and talk as he does?

This is going to sound funny but I'll tell you anyhow. The cashier in our front office quit smoking recently. He used to fire them up one after another. I asked him how come the change. He told me kindly but bluntly that religion had a lot to do with it, something about learning who he was and why he was alive.

I won't go into all the specifics, but what he said makes lots of sense. The truth for me is, I smoke because I don't respect my body. And I don't respect my body because I don't respect my Maker. But I'm getting closer to being serious about this. Any day now, in fact, I'm going back to that cashier and say—"tell me how."

The U.S. Wallet as Viewed in Saigon

By THOMAS W. KLEWIN

Reprinted by permission from the October 29, 1968 issue of The Lutheran Standard.

"You Americans can afford the luxury of talking about God, heaven, and the soul. You have everything you need to take care of all your wants. How would you feel, though, if you didn't have enough to eat or never possessed enough money?"

The words poured from the lips of an angry, frustrated young man—angry at the world, his country, and most of all at his lot in life. He was a Vietnamese student and an innocent victim of the warfare now bitterly raging throughout South Vietnam.

His home had been in a small country village in the heart of the delta region. The Viet Cong have periodically overrun his village and exacted their tribute from his people. Since he was a college student, conversant in both French and English, he was suspected by his own people and considered a potential menace to the Communists. He had no place to go but to Saigon. His future was uncertain and clouded. Whatever his dreams might be, they would have to wait until the Viet Cong are defeated, if they are.

I met him in the famous marketplace of Saigon. He had volunteered to act as my guide and interpreter in the hopes of earning a few of the precious American dollars I was carrying in my wallet.

He didn't know I was a military chaplain. For him I was the symbol of the promised land about which he dreamed. He knew Americans were well fed, well clothed, well housed, and owned every conceivable luxury. His vision of the perfect life encompassed a material-filled world where all his needs, wants, and even whims could be filled.

Envy and Bitterness

There was no deep resentment against me or even against the United States—only envy at my seeming good fortune and bitterness at the slow progress his own country was making toward that day when he too could have a world overflowing with material possessions.

Whenever I traveled in Asia this young man's hopes were reechoed by those I met. Each person seemed to say: "Someday I'll have that kind of life, and the good things will also be mine."

The words of that young Vietnamese student come back to haunt me. They point a finger at us in America and say: "You've taught us to want material things. Your life tells us happiness can come from possessing things. If your material possessions give you a deep sense of security, then we want that same kind of security."

Why do our Christian convictions about the primacy of God and the hope of eternal life fail to shine through the trappings of our day-to-day living? The young man in Vietnam had seen and carefully observed thousands of Americans as they traveled through his land. Few, if any, left an impression that faith in Christ can and must have priority in the life of an individual.

The young man was frankly surprised at my interest in the state of the church both in Saigon and through South Vietnam. He automatically assumed that I'd ask to see the shops where my American dollars could buy something uniquely oriental. He could not grasp that I needed no material things stuffed in my suitcase to make my trip a success.

From those few days spent in the capital of a war-torn nation I discovered the inherent danger confronting every child of God who lives in our Great Society. It doesn't require any consuming passion for money, a single-mindedness in acquiring material things, nor even any extra expended energy to live a material-centered existence. Everything in our modern American way of life is automatically geared toward a total involvement in things we can see, hear, smell, taste, sense, and touch.

Learning Who to Trust

An angry young Asiatic made me realize how relatively easy it is to relegate God to the fringe areas of life and transfer basic trust from him to the by-products of our modern, highly sophisticated, and productive economy—excellent medical care, good living, social security, insurance, and a bank account which allows me to buy whatever I feel I really need or want.

As I rode home in our giant Air Force cargo plane I couldn't help but recall the words of a man of God who wrote: "Lord give me neither poverty nor riches . . . lest I become full and deny thee and say, 'Who is the Lord?' "

I learned a second lesson from that young man. He dreamed of a life hedged by material security. Yet he was wandering the streets of Saigon earning a few dollars from his work as a guide and interpreter because there is no real security in material things. The Viet Cong had taken his village from him, denied him the opportunity of putting his education to use in a well-paying position, and they threatened his very existence as an educated student.

Sitting in the security and safety of my plane high over the jungles of that war-torn country, I took a long hard look at my wallet. It offered me so much, or at least it seemed to offer so much to that young Vietnamese. Yet what would it have profited me if I were taken captive by the Viet Cong, or if it deluded me for a few more years until I stood on the edge of eternity?

The last time I saw that Vietnamese student, I held out my hand and said: "I could give you the few dollars I've left in my wallet, and there aren't many, and you could feel some American was being kind to you. But I'd rather leave you with the memory of one American who asked you to visit a few churches with him. For that is where ultimate security and hope are—in that cross shining from a handful of steeples in your city."

DSMP Launches New Program Of 'Field Service Ministry'

The Lutheran Council in the USA has launched a new program through its Division of Service to Military Personnel to widen and intensify a spiritual ministry to more than 125,000 Lutherans serving in the United States armed forces.

The new program calls for closing five stateside and three overseas Service Centers and the establishment of "A field service pastor ministry" in fifteen areas in this country and abroad.

In each area, a field service pastor will both conduct and coordinate the Lutheran ministry and para-military personnel, working with chaplains, civilian pastors, congregations, and isolated groups of Lutherans.

Overseas centers to be phased out include those in Tachikawa, Japan; Koza, Okinawa, and Kaiserslautern, Germany. Centers at Seoul, Korea, and Olongapo, the Philippines, will be maintained. Spiritual ministries in centers at Agana, Guam, and Bangkok, Thailand, will be enlarged but recreational activities terminated.

Stateside centers will be closed in San Francisco and San Diego, Calif.; San Antonio and El Paso, Tex., and Jacksonville, Fla.

Facilities in Killeen, Tex., and Jacksonville, N.C., will be maintained, but Lutherans in those areas will be encouraged to assume increasing responsibility for their operation.

The center in Charleston, S.C. it is hoped can be transferred to area Lutherans who have expressed interest in supporting the ministry there.

Reasons for the changes in the program were expressed by Dr. William J. Reiss, executive secretary of the DSMP, who observed that "as new situations arise in the military, and in theaters in which U.S. armed forces are stationed, the churches must adopt new approaches if their ministry to men and women in uniform is to have maximum effectiveness."

During the past ten years, he noted, recreational and snack facilities of the finest order have been made available at practically all military installations. "Consequently," he added, "the need for the church to provide such facilities by means of service centers is becoming less and less . . . It is also a matter of record that the bulk of casual visitors to Lutheran Service Centers are neither Lutheran nor potential members of the Lutheran church."

"The need as well as the opportunity to place a greater emphasis on a spiritual ministry . . . is everywhere evident," he said.

Boxing, Football Standout Tackles Army Chaplaincy

By SP ROBERT MAST

High on a hill at Fort Benning, Ga., commanding the runways of Lawson Field, stands a white chapel. Known as the Airborne Chapel, its location suggests all the power of the Airborne, and the strong role faith plays in the military.

Chaplain (Major) Conrad Walker is one of two chaplains who share this chapel and its responsibilities to Airborne trainees in the 4th Student Battalion, The Student Brigade.

Chaplain Walker, through his own experiences, is able to set an admirable example to persons undergoing the rugged Airborne course. The 36-year old chaplain was once faced with a choice between professional football and the life of a Lutheran pastor. Chaplain Walker has since helped many of our nation's servicemen keep courage and faith during the trying circumstances of war and military training.

He was born in Herrick, Ill., the son of Mr. and Mrs. Don D. Walker, and was brought up in Illinois.

While in high school, he lettered in boxing, track and field, baseball, football and basketball. He also participated in boxing tournaments throughout the mid-west. Fighting as a representative of Rockland, Ill., he became Mid-West Golden Gloves Champion from 1949 through 1952.

Conrad Walker was a hard charging guard on the University of Washington's football team. Later he had a choice to try out for the Green Bay Packers or attend a seminary. He chose the latter.

After high school he attended the University of Washington in Seattle and held the West Coast Golden Gloves Championship from 1952 through 1954. He spent over nine years in the amateur ring, winning 71 out of 76 fights. He fought in an amateur standing so he could remain eligible for college football, which he played well as a guard for Washington.

As academically inclined as he is athletic, Walker studied history, psychology, philosophy and physical education. He received a Bachelor of Arts degree in 1954. As a student he pledged Sigma Nu social fraternity.

There was no professional football draft in those days, but Walker was offered a chance to try out for the Green Bay Packers. He turned down the offer and enrolled at Luther Theological Seminary, St. Paul, Minn., where, after four years of study, he received a Bachelor of Theology degree and was ordained a Lutheran pastor.

Originally commissioned March 28, 1957, in the Minnesota National Guard, he attended Chaplain School at Fort Slocum, N.Y., following his graduation from the seminary. Remaining in the Guard, he served as parish pastor at Shiloh Lutheran Church, Elmore, Minn., from 1959 until 1962, when he entered active service.

After coming on active duty, Chaplain Walker served at Fort Campbell, Ky., until 1966, when he went to Vietnam with the 173rd Airborne Brigade (Separate). While at Fort Campbell, he coached boxers in the 2nd Battalion, 101st Airborne Division and the 502nd Airborne Battle Group.

While in Vietnam, Chaplain Walker served with the 2nd Battalion, 503rd Airborne Battle Group and with the staff of the 173rd. He also participated in the one combat parachute jump the United States made in Vietnam, near the Cambodian Border, Feb. 22, 1967.

For his actions in Vietnam, Chaplain Walker was awarded the Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal with "V" device for valor, Purple Heart and Army Commendation Medal.

He arrived at Fort Benning following his tour in Vietnam, and is now the senior chaplain in the Student Brigade.

At Fort Benning, as in Vietnam, Chaplain Walker sets an example of courage and pride for the Airborne trainees. He is a master parachutist, having made over 200 jumps, including the combat jump. He jumps regularly with trainees during their final week of airborne instruction when they must jump five times from an aircraft, in flight, to qualify for their wings.

If a trainee has qualms about jumping, it is not uncommon to hear Chaplain Walker yelling "Geronimo" with the trainee on the way out of the aircraft door.

Ex-pugilist and ex-football player, Chaplain Walker is seen here in working clothes. It is not uncommon to see him "hitting the silk" along with a group of trainees.

Lt. Col. Clifton M. Tatum, 4th Student Battalion commander and the chaplain's commanding officer, has this to say:

". . . Having worked with Chaplain Walker for several months, I have found him to be an outstanding chaplain and an outstanding soldier as well. This is emphasized by the fact that he was recently chosen from the secondary zone for promotion to lieutenant colonel. This, in itself, is an exceptional accomplishment.

"Chaplain Walker is a firm believer in getting to the heart of any problem which is presented to him. His manner of dealing with 'young troopers,' as he calls them, has gained him respect and confidence.

"He does not speak of his own accomplishments but rather of those which the students can achieve."

CAPT JOHN F. MIKO was presented the Silver Star for "gallantry in action as an F-100 pilot while serving against an opposing force near Loc Ninh, Vietnam." He has also received the DFC. Capt. Miko, a member of Lutheran Church of the Advent, Glendale, is now an F-100 instrument instructor at Luke Air Force Base, Arizona. Miko is a 1962 graduate of the United States Air Force Academy. After pilot training he served a tour of duty in England before going to Vietnam.

A1C LYNN A. CARLSON, a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, Truman, Minn., has just started an 18-month tour of duty at Anderson Air Force Base, Guam. He is working on C-97 planes, familiar to the men on Guam as the planes that take them out of Guam for R&R trips.

GIRL OF THE MONTH

Our February choice for Lutheran Girl of the Month is a lovely Valentine from Spartanburg, S.C., Nan Neumeyer.

Nan entered Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S.C., this past fall where she plans to major in Home Economics.

As a member of Saint John's Lutheran Church, Spartanburg, Nan was active in all phases of her congregational life. Her special interests were the Luther League and the youth choir.

When Pastor Everette Lineberger nominated Nan, he not only pointed out her activities at church, but emphasized her friendliness and charming disposition. "Everyone who knows her loves her," he said. We think that makes her an idea choice for our Valentine!

That's funny, it sure doesn't look like a church

By BERNIECE ROER NEAL

When you were a child, you probably placed your hands back-to-back, locked your fingers, then closed your hands and recited:

"Here's the church house
Here's the steeple,
Open the doors,
And see all the people."

How simple life used to be . . .

Recently, as I drove up to visit the new St. Martin de Porres Catholic Church in Hazelwood, Mo., I found myself muttering, "That's funny, it sure doesn't look like a church."

For this church, along with most of the newer ones, looks like anything but a house with a steeple . . .

There is no doubt that many modern churches are causing some very emotional outbursts from many people. Not only because of style, but also because of size, function, and cost. I decided to perform a one-woman survey of some of these new fangled trends.

Why don't you come along?

First question: WHICH STYLE? TRAD OR MOD?

So it doesn't look like a church. Does it matter?

I asked a cab driver in St. Louis, Missouri.

"Yes," he said. "It should look like a church. Not like a night club. Years ago, from blocks away, you could tell a church was a church. But not anymore. And I think a church should have a symbol—like a cross."

I asked a professional architect, Mr. Verner I. Burks, of Burks and Landberg, St. Louis, if a cross were necessary on a church building.

"No," he replied. "I think it's a kind of crutch."

But shouldn't a church look like a church?

"Years ago, from blocks away, you could tell a church was a church."

"Yes," he said, "it should look like a church. Not like a library, for instance. A building should transmit, somehow, a feeling. Its feeling. For example: a bank: permanence, security. A ski lodge: playful intent of its users. A church: the attitude of parishioners."

Would that mean the grandest building of all—precious materials and a futuristic design?

"Not at all. A spartan ghetto church is not likely to be made of marble. However, a meticulous laying of brickwork, for instance, can give the suggestion of great dignity and beauty."

Sounds simple. But is it? Even where money is no problem, and the congregation rightfully anticipates a church of great dignity and beauty, the finished building can evoke serious dissatisfaction.

The new National Presbyterian Church and Center in Washington, D.C., cost $8.5 million and seats 1,250 in its sanctuary. Wolf Von Eckardt, a critic for the Washington POST says it's "ugly." Its architect terms it "exemplifying the church of today." The critic terms its style, "Mod-Gothicist." He adds that it is difficult to find the entrance.

Another architect, Gyo Obata, whose designs have brought him many major citations, including the Church Architectural Guild of America Award, has said, "Generally speaking, I think many modern churches are meaningless. These bad churches say, 'I really don't care.' On the other hand, if anyone asked me to do a purely Gothic—or Middle Ages—church, I'd ask him to go elsewhere. I stress this, not because I design contemporary buildings, but because an architect just doesn't go backwards."

In fact, it is difficult to find an architect speaking out for the purely traditional style church. Yet, when setting eyes upon lovely old St. Bride's in Fleet Street of London, for instance, one wonders how we can ever forsake the style completely. That smallish Anglican Church is as lovely inside as out. Christopher Wren must have been eyeing a wedding cake when he designed the exquisite four-tiered steeple.

It looks like a church.

Is that important? Or, as with each parishioner, is it what goes on inside that's important?

Second Question: ARE SOME CHURCHES GETTING TOO BIG FOR THEIR BENCHES?

Tulsa, Okla., has a skyscraper church. . . . It was completed in 1929, and its present value is over $5 million. Its adult membership is over 6,000 and the church school over 4,000.

I visited this 14-story Boston Avenue Methodist Church, and as I studied the long directory in the lobby before taking the elevator to the 12th floor to see the minister, a wild picture ran through my mind.

Having been a mother collecting her children after Sunday school in an average-sized church, I visualized the bedlam which might occur here to a family of, say six children. Infant Mary is collected on the second floor south, 2-year-old Peter on the first floor east, 5-year-old Michael is captured on the fourth floor west, 9-year-old Robert on the third floor north, and it is assumed that 18-year-old David can make it down from the eighth on his own and meet the others on the 450-car parking lot—if he can find the car. . . .

Is the heaven-scraper church an improvement? Does it look like a church? Feel like a church? Function as a church should? Is a church building containing lobby directories and elevators and harried ministers a sanctuary for weary and frustrated businessmen? Or is there too much of the Empire State Building in it?

Willoughby Marshall, a Cambridge, Mass. architect, predicts that we'll build smaller churches and more of them. And that many persons feel that any church seating more than 500 people is probably too big.

Do you agree?

Third Question: SHOULD A CHURCH BE BUILT FOR WORSHIP ONLY?

One architect told me that church leaders today want a building to express a God who is involved in human affairs.

The award-winning and much publicized church designed by the Burks and Landberg firm, the Hope Presbyterian Church in Creve Coeur, Mo., is a powerful expression of that idea.

Its 50-by-80-foot main room dimensions were

Churches Without Visible Members

The work and ministry of Lutheran chaplains is not deterred by combat, rotation of troops, or their own unpredictable situation and schedule.

Each year many men and women are baptized and/or confirmed into the Lutheran faith. But what congregation do they join—particularly if they are in the jungles of Vietnam?

In Washington, D.C., there is a church that never sees most of the members. Luther Place Memorial Lutheran Church actually has two congregations: one group that shows up on Sunday morning and another group that can't attend because they are scattered all over the world. That second group, the invisible members, are servicemen and their families who comprise the 1,000 children and 600 adult members of the Military Congregation of Luther Place.

This special military congregation was established by the Lutheran Church in America. Mrs. Margaret Pfanstiehl has volunteered time to maintain the records and to correspond with chaplains and members and to prepare the monthly mailings.

Many will leave the military and transfer their memberships to congregations in their home towns. Others will remain members of Luther Place for a long time.

The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod has established a similar program of ministry to the military. Christ Lutheran Church in Washington, D.C., is the home of Christ Lutheran Church Military, which maintains contact with approximately 1,500 persons—almost 600 communicant members, 283 prospective members, 318 on the cradle roll, and 308 on the Sunday school roll.

A member of Christ Church Military receives tracts and spiritual publications, a communion record card, and Sunday church bulletins bearing a special message to the member overseas from the pastor, the Rev. Edgar J. Mundinger. Where families are stationed at military bases abroad, Sunday school materials are sent to the children, from cradle roll to confirmation class, plus a quarterly letter to the parents; birthday cards and special magazines are sent to the children, depending on the age of the child. Members also receive the regular monthly mailings from Synod's Armed Forces Commission.

During services on the Landing Zone at Vandergrift Combat Base, South Vietnam, CHAPLAIN WALLACE B. TURNER, Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, baptized CPL ANTONY GLEATON, whose home is in South Los Angeles, Calif. CPL Gleaton is now a member of Christ Lutheran Church Military in Washington, D.C., until his return to the States.

Servicemen and their families who are baptized and confirmed into The American Lutheran Church participate in a different type of church program. Each chaplain submits a report of "pastoral acts" to the Evangelism Commission of The American Lutheran Church. Reports of adult baptisms and confirmations are forwarded to an ALC congregation in the serviceman's home town and the pastor of the church follows up with correspondence.

Regardless of the military situation—be it war or peace—the chaplain's ministry yields new members to the Lutheran faith, and the church is prepared to welcome them into the community of faith.

This nuclear age church structure (shown by cutaway) would allow worshippers to attend services safely in the underground portion during atomic attacks. At other times the subterranean part could be used for Sunday school classes, while services are held above ground. The church was conceived by Cornell University's College of Architecture. RNS set by the requirements of a basketball court!

This 300-member multipurpose church has ceiling hooks from which hang 12-by-4½-foot felt banners made by the church women. The idea of the red, blue, green, black, and yellow hangings came from European cathedrals. But instead of remaining stationary, these banners are moved about to suggest different atmospheres, or feelings. For a church wedding the banners chosen might include one with a marriage symbol plus one depicting the occupation of the bride or groom. The banners take the place of costly stained glass, and they, along with the roll-up carpet, help to control the acoustics of the room.

These multipurpose churches reflect the thoughts of a growing number of persons who believe that congregations should not put extra money into churches, per se, as long as urban problems are critical.

Some say this trend means that worship is no longer so much a matter of personal devotion as it is an expression of Christian community by the whole congregation.

On the other hand, we're told that the desire of many people for smaller churches implies a longing for a more intimate worship experience.

How do you feel about that?

Fourth Question: SHOULD WE BUILD TO REBUILD IN 20 YEARS?

I asked Mr. Arthur Stauder, of A. F. & Arthur Stauder, Architects, what he thought of the newest idea of building a church to last perhaps 20 years at the most and then tearing it down and rebuilding to fit the newer generation.

"The time of building a cathedral on every neighborhood corner is a thing of the past," he said. "A church structure can be too permanent. . . .

"It is becoming more difficult to get the money necessary to construct the marbled and gilded churches of the past."

Perhaps one answer lies in the instant—as in coffee—church. Don't laugh. A division of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company recently sold an inflatable plastic fabric church to an Assemblies of God group. This huge bag is inflated and ventilated by three squirrel-cage blowers, and it takes 30 minutes for the huge bag to deflate. It is made of nylon-reinforced vinyl equipped with gold and white plastic panels designed like stained glass windows. It costs $40,000 and seats 3,500 persons.

Would it bother you to worship in an instant church?

I'm told that the architecture of a church can affect its users. Mr. Burks feels that the interior design is especially important.

"Unless the worshipper feels the worshipful attitude," he said, "the church is a failure. . . ."

Tomorrow, if you are asked for your opinion on a proposed church building, what would you say? . . .

Now is the time to think on these trends. Or, someday, you might find yourself driving up to your own new church and muttering, "It looks funny, it's the wrong size, it doesn't function well, and it cost too much money."

Lutheran News Briefs

The Board of Trustees of Hartwick College, Oneonta, N.Y., voted unanimously to officially disassociate the college from all formal connection with the Lutheran Church in America.

While expressing its gratitude for the moral and financial support provided in the past by the Lutheran Church, Hartwick's board of trustees noted that to exist as a small private college today requires the kind of excellence of facilities and faculty demanding large sums of money only available to it from New York state sources.

The Upper New York and Metropolitan New York Synods of the LCA have provided $72,000 per year in support for Hartwick, while state help of over $900,000 annually is available to the school as a non-sectarian institution. The college has an enrollment of more than 1,550 students.

• Some of the damage being done by warfare in South Vietnam can be repaired if the idealistic youth who object to fighting there will volunteer their services in rehabilitation work.

This proposal was offered by Abner B. Batalden, a layman of The American Lutheran Church, who returned here recently after serving two years as director of business administration for Vietnam Christian Service.

What is needed, according to Mr. Batalden, is person to person service "which our youth should be challenged to offer." Mechanics, drivers, farmers, builders, teachers—all abilities which countless American youth possess—are needed.

Numerous volunteer agencies are engaged in rehabilitation work in Vietnam. Among them is Lutheran World Relief, which is expected to provide $135,000 toward an $800,000 budget of work being undertaken by Vietnam Christian Service in 1969.

• Lutheran World Relief has allocated $200,000 for emergency programs among victims of the Nigeria-Biafra conflict. Directors of the LWR acted on the Nigeria-Biafra allocation after reviewing the responses of supporting churches to a resolution adopted at their last meeting. The resolution called upon the churches for "substantial amounts" to begin a two-year program of relief and rehabilitation in that region.

Part of the $200,000 grant will be used toward a medical-relief team composed of a doctor, three nurses, an administrator for material aid, and a mechanic-maintenance man. The team will serve under the International Committee of the Red Cross.

• Admission of children to their first communion at the age of 9 or 10, followed by confirmation five years later, is recommended to Lutheran churches in the United States in a proposal radically changing practices which have been followed for centuries.

Formal findings of a four-year study by a 15-member Joint Commission on the Theology and Practice of Confirmation, representing the nation's three major Lutheran bodies, were mailed to 17,000 local congregations for study and discussion among their members.

A new rite is proposed that would admit children at the fifth grade level, age 9 or 10, to participation in the Sacrament of Holy Communion.

Confirmation, it is further suggested, would take place in the 10th grade, age 15 or 16, preceded by three years of weekly instruction in Christian education in the previous three grades, seventh, eighth and ninth.

• Of ten Lutherans serving in the U.S. House of Representatives, nine were returned to office in the nation-wide elections on November 5. All are Republicans. The lone Democrat did not seek re-election.

Two Lutherans were among the comparative handful of newcomers elected to the House.

In the Senate, only two of the three seats held by Lutherans were at stake, with the incumbents winning both. All three Lutheran Senators are Democrats.

• Israeli military authorities have started to build, what is said to be temporary headquarters for the military government, on land in Jerusalem that is owned by the Lutheran World Federation. The structure would rise on a site in front of the Augusta Victoria Hospital on the Mount of Olives. The hospital is owned by the LWF and has been used to care for Arab refugees by special arrangements with the United Nations since the end of the Palestine conflict in 1948.

During the brief Arab-Israeli war in May 1967, the 177-bed hospital was severely damaged by Israeli artillery fire. Damages were estimated at $250,000 to $400,000. Token reimbursement of $25,000 was offered by the Mayor of Jerusalem.

The site served as a British camp from the 1930s until the Palestine mandate ended in 1948, and was a Jordanian encampment after that, the Israelis say. They do not contest the fact that the land is Lutheran-owned, but they say they have the right to use it because it had been used by the Jordanian Army.

• The Lutheran Human Relations Association of America expressed regret that the Kerner Report has been "virtually ignored" by the President and the Congress and asked President Nixon to "revive" it.

An editorial in the association's publication, Vanguard, declared that government leaders' lack of responsiveness to the report indicates that citizens must show government that they care.

The report, officially called The Report of the National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders, made extensive proposals in the areas of housing, job opportunity, education and civil rights.

William Ellis, a New York attorney who is president of the Lutheran human relations agency, said, "There is so much in that report that comes to grips with the root factors of our nation's racial crisis that it deserves a careful and responsible hearing.

"Christians who care about their neighbors and who care about their nation have an opportunity here to help their government to faithful and just performance."

Vanguard urged citizens to indicate their concern by writing to Mr. Nixon about reviving government attention to the report.

GIRL OF THE MONTH

Linda Emde, our Lutheran Girl of the Month for March, quite obviously possesses great beauty. And her beauty is more than skin deep. These rare personal qualities were responsible for making her a unique choice for this column as well as the honor her fellow students bestowed on her last fall when she was crowned Homecoming Queen at Concordia Teachers College, River Forest, Ill. What makes her so unique? Linda Emde is Mrs. Edward Emde. (Sorry, fellas.)

It was the first time in the history of Concordia Teachers College that a married student was chosen for this honor.

Linda is a senior at Concordia, a college owned and operated by The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod for the preparation of teachers for its elementary and secondary schools throughout the United States. The Missouri Synod maintains the largest Protestant parochial school system in the country.

Last spring Linda served as a student teacher at St. Paul Lutheran School in Aurora, Ill., her home town.

At Concordia Linda will receive her degree in education with an interest sequence in sociology.

When the Vietcong ambushed the platoon, the men were ordered to withdraw. SP4 WILLIAM G. CARPENTER decided otherwise and returned to help the survivors of the ambush who lay ahead of him in jungle about 50 feet away. He had dragged back a critically wounded sergeant when seven slugs from automatic rifles hit him. That was over two years ago. On December 1968, Carpenter, a member of Holy Trinity Church, Lebanon, Pa., was awarded the Silver Star for bravery during that action. Present at the ceremonies were his wife, Denyse, and his mother, Mrs. Arthur Carpenter. Col. Bernie D. Johnson, garrison commander at Indiantown Gap Military Reservation, presented the award.

SP5 RICK HAMILTON recently left Vietnam where he was stationed at Long Binh, working in Professional Services Division, Office of the Surgeon. Hamilton is a member of Our Savior, Miami, Fla.

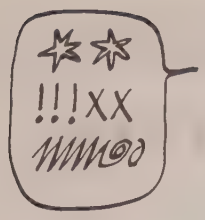
The Cross nobody wants to carry →

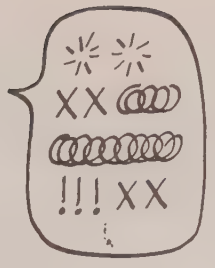
"If anyone wants to follow in my footsteps he must give up all right to himself, take up his cross and follow me."
Matt. 16:24

Give me a pretty cross I can wear around my neck for people to admire.



I'll carry a cross that can be conveniently put in my pocket so no one can see it.

Carry a cross? Me? It will get in my way. But maybe I'll consider something light.



This is a cross that nobody wants to carry. It symbolizes many of the crucifying events occurring today: riots, war, brutality, dope, death, and suffering. It's a heavy cross and clumsy. One needs strength to carry it and courage to handle it, for the barbed wire and chains, the shells and the guns, the hypo needles and the switch-blades are all very real. The cross also has gauze, the symbol whereby wounds of humanity may be bound by the healing love and concern of Christ.

Chaplain Oscar L. Sylwester of the Air Force Chaplain School, Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala., designed and built the cross for a chancel drama that he produced and directed. The drama, entitled "The Challenge of the Cross," has been presented at youth camps, worship services in Montgomery, and many times during Chaplain Sylwester's tour in Alaska.

What Did You Say?

An entertainment celebrity recently was arrested while going through British customs. The well-known star—a woman, incidentally—was charged with using obscene language during an argument with customs agents.

Many people in today's sophisticated world probably were amazed to learn that someone could still be arrested for mouthing profanity. A few choice blue words are a way of life—and not only in the barracks.

The television viewer who watches the late evening talk shows is familiar with the short spasms of silence on the soundtrack during a conversation—the "blips" where a censor has taken out unacceptable words. Johnny Carson delights in poking fun at the "little old lady with the scissors" who censors his show.

Meanwhile there has been a noticeable increase in the number of swear words sprinkled through motion pictures. Advertising, too, has been making use of the double entendre, to the discomfort of the publishers and television networks who bring these appeals into American homes. Perhaps the most sensational use of four (and more)-letter words comes in underground newspapers—and aboveground novels.

Standards appear to be shifting, both in personal conduct and public communication.

Chances are you were well aware of that fact before you donned a uniform. Off-color language is common on the campus, along the assembly line, and at the business luncheon.

However, you may find your vocabulary expanded by a lusty-throated sergeant. The quantity and quality of these expressions stored by some individuals are surprising. There are those guys who can't speak a simple sentence without a couple of words that Johnny Carson's "little old lady" would "blip" out.

It's an easy habit to acquire. No conscious effort. After awhile the words just roll off your tongue naturally. Suddenly you're a veteran.

And it's true. The language is used quite indiscriminately with friend and foe alike. You have to read the intonation to get the real meaning. The words may say, "Hey, you dirty - - - - !" But what they mean is, "Hi, buddy!"

Still is that sufficient reason to slip into a habit that really accomplishes no end other than to type the user?

About this time you're ready to say, "Okay, I know. This is just another way of getting around to telling me that the church says cursing is a 'no-no.' "

But there are enough no-no's in life. Let's try a yes-yes.

Like, "Love the Lord your God with all your heart and your neighbor as yourself." Isn't that what Christianity is all about? And, consequently, isn't that what life is all about?

If you're willing to buy that premise, it says something about language. It calls for words that honor God and don't drag Him to the gutter.

It calls for conversation that respects others as persons whom God has created and redeemed—people just like you.

It calls for a style of talking and doing that reflects a man who really is a man—a man who dares to be different when he's right.

It's a way of saying yes to the new life in Christ.

And not just a no-no.

God Is Not Dead

The Rev. Robert E. Grochau of Baltimore, Md., received some theological information from one of his members, stationed in Europe. "God is not dead. He got drafted," wrote the G.I. The source of his information? "My chaplain told me that," he concluded.

2 Lutherans On USS Pueblo

Two Lutherans were among the captured crew of the USS Pueblo, according to information received by the Division of Service to Military Personnel of the Lutheran Council in the USA.

Signalman 1st Class Wendell Gene Leach of Houston, Tex., and Communications Technician David Lee Ritter, of Union City, Calif., were interviewed recently in Coronado, Calif., by Navy Chaplain Carl W. Erickson.

Chaplain Erickson is currently assigned to the Navy Amphibious Base at Coronado where the crew of the Pueblo is billeted.

He reported to the Council's Washington based DSMP executives that CT Ritter joined St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Northridge, Calif., so that he could help establish this new mission congregation and attends there whenever his ship is berthed nearby. Ritter also serves occasionally as a lector at St. Paul's.

SM Leach is a graduate of Bethany Lutheran Parochial school in Houston. In February he was called to testify before the Naval court of inquiry into the capture of the USS Pueblo by North Koreans.

In their talks with Chaplain Erickson, Leach said that in general he was treated fairly well by the North Koreans during his 11-month imprisonment.

CT Ritter, however, related an incident in which both he and his cell mate were beaten by their prison guards. They had found a stone and had carved the Cross on it. The guard discovered it and gave the two prisoners a rough going over.

Ritter told Chaplain Erickson that a North Korean officer later came to apologize for the beatings. But he also warned them that carving a stone Cross was a silly thing for them to do and ordered them not to do it again.

In his report, Chaplain Erickson also related that both Lutheran members of the Pueblo crew seemed to be in good health at the time of his interview with them.

A MIGHTY FORTRESS is published monthly for men and women in the U.S. Armed Forces in behalf of the 17,750 Lutheran congregations participating in the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A. by the Division of Service to Military Personnel, 2633 16th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009. Address all correspondence to A MIGHTY FORTRESS, 315 Park Ave., S., New York, N.Y. 10010. Herb W. David, Editor. Carolyn M. Wittack, Associate Editor. Printed in U.S.A.

LUTHERAN CONTACT PASTORS, ACTIVE DUTY CHAPLAINS AND SERVICE CENTERS

APRIL, 1969

Military personnel are invited to contact these pastors, chaplains and centers. Home church pastors of the ALC and LCA are encouraged to send the names and addresses of their members in military service to them. LCMS and SELC home church pastors should send the names and addresses directly to the Armed Forces Commission of the LCMS which will forward them to the appropriate chaplain or contact pastor.

APO and FPO addresses for the ALC and LCA may be referred to the Division of Service to Military Personnel. For the LCMS they should be sent to the Armed Forces Commission.

Churches are indicated as follows:

ALC, American Lutheran Church;
LCA, Lutheran Church In America;
LCMS, The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod;
SELC, Synod of Evangelical Church.

Lutheran

GIRL OF THE MONTH

Barbara Ott, a member of Faith Lutheran Church, Oxford, O., was recommended "most heartily" by the Rev. John A. McGuigan, who states: "Her main qualification . . . is as an effective witness of the church in the world, and especially on the university campus."

Barbara's list of impressive achievements include the following:

In high school she received a National Merit Letter of Commendation and graduated third in her class. At Ohio Wesleyan University, she was an OWU Achievement Scholar and became a University Scholar with a 3.5 grade point average. Barbara was a member of the honorary Phi Society and a varsity cheerleader.

Last spring she was graduated from Miami University where she was a member of Mortar Board, the senior women's leadership-scholarship-service honorary.

A remarkable record for a remarkable young Lutheran woman.

Air Force Cross Given To Pararescueman

Sgt. Thomas A. Newman, who survived the harrowing experience of hanging upside down 80 feet in the air during the recovery of an injured pilot in Southeast Asia, has received the highest U.S. Air Force award for heroism in combat.

The 22-year-old pararescueman was presented the Air Force Cross for his action in a May 30, 1968, mission. As a crewman aboard an HH-3 Jolly Green Giant helicopter, Newman volunteered to be lowered to the ground in the growing darkness to search for the flier who had been forced to eject and who had landed within range of several enemy anti-aircraft weapons.

After finding the airman, the two men became the target of enemy fire and the object of a cautious search through the brush.

When the enemy search ended, Sgt. Newman called in the rescue helicopter which lowered a jungle penetrating device. As he turned to assist the pilot, who had suffered a broken arm, Sgt. Newman momentarily lost the hoisting device in the darkness. When he recovered it, there was an excess of cable on the ground.

Unaware that his foot tangled in the line, he radioed for the slack to be taken up and at the same time set off a chain of reactions. The cable jerked upward, snatching the sergeant off his feet. He dropped his weapon and his radio dangled from his vest strap. He was rapidly pulled up through the trees, feet first.

Sgt. Newman finally managed to retrieve the radio but he was suspended 80 feet in mid-air by the time he contacted his airborne crew. As he was lowered through the trees, branches caught and loosened the cable around his ankle and he fell the remaining 20 feet to the ground.

Newman quickly recovered, secured the pilot to the penetrator and, as they were reeled aboard, protected the flier with his own body in the midst of ground fire.

Sgt. Newman, his two sisters and a brother attended Sunday school and were confirmed at Parkside Evangelical Lutheran Church, Milwaukee, Wis.

Chaplain Donald J. Ostroot and Mrs. Linda Buhaug look on as Major General Byron L. Steger presents SP4 James Buhaug with the Bronze Star and Purple Heart medals. Buhaug is a member of Trinity Church, Moorhead, Minn.

A Cross We Must Carry—

The thrust of the drama is that the call of Christ is given to "take up the Cross and follow me." Seven people from the audience respond to this call. They come to the altar where seven crosses of different size, shape, and appearance are placed. They select the cross they want to carry, giving the varied reasons people give today. Some want a cross that is easy to carry, another wants a cross that people will admire, others want a cross that people won't notice.

At the end there is one cross remaining that they have all carefully avoided selecting—it is the cross nobody wants to carry.

What is your reaction to the call to "take up the cross" and follow Him? Can you carry this kind of cross?

The joy of Christ's victory over the cross and grave is celebrated again this Easter. It is this love of Christ and His promise of eternal life that gives us the strength to carry this heavy burden.

If the agonies of life are to be resolved, we must all share in the burden of this cross. We must all be peacemakers, feed the hungry, heal the sick, give comfort to those who sorrow.

If we do not all carry this cross, the celebration of Christ's victory over suffering and death will be a hollow sounding hallelujah.

He is risen!

Let us take up our crosses and follow Him!

Jaycees Name Chaplain One Of Ten Outstanding Men

Navy Chaplain Raymond W. Johnson was recently named one of America's Ten Outstanding Young Men for 1968 by the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce. Ceremonies honoring Chaplain Johnson and nine others were held at the 31st annual TOYM Congress hosted by the Syracuse Jaycees the weekend of January 16 through 18. The winners received a trophy of the extended hand of man reaching out to the hand of his creator.

Chaplain Johnson served in Vietnam from January 1967 to January 1968 with Commander River Assault Flotilla ONE/ Commander River Support Squadron SEVEN. As a result of his participation in all major operations of his unit, and for his valor and heroism, he was awarded two Purple Hearts, the Legion of Merit with Valor, the Silver Star and was recommended for the Navy Cross.

Jaycee President Wendell E. Smith said of him, "His distinguished record in Vietnam is indicative of the true courage and devotion with Chaplain Johnson has displayed in all his endeavors . . . Chaplain Johnson's medical assistance to the Vietnamese people and his deep concern for their welfare has truly exemplified the humanitarian spirit. His part in the rescue of a hamlet under fire, which resulted in injuries to himself, displays genuine concern for all peoples, with no thought being given to his own safety."

Letters written to his wife, Charlene, and their three children, during his Vietnam tour of duty have been published as a book by Johnson. The publication, "Postmark: Mekong Delta," describes narratively the experience of a minister in combat, soothing the fear and pain of men struck down in battle.

Others who were honored by the Jaycee award include Arthur Ashe, Jr., one of the world's leading tennis players; Jim Ryun, an outstanding runner who has captured numerous track and field honors including the world's mile title, and Bart Starr, the valuable quarterback of the Green Bay Packers.

sex and the single soldier

By JOHN STEVENS KERR

The military has a lot that bugs you, but the buggiest bug of all is being away from home. You discover this when, in a mood of homesickness, Mom and Dad suddenly seem like the most precious people in the world. That is a kind of feeling you probably never figured you would have, when you were in high school and griping about all the restrictions they placed on you.

Another thing you miss when you are away from home is girls. Girls are everywhere, of course, but it takes a little time to get acquainted, to jockey around so that you can move after the girl you want. Back home, you knew the score. You had the names, the contacts, the places to go. You knew the rules of the girl game.

Now you are stuck on some base hundreds, maybe thousands of miles from home—and from the girl game you understood so well. How is the game played where you are now? How do you make contact, get to know a girl? A guy aches sometimes with loneliness, a kind of ache that only a soft lip, a smooth hand, a warm body can ease.

You want a woman, man—and that's the way God put you together, and it isn't such a bad way. But it's a tough gig. Any female types the military allows near the base may be strictly off limits. And in a lot of towns you leave your uniforms in your locker, don your civvies when you go to town, because the local girls won't have anything to do with servicemen. And then there is that overseas bit. It is tough to cut another culture to meet girls, except those who have a price.

So you have a real hang-up. Your juices boil, and the crazy system makes it nearly impossible to get any release. Except for dreams.

So, why fight it? Why not grab what you can, where you can, for whatever you can afford or can find for free? After all, the Sunday school teacher is back home, and the chaplain who gives the character guidance lectures goes home at night to a wife, not to a barracks.

PLAYING GAMES

The guys in your barracks come back from a pass with big stories of the chicks they had. Probably some did, but there are some things that men lie about, and this is one of them. I watched a sailor in San Diego spend a night on the town. He went to a movie, then walked down Broadway looking at the pornie books in the seedy shops, dropped into a bar on Fifth and B, had one of the girls make a pass at him before he got tossed out for being under age, walked some more, and went back to his ship at 2 a.m.

I heard later that he told his friends all about the great time he had with a pick-up.

It is all part of a game called "I'm-a-big-man-and-I-can-prove-it."

The whole sex business can be summed up in one word: integrity. The Christian faith affirms that sex is for people who care about each other as persons, who are not just using each other for personal satisfaction. Sex isn't the first thing between people; it comes after personal relationships—a deep and meaningful concern for each other—have been established. It is beautiful because it grows out of beautiful feelings for each other.

Ten minutes with a hustler in Tijuana isn't beautiful. It's ugly. And you know it when you leave and want to be sick. Not that sex itself is ugly, but anything done this way is ugly.

Ugliness gets to you, inside. There is enough around already without looking—or paying—for it.

Integrity means you decide to skip ugliness. Not like a very moral prude, not like a judge who is so pure he looks down on others. You skip ugliness because you want to hang on to the beautiful. Because you are you and that's the way you want to be. Because you respect both the girl and yourself as persons, human beings, created by God in His own image. And that's beautiful.

In the final analysis, then, whether you "do" or "don't" is your own decision. If anyone but you makes the decision, or if you let someone make it for you, you've sold out something important of yourself.

When you think about having a girl, remember the integrity bit. A relationship with a girl has to be real. And if you have to wait a while before you can have a real relationship, it's worth waiting for. Some bad tastes are hard to get out of your mouth.

Take any opportunities around to be with girls, like the USO, or Lutheran Service Centers, or any place you can figure to get in their company. This kills some of the emptiness. If you have a chance to meet the right girl, date her. And if you don't—well, that's up to you. Just don't taste sex in ugliness. It is too precious for that, and so are you.

You're on your own in the military. If you are old enough to get shot at, you are old enough to make your own decisions. And this decision is up to you. Just remember that man is measured by more than the number of women he has had—a hell (or heaven) of a lot more.

Medal of Honor Winner

Dwight H. Johnson of Faith Memorial Lutheran Church in Detroit is one of the few Lutheran men to win the Congressional Medal of Honor, and is the only soldier from Michigan to receive this honor in the Vietnam War. Johnson, 21, is the 10th Negro to receive the nation's highest military award since 1863, when the medal was authorized by Congress.

Johnson's valor near Dak To saved many members of his otherwise all-white platoon, and bought time until help arrived to rescue the men, ambushed by a battalion of North Vietnamese regulars. After the Army tank he was driving was disabled Johnson single-handedly attacked several enemy positions according to his citation. In between fighting, he rescued a wounded comrade under fire and carried him to safety.

When Johnson returned to Detroit recently, he was assured by federal officials that his dearest wish may be realized—that his mother and step-father be reunited after 12 years of enforced separation. The officials said there is virtually "a green light" for the return to this country of Mrs. Alves' Jamaica-born husband, Brenton Alves, 51, who was forced to leave the United States 12 years ago by immigration authorities. Johnson was surprised by the speed with which federal authorities acted in his behalf.

Mrs. Alves is a nursing assistant in the psychiatric department of the Ann Arbor Veterans Hospital and her son, now discharged from the Army, is a lineman for Michigan Bell Telephone Co. He hopes to go on to college and become a computer programmer.

At Faith Memorial Church, Dwight used to be an usher and also sang in the choir. "Dwight was the only member of our small church to go into the service," said the Rev. Carl H. Hort, pastor of the church. Faith Memorial Church, just two miles from downtown Detroit, has 50 communicants of whom 20 are teenagers.

The Kids Had Never Seen Soap

By Alta Marty

"I stood at the hospital door with the dying baby in my arms and argued with the young doctor who said his hospital was full and couldn't take the casualties I'd brought in. Normally, all our aid stations will accept and treat wounded VC prisoners and refugees. I lost my temper and ordered him to treat them or I'd report him to the U.S. authorities for refusing to accept medical emergencies. This plus the fact that most of his supplies came from our warehouse, changed his mind and he took the child from me saying that he thought the baby was beyond help.

"That night I couldn't sleep. I lay awake wondering what happens to the children when both parents are killed? When I did doze, I awakened wet with sweat because the baby in my arms was my own little Beth Ann."

So wrote CWO Morris L. Marty in a letter home. Morris was a helicopter pilot in Medi-vacs stationed at Chu Lai, Vietnam, with the 176th Aviation Co. Because he had four children of his own back home, his heart was touched by the needs of the dirty, starving waifs whom he saw roaming the village streets and searching the army garbage dumps for food.

Marty, a member of Perry Lutheran Church, Mt. Horeb, Wis., made it a point to visit the orphanages of the area, mostly run by Catholics and Buddhists, to see how these victims of war were cared for. He offered to assist the Protestant chaplain in serving one of the few Protestant orphanages in Vietnam, about a mile from camp.

"The children need clothes badly and there is much that can be done here because it is close to base," Marty reported in another letter. "We call it 'our orphanage' because we are the only unit which supports them and we contribute from $400 to $500 a month. Donations are not mandatory. We give because we want to help. We support 66 children. Our hope is to make them self-sufficient so that when we leave they can still carry on.

"The orphanage consists of a small chapel and six other buildings put together from scrap lumber and packing crate plywood. Our chaplain and our doctor worked together on a hygiene program. The kids had never seen soap, toothbrushes, or toothpaste before. It isn't easy to teach the what and why of hygiene to people who have never heard of it.

"We built a shower for our kids by putting two 50-gallon drums on a platform. I was elected to demonstrate its use, and also the use of soap. Two little guys and I stripped off our clothes and stepped into the shower. I lathered myself from top to toe and helped lather the giggling, wiggling boys. They had a ball until one of them let out a howl that could be heard a mile away. He'd gotten soap in his eyes. There was nothing to do but rub some in my eyes, then throw back my head, hold my eye open, and let the water wash the soap out. In a few minutes he was laughing again."

About the time CWO Marty wrote the above, he sent a similar letter to his pastor, the Rev. H. L. Anderson, telling of the need for clothing for the children. The Perry Ladies Aid went into action and in a few days 90 pounds of clothing arrived at his base at Chu Lai.

The clothes were presented on a Sunday so there could be a celebration. "There is so little to celebrate over here," Marty commented, "that anything special they make into a festive occasion." Relatives and friends were invited in for the day. The servicemen bought and donated a pedal sewing machine to go with the clothing.

Marty was chosen to speak at the gathering. Through an interpreter he explained that the Americans wanted to share what they had "because we love them as fellowmen and brothers." It was a gala day.

Afterward he wrote home: 'I'm overwhelmed to think that my church back home responded like this. America is the greatest country in the world!"

"We have any number of spiritual directors available here, Walter. I'm really curious why you felt you had to write to Ann Landers."

Lutheran Directs Women Marines

Col. Jeanette I. Sustad of Tacoma, Wash., took over the top distaff post in the Marine Corps in February. She succeeds Col. Barbara Bishop as the sixth director of the lady Marines. Before Miss Sustad was selected head of the Women Marines, she served as its first full-time deputy director.

Miss Sustad joined the Corps in 1943, ten months after the Women's Reserve program was announced. When the Women's Armed Services Integration Act was passed in 1948, she accepted a regular commission as a Marine first lieutenant.

During her pre-military life in Tacoma, Miss Sustad was confirmed and became a member of First Norwegian Lutheran, renamed Gloria Dei after merging with another Lutheran congregation.

A VOLUNTEER ARMY

A MIGHTY FORTRESS

Vol. XIX New York, N.Y. June 1969 No. 2

Yes — Senator George McGovern

For several years I have had a growing conviction that our present military draft is an unsatisfactory, unfair and wasteful system of recruiting manpower for the armed services. I am convinced that compulsory conscription should be replaced with a voluntary system. If we paid our servicemen properly, it would be possible to secure enough career men without the draft. In the long run, this would be less costly and more democratic.

As matters now stand, millions of American youth are uncertain about their future because of the draft. Many of them are deferred as students while others are sent to Vietnam within a few months of high school graduation. Those who are called frequently regard it as unfair, while those who are deferred are often bothered by feelings of guilt or doubt.

A voluntary system would end these problems. But beyond that I believe it would give us a more efficient military force. Under the present system most draftees leave the service as soon as possible. This makes for a constant turnover of men and an enormous outlay of manpower, resources and money devoted to the training of new recruits.

By paying servicemen a wage comparable to civilian standards, the armed services could recruit career men who would continue in service for twenty or thirty years after their training period. This would give the Nation an experienced defense force consisting of voluntarily motivated men. It would greatly reduce the expense of constantly training huge numbers of raw recruits, thus offsetting the cost of higher career service wages and benefits. In times of national emergency it might be necessary to supplement the voluntary career system with a backup lottery under which additional men could be called without favoritism or discrimination.

A voluntary system not only would be more effective, but more in keeping with the traditions of America. Many of our forefathers came to the United States to escape compulsory military systems in Europe. The draft departs from our democratic tradition and falls especially on the poor family unable to finance a col-

During the 1968 election campaign, President Nixon indicated he favored a voluntary military system.

We are grateful to Senator George McGovern (D., South Dakota) for allowing us to reprint a report to his constituency of his views on a volunteer army.

Senator Philip A. Hart (D., Michigan) presented his views on a volunteer army in an address to the Senate on March 4, 1969. In his speech he introduced a bill (S. 1296) to amend the Military Service Act of 1967. The complete text of his address is available in Vol. 115, No. 38, of the Congressional Record.

Your reaction to this subject is invited.

No — Senator Philip A. Hart

President Nixon has proposed elimination of the draft and the building of a volunteer army "once our involvement in the Vietnam war is behind us."

What are the drawbacks of a voluntary army? No matter how desirable a volunteer military, the question of feasibility still persists. . . . Draft abolitionists must prove also that a selective system is unnecessary and establish that substitution of a volunteer army would be an improvement. In the short run, even assuming an end to hostilities in Vietnam, I suggest volunteer army proponents will have difficulty proving our military unnecessary in the light of world conditions.

Over the long run, the concept of a volunteer army raises serious issues and questions.

First, given the high rate of black military reenlistments, the volunteer army could become essentially an army of minorities, particularly Negroes. Because of educational advantages, the officer component of such a service would be primarily white. The black enlisted man inclines to make the military service a career because it makes economic sense. While an increasing number of black Americans will come along who meet the educational level for officer, it will make much less economic sense for them to become career officers. Does America at a point in time wish to have enlisted forces made up primarily of blacks and an officer corps made up primarily of white Americans?

Second, where in fact would our officer corps come from? Presently, the military looks to our colleges to provide between 80 and 90 percent of the junior officer corps. Under a volunteer army system, there would be no pressure for a college man to join an officer program to meet his military obligation. It is thus questionable whether or not the necessary numbers and quality of junior officers could be provided.

Third, would a volunteer army not also present a very inflexible military force? Would the Nation be able to meet emergency military obligations with an all volunteer army?

Fourth, do we wish to build a Mili-

lege education with its resulting deferment.

I voted against the last extension of the draft because the committee handling the legislation ignored all of the Marshall Commission's recommendations for improving the system—as well as the proposals made by some of us on the Senate floor. I intend to continue my efforts until a majority of the Congress can be persuaded to the common sense of a voluntary system.

NO—Senator Hart

tary Establishment that would on the one hand become a permanent part of our society yet, on the other hand, become rather isolated from that society? Of necessity, the soldier is usually isolated from the vital social struggles of the day: strikes, sit-ins, poverty, urban unrest, and peace movements. Often his only contact with these disturbing elements is as an adversary trying to maintain "law and order"—or as the parent of one who is involved.

Fifth, the cost of an all volunteer military force could present a real problem. Defense Department estimates range from $4 to $20 billion a year. In an October 17 campaign speech, Mr. Nixon estimated that a volunteer army would cost $5 to $7 billion more a year than the present draft system.

Sixth, although our present Selective Service System is in urgent need of reform, the military draft has been the single most democratizing factor in the Armed Forces. The constant movement in and out of the military of citizen soldiers brings to the Army a broad cross-section of American society.

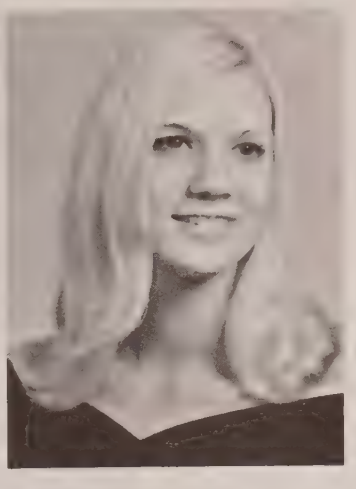
DSMP Offers Free Booklet

A clever and bright little booklet about the problems and surprises that a man encounters during his first few weeks and months in the armed forces is being offered free of charge by the Division of Service to Military Personnel of the Lutheran Council in the USA.



If military life is new to you, or if you have a friend who is just entering the service, this booklet entitled "About Face," answers many questions and gives some down-to-earth advice on many things; from what to do with your car while you are away to "Babes and Booze."

"About Face" was written by Herb W. David, secretary for publications of the Lutheran Council, and a former serviceman. The advice he gives is realistic and often wry. Best of all, the booklet is light and easy reading with humor and clever drawings throughout.

The price-tag can't be beat. For your free copy, send your request for "About Face" along with your name and address to: Division of Service to Military Personnel, Lutheran Council in the USA, 2633 16th Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009.

GIRL OF THE MONTH

Linda Jean Reiss has a golden voice to match her golden hair. After graduation from high school this spring, Linda will continue her education at Valparaiso (Ind.) University where she will major in music with emphasis on her special talent—singing.

Linda is an honor student who particularly enjoys participating in the high school chorus and a special group called The Madrigals.

The church and the military play important parts in the lives of the Reiss family. Linda's father is a former Army chaplain and her brother, David, is a captain in the Army who recently returned from his second tour of duty in Vietnam.

Linda is a member of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Falls Church, Va.

"Chaplain, our Ladies' Guild thought your boys might like a little entertainment. . . ."

Vatican Envoy Opposed

Establishment of diplomatic ties with the Vatican "is still under study," President Richard M. Nixon disclosed in a nationally-televised press conference from the nation's capital on March 4.

The President's statement was made as Protestant objections were mounting to his possible appointment of a special ambassador or personal representative to the Vatican.

In a telegram to the White House, the Lutheran Council in the USA asserted that "we want to register in the strongest terms our opposition to any such representation."

Similar expressions of disapproval were issued individually by the presidents of the three major Lutheran bodies that are associated in the cooperative agency.

The three are Dr. Robert J. Marshall of the Lutheran Church in America, Dr. Oliver R. Harms of The Lutheran Church —Missouri Synod, and Dr. Fredrik A. Schiotz of The American Lutheran Church.

The Lutheran Council's telegram, signed by its general secretary, Dr. C. Thomas Spitz, Jr., stressed that the participating bodies of the Council "have historically and consistently protested all formal relationships between our government and the Vatican."

"They have cited the constitutional separation of church and state, the unfair and unnecessary representation to only one segment of that Christian faith, and the major difficulties of image and understanding which are imposed upon the mission and service of the church when our government deals with even one church institution as a temporal power," the telegram said.

"Today they would add to these concerns their judgment that formal United States representation to the Vatican will seriously damage and impede the ecumenical conversations and relationship which have been developing in recent years."

President Franklin Delano Roosevelt named Myron C. Taylor, an Episcopalian, as his "personal representative" to the Vatican in 1939. Mr. Taylor continued that post under President Harry S. Truman until he resigned in 1950. President Truman nominated General Mark W. Clark as full-ranking ambassador to the Vatican in the fall of the following year. However, General Clark requested that his nomination to the post be withdrawn. He gave as one of his chief reasons that he did not believe Congress would vote on such a controversial issue in an election year. President Truman then announced that he intended to submit another name, but did not do so, possibly because of strong opposition from Protestants, including Lutherans.

When it was rumored that President Dwight D. Eisenhower was considering the appointment of a United States representative to the Vatican, Lutherans joined with other denominations to protest such a move. No representative was named during President Eisenhower's administration and the issue has been dormant until President Nixon brought it to life again.

Laird Defends Guidance Program

Dr. William J. Reiss, executive secretary of the Lutheran Council's Division of Service to Military Personnel, has written to Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird that "we note with gratitude your response in connection with the protest over references to the deity and spiritual values in the Army's character guidance lectures."

Mr. Laird had upheld the Army's present Character Guidance Program content in light of a protest from the American Civil Liberties Union that the program was being used for religious indoctrination. Dr. Reiss also noted that the A.C.L.U. was not objecting "to any and all references to God," but to using these terms for religious indoctrination.

Statements from both men came after the Army announced it would revise the lectures due to the A.C.L.U. protest.

UNDER ORDERS

Capt Gary L. Robenolt was presented with the Bronze Star Medal by Capt W. G. Normile. Capt Robenolt's efforts as a maintenance supervisor at Korat Royal Thai AFB, Thailand, enabled the squadron to fly the greatest number of combat sorties with the lowest abort rate. Robenolt is a member of Zion Lutheran Church, Harrisburg, Pa.

Navy Chaplain John F. Seibert received the Bronze Star Medal from Capt. Richard J. De Prez for his "meritorious service . . . in Vietnam." Chaplain Seibert was cited for helping with the wounded and continuing his spiritual ministry to the men even when he was wounded. He is currently serving at the Norfolk Naval Air Station.

1LT Richard A. Espeland, member of Augustana Lutheran Church, Grand Forks, N.D., was awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action while serving in Vietnam.

Capt. Robert H. Boles received the DFC for his achievement as an F-4C Phantom aircraft commander in Vietnam. Boles is a member of St. Stephan's, Lexington, S.C.

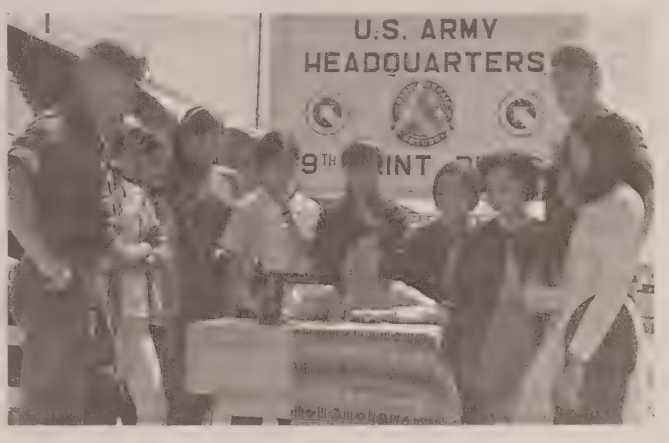
Mr. Beisel is now in Civil Service, working as Scientific Advisor of the US Army Medical Research Institute for Infectious Diseases.



Chaplain Richard Nybro, Brigade Chaplain of the 44th Medical Brigade, Vietnam, sent us this photo of The Contenders (shown with Brigadier General Spurgeon Neel, Jr.), a college group that toured the hospitals in Vietnam. He also sent us a copy of his newsletter to the 44th Medical Brigade chaplains and we gleaned some of these humorous comments: "General Neel . . . has some rather pertinent remarks occasionally upon the conclusion of our morning devotions in his office. One time he turned to his aide, LT Voss, after I had pronounced the benediction and said, 'Dan, it's Amen, not Roger that.'

"Another time we numbered exactly twelve in attendance and he said, 'The Lord had twelve disciples and now I am wondering which one of you is going to betray me.'

"Chaplain Rene Cuesnier at the 17th Field Hospital in An Khe has a name for his jeep . . . How does this strike you? SOC ET TUUM."

my country — right or wrong

In school we recited with enthusiasm and loudly Scott's verses:

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said,
This is my own, my native land!

If such there breathe, go, mark him well!

The wretch, concentred all in self,
Living shall forfeit fair renoun,
And, doubly dying, shall go down
To the vile dust from whence he sprung,
Unwept, unhonour'd, and unsung."
("Lay of the Last Minstrel")

And we believed every word of it.

Who could, or for that matter, who would dare feel other than love and complete loyalty at the thought of our native land, the United States of America! A complete wretch such a one would be, as Scott said, and just let us get our hands on that fellow!

The flag in the corner of the school room was touched with the utmost care and respect, and one of the high honors of the day was to hold it forth while we pledged our allegiance to it.

These teachings in school paralleled the guidance we received in home and church in reference to "The land of the free and the home of the brave." And thus my patriotism was based.

From those days of simple, unquestioning devotion to the land of my birth until now patriotism has become a free field for discussion. It is no longer a closed subject. Instead of the outraged, "To h--- with the Kaiser," which I heard regularly in 1918, I am hearing our current enemy hailed by youth as "Ho, ho, Ho Chi Minh!" The red, white and blue flag that I would not let touch the ground, and which had to be displayed in the correct position is frequently mutilated and scorned. I ask myself, "Have I changed, too, or is my patriotism the same brand that I adopted so gladly in the third grade?"

With Decatur, I can still say, "My country, may she always be in the right. But right or wrong, my country." The difference is that I can now bear to admit to myself that the United States may not always be in the right. And I think that I am a better patriot for being willing to face up to the truth.

For instance, I now know to my sorrow that this country is not just rocks and rills and templed hills—it is a composite of all of us who live in it. The "government" is not a magical institution that transforms all of the men elected to it into the noblest and best of God's creatures. No, the government is just as good or bad as the legislators and officials who make it up. Further, it is not necessarily "of the people, by the people, and for the people." It is of a political party, by classes and interests, and for the majority. This simply means that the government is as human as the rest of us, and needs examination and searching instead of uncritical acceptance.

For instance, I pay my taxes without protest even though I know that part of my money is going toward the war in Vietnam. I am not happy about that war, but I feel that I am bound up in the bundle of American life and cannot make myself an exception; I take my share in the paying for the sins of my era. However, if a fellow-citizen cannot bring himself to pay his taxes until the Vietnam trouble is over, I cannot set him down as lacking in patriotism.

One of the glories of our country is that a man is allowed the freedom of his own conscience, and the freedom of expression dictated by that conscience. The students and others who shout the praises of Ho Chi Minh could not go to North Vietnam and riot in the streets shouting, "We want Nixon, Nixon, Nixon." This is the fundamental difference that calls forth my loyalty and my taxes; even at her worst our country is infinitely better than any other land I know.

By way of illustration, I have been proud to note that my country is making the greatest material progress of any nation in the world. But then I find that in the midst of all of this affluence and rapid development, we have some millions who are close to starvation. As a patriot, I feel obliged to inquire why this is and ask what we are doing about it?

And when I contrast the liberty available in my country with that to be found in North Vietnam (as I have done), and stumble over the fact that my liberty is not fully shared by Black men, Puerto Ricans, Indians and others I am appalled. My patriotism demands that I do something about this.

All of these observations scare me more than a little. As a noisy, belligerant little patriot in my childhood my relationship to my country was simple indeed: revere the flag as I would my own mother, stand up for the Star Spangled Banner as I would for the Halleujah Chorus, cheer at every Memorial Day parade and save up my money to buy a small United States Savings Bond. In return for my faith, my country would never let me down—it would easily win any war that came our way!

But now the hard word responsibility goes with my patriotism. When I read of the flag being torn to shreds and burned in far-off lands my answer is not to yell for the dispatch of the Marines but to inquire why our country is hated to that point of violence. What have we done or failed to do that we are not respected as once we were? Am I part of this problem?

As for Memorial Day and Fourth of July parades, I find the gaiety a bit in contrast to the armed and uniformed men stepping along, rank on rank. Without shedding my patriotism, I know that now I give more thought to wondering why this nation and other nations (under God, mind you!) have more and more dead young men to memorialize year after year.

Since a patriot is one who loves his country I must be able to list for myself reasons for such a love or abandon patriotism entirely.

The real estate, of course, is most loveable. The "rocks and rills," mountains, plains, rivers, lakes, seashores are all that anyone could desire.

The free enterprise which is mine and which is a live potential for every native and immigrant makes life exciting and full of hope.

The religious tolerance that I observe growing among our people leads me to think that there is a solid core of good in our country that will withstand many cruel blows.

Indeed, I could go on enumerating hundreds of things and qualities that make my patriotism a sensible and lasting part of life.

And on the negative side, the unlovable aspects of my country?

These I see to be extraneous—outside the true character—of the United States. Barnacles and parasites have been drawn to this lovely and open-hearted land.

There is organized crime that manages to thrive because of the many laws that we have enacted to ensure a man's personal liberty and privacy.

Militarism is not dead, but the checks and balances of government are slowly beginning to reduce this overgrown structure to a more easily-controlled size.

Racism is a fact, but the consciences of my fellow-citizens of all colors are aroused and will not let the issue go until a fair solution is found.

Possibly the worst of the negative features of this country is the quick willingness of many to give up their patriotism in despair and believe the worst of the United States. This is not the kind of courage that the builders of this nation exhibited in their day.

If my country is going on to a great future it will be, I am convinced, because of its patriots—true patriots who are not blind to mistakes and colossal blunders, but who see the basic nobility of a land founded as this is founded.

Lutherans Receive Black Manifesto

James Forman, representing the National Black Economic Development Conference, brought that group's "Black Manifesto" to the headquarters in New York of the Lutheran Church in America May 6.

He fastened copies of the manifesto to the glass doors and later handed a sheath of papers to the Rev. Dr. Robert J. Marshall, president of the LCA, saying he "would be in touch."

The 11-page manifesto was a presentation Mr. Forman made in Detroit April 26 to the National Black Economic Development Conference. Addressed to "white Christian churches and the Jewish synagogues in the United States of America and all other racist institutions," it demands $500,000,000 in reparations to Negroes.

The statement addressed to the LCA read "we demand a minimum of $50,000,000 in direct reparation from The Lutheran Church to help meet our quota."

Mr. Forman's campaign gained wide press coverage when he read his demands at Riverside Church in New York during the 11 a.m. communion service on May 4. He has also met with most of the major Protestant church bodies, the Roman Catholic Church and Jewish leaders.

A MIGHTY FORTRESS is published monthly for men and women in the U.S. Armed Forces in behalf of the 17,750 Lutheran congregations participating in the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A. by the Division of Service to Military Personnel, 2633 16th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009. LUTHERAN CONTACT PASTORS, ACTIVE DUTY CHAPLAINS AND SERVICE CENTERS

JULY, 1969

Military personnel are invited to contact these pastors, chaplains and centers. Home church pastors of the ALC and LCA are encouraged to send the names and addresses of their members in military service to them. LCMS and SELC home church pastors should send the names and addresses directly to the Armed Forces Commission of the LCMS which will forward them to the appropriate chaplain or contact pastor.

APO and FPO addresses for the ALC and LCA may be referred to the Division of Service to Military Personnel. For the LCMS they should be sent to the Armed Forces Commission.

Churches are indicated as follows:
ALC, American Lutheran Church;
LCA, Lutheran Church In America;
LCMS, The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod;
SELC, Synod of Evangelical Church.

Senator Sees It – Then Tells It

By LAMBERT F. BROSE

A Lutheran Senator from South Carolina recently testified before a select committee of the U.S. Congress. And shook the walls on Capitol Hill.

"You did in one day," Assistant Majority Leader Edward Kennedy told him, "what Bobby tried to do in a year and a half."

And columnist Carl Rowen described the Southern legislator as staking "an impressive claim to a senatorial badge of courage" through "one magnificent statement."

"With each reading," the syndicated columnist wrote, "I became more impressed with the guts and humanity of the man."

"The man" they were applauding was Sen. Ernest F. Hollings (D-S.C.), a member of the executive council of the Lutheran Church in America. What the South Carolina Congressman had done was simply to tell the Senate's Committee on Nutrition and Human Need what he had found on a 10-day tour of impoverished areas in his state.

The findings weren't exactly news. What made them so effective this time was that the "reporter" was a highly respected legislator from one of the most "southern" of the Southern states.

Sen. Hollings courageously told the committee that when he was governor of South Carolina, he had gone along with the "public policy of covering up the problem of hunger" so as to attract new industry to the state.

However, just returned from his fact-finding tour, he acknowledged that there is indeed hunger in South Carolina. And he had seen it with his own eyes.

He mentioned the 177 children examined in Beaufort County, 98 of whom were trying to stay alive on only 800 calories a day. An amount so small that Dr. James Carter, Vanderbilt University pediatrician, said it was "not enough to support the child—and barely enough to support the worms" with which the children were afflicted.

The senator referred to the apparent mental retardation of the children resulting from malnutrition.

Then he said something that must have shocked a considerable number of his constituents.

"Many is the time," he noted, "that friends have pointed a finger and said, 'Look at that dumb nigger.' The charge is all too often accurate. But not because of the color of his skin. He is dumb because we denied him food. Dumb in infancy, he has been blighted for life."

The South Carolina Lutheran told the committee a lot more. Facts that have been reported before, but which many regarded as merely the biased opinions of "left-wing" reporters, social workers or politicians from the North.

However, coming from a Southern legislator, the testimony was explosive.

Within weeks after Hollings' appearance, the following developments, among others, took place:

The senate restored $100,000 it had cut from a $250,000 allotment originally made to the committee for a one-year study of hunger in the U.S.

In a meeting with Hollings and Sen. George McGovern (D-S.D.), committee chairman, Secretary of Agriculture Clifford Hardin agreed to provide free food stamps, for the first time, to needy families in two counties of South Carolina who can't afford to pay for the type of stamps now available.

Predictions here in the Capital are that congress and the White House will vie with each other for the distinction of making relief from hunger in the U.S. a major issue.

To which we can only say, if true, that it's about time.

The senate committee puts the number of chronically hungry people in the U.S. at 10 million. Tackling the problem effectively will obviously not be easy.

But if the richest nation in the history of mankind, whose government is paying out billions of dollars in subsidies to prevent food from being grown, can't find the know-how to get food through to those who need it most—then there's something rotten indeed. Not in Denmark. But in this, the land we love.

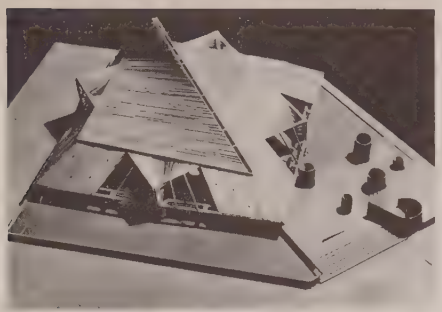
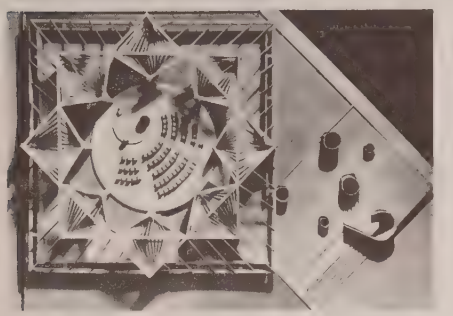
Youth Hikes Help the Hungry



A number of Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod youth groups observed Youth Sunday, May 18, by sponsoring "Hikes for the Hungry."



Hikes have been held in the past and have proven to be a successful means of fund-raising. Each hiker enlists one or more sponsors who agree to contribute a specified amount for each mile walked. Check points along the route verify the mileage. Funds raised are designated for various world, national, and local relief programs.

In April 1969, 1,400 of 1,700 northwest suburban Chicago youth completed a planned 17-mile hike and raised an estimated $75,000 to $100,000.

The Walther League, the youth auxiliary of The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, has adopted hunger as its special emphasis for 1968-70.

Bishop Hinsuke Yashiro, supreme bishop of the Anglican Episcopal Church of Japan, said the dedication ceremonies were "a sign of the harmony among the nations of the earth that has been brought about by many years of prayer, concern and effort." The Christian Pavilion will have as its theme "To Know and Serve Humanity." (RNS photo)

When St. Francis Xavier elementary school in Gettysburg, Pa., found a need for lay teachers, it found an unusual solution by turning to the Gettysburg Lutheran Theological Seminary for help. Through the assistance of Dr. Leigh Jordahl, associate professor of church history and chaplain at the seminary, the school was able to obtain 16 seminary students to conduct a tutoring program and four qualified non-Catholic lay teachers to teach part-time. Lutheran Named US Envoy to Japan

President Nixon has named a Lutheran diplomat to be the new U.S. Ambassador to Japan.

Dr. Armin H. Meyer, currently Ambassador to Iran, would succeed U. Alexis Johnson, who became Undersecretary of State for Political Affairs last January.

Dr. Meyer is a member of Grace Lutheran church in Washington, D.C., a congregation of The American Lutheran Church. He has served Grace as president, vice president and member of the church council. The son of a Lutheran clergyman, Dr. Meyer originally studied for the ministry, but changed his mind during his senior year at Capital University, Columbus, O.

Military Families on the Move

A MIGHTY FORTRESS

Vol. XIX New York, N.Y. Aug. 1969 No. 4

By GERTRUDE G. GOBBEL

"Bob and I are planning to marry soon. He's in the service and he's thinking about the military as a career. I'm somewhat frightened by the thought of attempting to raise a family under such circumstances. There might be a lot of moving to different places. What effect would this have on our children?"

These concerns have been voiced by many a young woman about to marry a man in the armed forces. Researchers, too, have been interested in finding answers to these and similar problems of military families. Studies in this area are few in number. However, information that has been obtained gives us some insights into the effect of moving on children.

Children face certain tasks every time they move such as (1) becoming familiar with their new neighborhood (2) making new friends and meeting new teachers, scout leaders, etc. and (3) possibly adapting to cultural differences in the new community.

Researchers say that the moving itself does not have harmful effects on children; many families move frequently with no ill effects on the children. However, differences are noted between families who experience problems and those who don't.

First, and perhaps of major significance, is the attitude of parents. Parents who have a positive attitude toward a move transmit these feelings to their children. It is the mother who usually undertakes the actual organizing of the household for the move. If she takes her tasks in stride, looks forward to the new duty station, and goes about her business cheerfully, she will give her children a feeling of security and well-being about moving to a new home.

This positive attitude must be genuine and not a false front. Any underlying negative feelings can easily be sensed by children and be detrimental to their adjustment to the situation.

Another parental attitude which contributes to a successful move is one of identifying with the military as an organization. Parents who have a close identification with the military community become a part of this organization regardless of where in the world they are living. This community becomes their community, and the children identify with the military and establish a sense of belonging.

Preparing a child for a move must be a conscious effort. Alert the child that a move is coming! Tell him where and when you will be going. Then find information to share about the new area. This can be a library search as well as conversations with military families who have enjoyed living in the area.

During the actual move itself keep the children with you. Occasionally parents feel the inconvenience of having a young child around during moving time can be solved by placing the child with a relative for a few weeks. However, these children frequently develop feeding and sleeping disturbances which could be eliminated by keeping the child within the family and allowing him to experience the move with the family.

When you arrive at your new home and are settled in, your children will continue to need your guidance and support. Children don't automatically go out to play and magically find new friends. Some communities are not as open and friendly as others. Perhaps a characteristic called self-assertiveness is needed here. Make a conscious effort to introduce your child to the children of new friends you meet. Find out about community group activities for your child and encourage him to participate.

One serviceman's wife related that the first thing she did when they moved to a new location was to contact the local pastor of her church. She would say, "We're here!" She would find out when church activities were scheduled and inquire about what he recommended for children. She suggested that each family must assert itself and not wait to be

A Lutheran Couple In Vietnam

"We are Christians impelled by our faith to be of constructive, non-paternalistic assistance . . ."

By NAOMI FROST

A Lutheran couple who have been assisting with a particularly challenging war-time social mission are Mr. and Mrs. Abner Batalden of Minneapolis, Minnesota. For the past two years Mr. Batalden was business administrator for Vietnam Christain Service in Saigon. A cooperative agency supported by Lutheran World Relief, Church World Service, and the Mennonite Central Committee, Vietnam Christian Service is, in the words of Mr. Batalden, "a very ecumenical organization." Utilizing about 150 staff members, the Service offers programs of food, health (including two hospitals), social service, and education to South Vietnamese refugees and evacuees, including many children.

Help is given according to the need of the recipient and the agency's resources. The religion of the recipient is of no consideration; nor is there any attempt to "indoctrinate" him.

"We are Christians who are impelled by our faith to be of constructive, non-paternalistic assistance," declares Mr. Batalden. "But preaching is not our task."

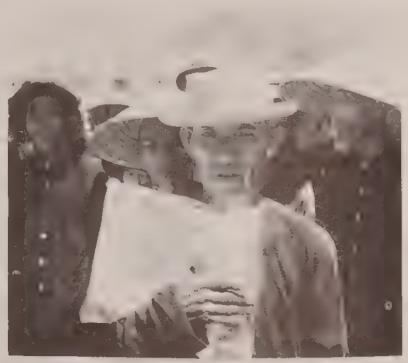
The Bataldens have had to live dangerously to carry out this task. Their home, just south of the airport and north of the city's center, was near the area where rockets were dropped during the first TET offensive. The Bataldens recall that event well—they had just finished tape recording the rocket celebrations when the "real thing" began. At one time, one of their leaders in the DMZ dedicated a social service center in a ceremony surrounded by smoke. "It was very strenuous to work in a city where you didn't know when the next bomb would fall," Mrs. Batalden relates. "One had to keep busy."

A woman who modestly describes herself as "the volunteer who goes along," Mrs. Batalden made a personal contribution to "helping the Vietnamese help themselves." She sold Vietnamese handicrafts in the USO, a task with a two-fold benefit: it brought in a great deal of money for the craftsmen—$21,000 in one year—and it gave her the opportunity to have contact with many U.S. servicemen and to provide them with coveted artifacts. Particularly popular with the servicemen were crossbows, Montagnard bracelets, and fine baskets.

In addition to her work at the USO, Mrs. Batalden maintained open house at home for about 80 young Westerners, providing a "place for a cool drink and a chat."

Vietnam Christian Service cooperates with Aid for International Development but insists on independence of programs. Its hospitals serve both Viet Cong and South Vietnamese. Asked if the Service had trouble with the Saigon Government because of this impartiality, Mr. Batalden replied in the negative, adding that he suspected there were Viet Cong patients in South Vietnam's own hospitals.

"We understand how the South Vietnamese feel about us . . ."



The Bataldens have, however, witnessed a difficulty which the Vietnam Christian Service has encountered attempting to win the trust and confidence of the South Vietnamese people.

"We understand how the South Vietnamese feel about us," explains Mr. Batalden. "Some trust us and some don't. They lump all Americans—all Westerners—together. They see American bombers destroy their homes, American trucks clogging and endangering their highways, their women violated. It is estimated that ten civilians are killed for every soldier.

"Many think the war is the Americans' war rather than their own. Most South Vietnamese are not inclined to be very patriotic toward any government. Theirs is a heritage of allegiance to the family and clan.

"Those who support the Saigon government probably, deep down, want to 'have their cake and eat it too.' They want our assistance. On the other hand, the whole Communist world got involved in the Vietnam war when the Americans did. It became a much bigger thing."

In spite of the evident hesitancy on the part of the South Vietnamese to accept members of Vietnam Christian Service as helping friends, the Bataldens are optimistic about its future.

"The Vietnamese naturally consider the presence of Americans (and any foreigners) in Vietnam questionable," Mr. Batalden explains. "But they have come to realize that there are Americans, and there are Americans; that there are organizations, and organizations."

The couple observes that because government agencies—even the Peace Corps—are received in any country with a certain reservation, there is an increasing recognition of the potential in voluntary agencies. All World Christian Service efforts concentrate on assisting governments to help their own people.

Ex-Medics Utilize Skills; Work as Hospital Aides

By STUART AUERBACH

James T. Wells spent four years in the Air Force as a medical corpsman and when he was discharged in January he began to canvass hospitals all over the country for a similar job—one he called "a treatment room technician."

"I was probably the only one who answered," says Dr. Don S. Wenger, a retired Air Force colonel who runs the emergency room at George Washington University Hospital.

Now Wells, 25, and Jarrett Wise, a 22-year-old former Navy corpsman, who was wounded in action with the Marines in Vietnam, work in George Washington's emergency room.

They are exceptions. Most of the thousands of well-trained military medical corpsmen who are discharged each year leave the health field when they become civilians, even though there is a shortage of health workers in the Nation.

In Metropolitan Washington alone, the Health Facilities Planning Council found a shortage of several thousand medical personnel. Duke University has started an intensive program to train doctors' assistants to ease the shortage of physicians.

In the military, Wells said, there is a shortage of doctors so severe that corpsmen often give treatments normally restricted in civilian life to physicians.

Wells said he has done "minor surgery," such as sewing up cuts. Wise, as a combat corpsman, has performed emergency tracheotomies.

Neither is doing procedures that complex at George Washington. They are restricted to assisting doctors and nurses in soaking and dressing wounds, taking blood pressure and temperature, watching patients and maintaining intravenous feedings.

They are called emergency room technicians. "We created the title here," said Dr. Wenger.

Both Wise and Wells plan to continue their educations at George Washington while they work. Wise wants to be a doctor, although, he admits, "I may be 40 years old before I get there." Wells, who originally wanted to be a teacher, now wants to continue in the medical field.

Their future is great, Dr. Wenger feels. They can either become administrative heads of hospital emergency rooms or chief technicians in charge of other medical personnel.

Families on the Move . . .

found. Let the local community know, "We're here!"

A frequent concern is the effect of moving on a child's intelligence and educational achievement. We know anxiety will inhibit intellectual functioning. Your conscious effort to help your child adjust to new surroundings will eliminate a great deal of anxiety and frustration. When this is accomplished, your child will function intellectually as well as children who have experienced less mobility. Some research indicates that children who have moved score slightly higher on intelligence tests than those who have been immobile. These results have been explained on the basis that mobility increases knowledge, stimulates curiosity, increases speed of response, encourages imagination, and develops mental flexibility. The experience of moving has its positive effects!

Moving, with its hard work and many details to attend to, is not going to be one big picnic. And amid those nerve-racking days it isn't always easy to remember that your children also face a jolting experience.

Even veteran movers become a bit irritable and have to guard their tempers. But the traumatic effect of a move can be minimized for yourself and your children if you approach the situation with a positive attitude and loving concern for your family.

A Christian's Point-of-View

Pastor Ralph S. Leonard of Zion Lutheran Church, Rockford, Illinois, shared with us a letter received from one of his members. Gordon R. Nelson wrote to his pastor just before Easter, 1969, as he was completing a 12-week training period and was about to receive the gold bars of a second lieutenant. Following are excerpts from Mr. Nelson's letter in which he tells of a problem confronting many servicemen today; of his deep struggle with the problem and how his understanding of his Christian faith helped him arrive at his own point of view.

Pastor Leonard:

. . . When I return to Zion in two weeks as a second lieutenant in the Air Force, however, I will be carrying more than gold on my shoulders. There will also be the weight of a new responsibility—that of being a military man in an age when our nation is involved in a war that no one seems to understand and few want to fight.

And so what can you say to a young man like myself who in one sense of the word is a hired killer when other members of my peer group are going to Canada or to jail as a matter of conscience? For an answer, what could be more appropriate than thinking for a while about Easter and how Christ dealt with his conscience? I learned in Sunday school and confirmation that Christ is the Son of God, but it has taken a few years of trying to live a meaningful life and a little more weight to carry before finally figuring out that Christ was truly also a man. If Christ were merely God, he would not have allowed his life to be so complicated by difficult situations like ours always is. He would not have struggled with his conscience in the garden, nor would He have had to suffer at the hands of his fellow people. It is thinking about Easter and the fact that Christ was a man, like myself, that have given me the courage to say also, "If possible, take this burden from me, but if not, then give me the strength to do what must be done."

Perhaps if we all were to try to be men like Christ set the example, we would not need to fight each other. As it is, I must try to do my best under the circumstances.

Thank you for your prayers.

Sincerely,
Gordon R. Nelson
Second Lieutenant, USAF

GIRL OF THE MONTH

MISS CHRISTINE ARTHURS, daughter of Command SGM Ted G. Arthurs, U.S. Army Military Academy, West Point, was nominated by Chaplain (MAJ) Conrad N. Walker.

A member of the National Honor Society, Christine has maintained a consistent "A" average and was recently awarded a scholarship from Denver University for all-around excellence.

Christine was president of the Christian Youth Fellowship at Ft. Campbell, Ky., and has been a "tremendous Christian witness wherever she calls home."

"Cadets, beware!" warns Chaplain Walker. "CSM Arthurs is one of the toughest and most highly decorated Airborne CSM in the Army. However, you can easily meet Christine at the Lutheran worship service at West Point Academy."

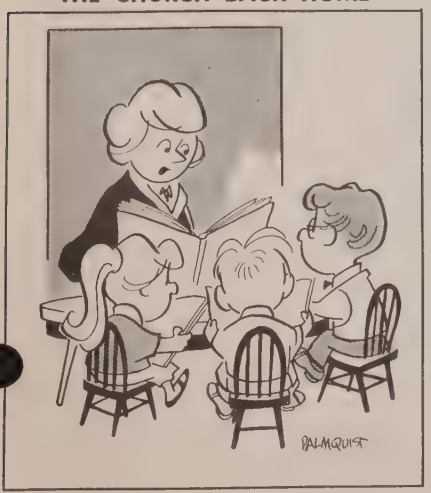
BARBARA JOAN KREBS, York, Pennsylvania, is our "Lutheran Girl" selection for April.



Barbara, who will be a June graduate of Central High School, North York, has been accepted at the Nursing School of Presbyterian Hospital in Philadelphia. She has been a Red Cross Youth Volunteer since June, 1964, devoting one evening a week to the care of the elderly at the York County Hospital and Home.

In high school she has been a member of the senior chorus, vocal ensemble, the yearbook staff, and was senior representative of the Future Nurses Club.

Barbara was vice-president of the local Luther League for two years and also served as treasurer. In addition, she has taught Sunday school classes and been a member of the church choir.

She was nominated for this honor by the Rev. John Edward Wilson, pastor of Grace Church, York, who says: "Barbara is fast measuring up to be one of our very finest young women. She brings to bear such an array of talents and personality that she succeeds in whatever she undertakes."

THE CHURCH BACK HOME

"NO, CHARLES, PONTIUS WAS NOT AN AIR-FORCE PILOT!"

At Annual Meeting—

Further Steps Taken by NLC to Pave Way for New Agency

THE NATIONAL LUTHERAN COUNCIL took steps, at its 47th annual meeting held in Los Angeles in February, toward continuation of its work in cooperation with the Lutheran World Federation, and in campus ministry, after other aspects of the Council's work are absorbed in the proposed new Lutheran Council in the U.S.A.

The NLC, which is an agency of the American Lutheran Church and the Lutheran Church in America, will be succeeded by LCUSA, if present plans are approved, on Jan. 1, 1967. The latter will include the two NLC bodies, plus the Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod and the Synod of Evangelical Lutheran Churches.

Since LCMS and SELC are not members of the Lutheran World Federation, this phase of the present Council's operations are not included in the new agency. Thus the NLC voted to take the necessary legal steps to continue after the 1967 date as the "U.S. Committee of the Lutheran World Federation." Under this title the NLC's work in world missions, world service, theological cooperation and Latin America ministry would be carried forward.

New Campus Work Agency

In another move to continue a program that will not be part of the new inter-Lutheran agency, the annual meeting approved procedures for separation of the Division of College and University Work from the Council. It is proposed to transfer its work to a new joint agency of the LCA and ALC. Although LCUSA as proposed will have a Division of Educational Services, this will not embrace a combined campus ministry. In this area the LCMS maintains a separate program.

Another important development at the NLC meeting was the approval given to a proposal to begin Lutheran-Roman Catholic theological conversations. In a unanimous action, the 38 councillors okayed official co-sponsorship with the recently established Roman Catholic "Bishops' Commission for Ecumenical Affairs" of talks between theologians of the two church groups.

If approved by the Bishops' Commission, further arrangements for the conversations will be negotiated. Lutherans are presently engaged in such talks with Reformed and Presbyterian theologians.

Church-State Issues Considered

In other important actions the Council at its three-day meeting:

- Received as information a resolution favoring "complete freedom of choice in matters of religious worship to cadets and midshipmen" at the armed services academies, but refused to express a stand on this thorny issue.
- Adopted a resolution registering its general endorsement of the objectives of the VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America) program of the U.S. government and encouraging qualified Lutherans to "give consideration to participation in the VISTA program as an opportunity for meaningful service and a fulfillment of their Christian vocation."
- Authorize preparation of a staff study paper on the implications of church participation in programs initiated under provisions of the Economic Opportunity Act, popularly known as President Johnson's anti-poverty program.
- Elected the Rev. Dr. George F. Harkins, assistant to the president of the LCA, as president of the Council.
- Received a request from the ALC for theological studies on the ministry and ordination, and referred it for consideration to the proposed LCUSA.
- Adopted a budget of $1,379,545 for the regular program of the NLC in 1965, in addition to this year's Lutheran World Action goal of $4,512,935.
- Heard Eugene C. Patterson, editor of the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution and vice chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, urge that the Church must take the lead in bringing about "massive racial readjustment" in the U.S.

The Word for EASTER

EPISTLE

But the truth is, Christ was raised to life—the firstfruits of the harvest of the dead. For since it was a man who brought death into the world, a man also brought resurrection of the dead. As in Adam all men die, so in Christ all will be brought to life; but each in his own proper place: Christ the firstfruits, and afterwards, at his coming, those who belong to Christ. Then comes the end, when he delivers up the kingdom to God the Father, after abolishing every kind of domination, authority and power. For he is destined to reign until God has put all enemies under his feet; and the last enemy to be abolished is death. (1 Corinthians 15: 20-26)

GOSPEL

When the Sabbath was over, Mary of Magdala, Mary the mother of James, and Salome bought aromatic oils intending to go and anoint him; and very early on the Sunday morning, just after sunrise, they came to the tomb. They were wondering among themselves who would roll away the stone for them from the entrance to the tomb, when they looked up and saw that the stone, huge as it was, had been rolled back already. They went into the tomb, where they saw a youth sitting on the right-hand side, wearing a white robe; and they were dumbfounded. But he said to them, "Fear nothing; you are looking for Jesus of Nazareth, who was crucified. He has risen; he is not here; look, there is the place where they laid him. But go and give this message to his disciples and Peter: 'He will go on before you into Galilee and you will see him there, as he told you'." (Mark 16:1-7)

Behind the Sacrament—

Holy Week and the Holy Supper

By Edgar M. Carlson

WHEN the Apostle Paul designated the time at which the Lord's Supper had been instituted, he said, "On the night in which he was betrayed. . . ."

It is likely that he intended we should understand the meaning of this gracious act of Christ against the background of the betrayal. The dark treachery of Judas, who was willing to barter away his Master for the price of a slave, provides the proper background against which to view the gracious act of God's self-giving love.

As recorded in John's Gospel, Jesus identified the betrayer as the one to whom He gave the morsel of bread which had been dipped into His cup. To dip together into the same cup was a symbol and pledge of friendship and fellowship. And Judas, having dipped with Him in the cup, went out to betray Him.

As we celebrate the Lord's Supper we remember that night, for it helps us to understand how great is our need of Him, and how great His love for us. But we do not just remember it as an event that happened. We remember Christ, who suffered, died, and rose again.

What "Remembrance" Means

"Do this in remembrance of me," He said. When we remember an event, we have to reach back for it. We may be able to recall what happened, how it happened—but it does not happen over again. We have it with us only as a recollection.

When we remember a person, then it is something more than just a recollection. There is something of that fellowship which we had with him which lives again. At least we may have the sense that he is somewhere on the balcony, among the great cloud of witnesses by which we are surrounded.

But when the one whom we remember is Christ, the eternal Son of God, then we have opened the door to His living presence here and now. You cannot imprison Him in Jerusalem almost two thousand years ago. He is living; He is our "eternal contemporary." To remember Him is to let Him into our minds and hearts and affection in such a manner that we have real fellowship with Him here and now. So, as we take the cup and the bread, and re-enact the Supper in which our Lord was himself the host and in which He offered Himself to them, He is as truly offering Himself to us now. He is the Giver and the Gift again.

The Real Presence

We have a saying that "the gift without the Giver is bare." This is at least sometimes true. But when does the gift include the giver? You take a quantity of gold and alloy and fashion it into a ring. And then you take such a ring and place it on the finger of another. It may be only another bit of jewelry—but if a lover places the ring on the finger of his beloved, before God's altar and in the context of the marriage rite, it is not any longer just a ring, for with it two people have given themselves to one another "until death do us part."

It is something like that—higher and purer as God's love is higher and purer than ours—which happens with these earthly means of bread and wine when they are offered to us by Christ who loved us and gave Himself up for us, offered with the promise and blessing upon them. They become the bearers of His real Presence—His body and blood.

When one forgives another a grievous fault, what is it that he is giving? Surely it is not mere words. Is he not offering himself in fellowship with the guilty? Far above any parallel, either in the extent of the offense or in the quality of the forgiveness, Christ gives Himself with His pardon in the Supper.

Looking to the Future

We should think of the Lord's Supper, too, as a sort of victory celebration. It is a foretaste of the Great Supper in heaven. St. Paul tells us that as often as we eat this bread and drink this cup we "proclaim the Lord's death until He comes."

We are reminded that He who died rose again, and ascended to God's right hand, from whence He shall come to judge the living and the dead. The final word belongs to Him. We await the return of the King. And while we wait for that final triumph, we must be about His business. He will subdue all things under His feet. We follow in the train of a conqueror, and are part of the conquering hosts. We are the instruments of His gracious will for the subduing of a sinful world. Indeed we are His body, in and through whom He is now at work in the world.

G. K. Chesterton has somewhere reminded us of a practice in the medieval period among a company of Christian knights, who as they set out for battle received the Sacrament with one foot in the stirrup—and then went forth to war. It is like that we take it—and then go out to do battle for the King, to triumph in His name.

A STITCHERY, entitled "Lord's Supper," by Martha Mood of San Antonio, Texas, won an honorable mention at the National Conference on Church Architecture in Dallas, Texas, last year. The institution of the Sacrament of the Altar has been depicted in almost every art form.

Slain Officer's Call to Church: Help Vietnamese

CAPT. Norman W. Heck, Jr., killed in action in South Vietnam, left his "last will and testament" to his Church.

He wrote to Pastor Robert A. Wendelin and members of Redeemer Church in Highland Park, Illinois:

"I'm serving here in Vietnam as an advisor to a Vietnamese Combat Infantry Battalion whose principal mission is to kill Viet Cong. I am thoroughly convinced that the communists cannot be defeated by simply killing Viet Cong."

He spoke of a "tremendous need" for skilled technicians and "people with a strong sense of Christian devotion" to help the Vietnamese improve their social and economic conditions.

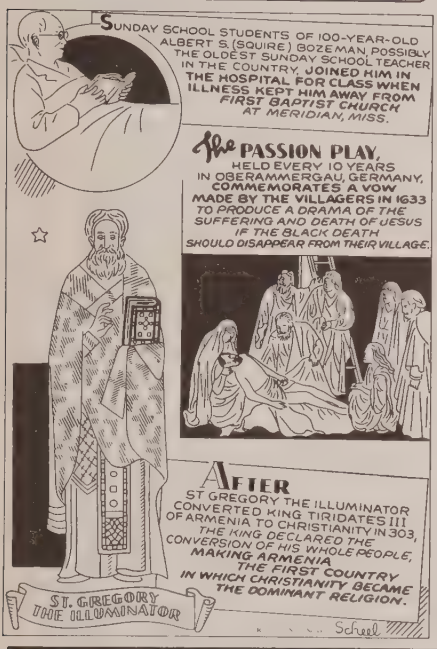
Capt. Heck pointed out that, by working at the "grass roots" of the problem, such volunteers "could contribute to the defeat of the Viet Cong and thus insure the reduction of the threat of communism to our society."

Asks Lutheran Involvement

The 28-year-old father of four added in the letter to his former pastor and fellow parishioners:

"I am appalled at the fact that I have not discovered a single Lutheran missionary working in this area. If nothing else but by sending some Lutheran ministers and laymen here in the 'field' (not to Saigon but to the outlying areas) to see what a wonderful opportunity exists to serve our Lord, the initial step could be accomplished.

"It is easy to sit back and engross ourselves with the numerous blessings and scientific achievements of our society; but for those who desire a richer, fuller life, and who would be gratified by contributing to the preservation of our many freedoms, there are many Vietnamese who would be eternally grateful for your assistance.



"I pray that you all will do your utmost to urge our Lutheran Church to solicit aid in the form of devoted skilled personnel to assist and guide these very needy people."

His call to service in Vietnam was for "people who are willing to spend a year or two, with the possibility of losing their lives."

The letter was received by Pastor Wendelin on Dec. 7. Capt. Heck was killed in action the next day.

"We take this letter as a last will and testament to his Church," said the pastor. "We have established a fund with the hope of interesting people who will want to help the Vietnamese. We feel, as his wife and parents do, that we must do something to carry out his wishes."

PAM RANGER of West Salem, Wisconsin, is our "Lutheran Girl" selection for March.

A senior at West Salem High School, Pam has been active as student council treasurer, sophomore class president, president of the band and drama group, and cheerleader.

Also active in all areas of church work, she sings in the choir and is accompanist for the senior choir as well as stand-by organist. She has attended a leadership training school and was present at last year's national Luther League convention held in Detroit, Mich.

Because of her special interest and aptitude in music, she plans to attend Luther College, Decorah, Iowa, in order to pursue her goal of becoming a music instructor.

Pam was highly recommended as Lutheran Girl of the Month by Mr. Ron Klipping, parish assistant and youth director at Our Saviour's Church, West Salem, Wisconsin. He is much impressed by her "warm personality, diversification of talents and dedicated Christian calling."

Dr. Albert Schweitzer—

Famed Missionary Marks 90th Year

"THIS is the best birthday of my life," said 90-year-old Dr. Albert Schweitzer, world renowned humanitarian, physician, theologian and musician.

It was the Protestant missionary's way of thanking everyone for the numerous tributes paid to him by people from all walks of life, for the gifts brought by African women, for birthday greetings sung by their children, and for the special events held in his honor.

He was particularly moved by a radio organ recital of Bach music brought to the village of Lambarene, Gabon, in West Africa, through the marvels of electronics from Kayersberg, France, where the founder of the world's most famous jungle hospital was born, Jan. 14, 1875. Dr. Schweitzer is an authority on Bach.

The missionary left his hospital in a motor-driven canoe to travel the few miles across the Ogooue River to the center of Lambarene where Americans, Asians, Africans and Europeans had gathered to join him in listening to the concert.

Sponsored by the Gabonese Republic, the recital was arranged by the French and Gabonese radio networks. This was the only special event Dr. Schweitzer attended and then he returned to the hospital.

Other events in his honor, however, included a reception given by the Mayor of Lambarene, canoe races, a soccer game and dance recitals.

To the hundreds of whites and Africans who came to the hospital to wish him well, the nonagenarian told them: "I assure you I feel wonderful. I am grateful you could come . . . I thank you all."

"Hospital for Africans"

In a serious vein, the 1952 Nobel Peace Prize winner took the occasion to defend his concept of primitive medical treatment and the absence of many Western hygienic conditions at his hospital.

"Africans themselves showed me the way," he said. "At first I wanted to build a hospital like those in Europe. But Africans—two simple laborers—convinced me that here the conditions are different and necessities are different. I have built an African hospital for Africans."

The hospital is run to conform to the traditional pattern of African family life. When a sick person enters the hospital, his family comes along to cook and care for him. Many patients come from the rain forest and return there after treatment.

Among the first to send birthday greetings was President Johnson of the U.S. "In your commitment to truth and service," he told Dr. Schweitzer, "you have touched and deepened the lives of millions you have never met. On behalf of the American people, I salute you . . . It is the good fortune of all men everywhere that you have lived among us for 90 years."

When Dr. Schweitzer was born in the Alsatian village of Kayersberg, it was part of the German Empire. He was the son and grandson of Evangelical pastors and at 24 he became a preacher, and later curate, at the Church of St. Nicholas in Strasbourg. After winning acclaim as a musician, Biblical scholar and philosopher, in 1905 he decided to study medicine.

In 1913, he and his wife, a nurse, left France for Lambarene, a French Protestant missionary settlement, where he established his hospital. His wife died in 1957.

THIS STAMP was issued by the Republic of Gabon to honor its most famous citizen, Dr. Albert Schweitzer, five years ago.

The 34-year-old doctor is shown above removing an arrow from the back of a Congolese army soldier who had been ambushed in Vanga, largest Protestant mission station in the Congo. Active rebels have not penetrated the area surrounding the mission. Dr. Fountain, son of a Baptist minister, is now in the U.S. studying eye surgery at Wills Eye Hospital, Philadelphia, Pa. CHRISTMAS SERVICES at a half-completed Negro Baptist church near Ripley, Miss., are attended by a group of northern college students who assisted members of the congregation during the holiday weeks. The church, burned to the ground October 30 after a civil rights rally had been held in it, was being reconstructed with the help of the volunteer student group, calling themselves "Carpenters for Christmas." The students managed to put the roof on the structure and complete the interior before returning to their campuses. (RNS Photo)

EXAMINING plans for a new "Agora" (market-place) ministry center to be established in a Chicago shopping area, are (below) architect H. James Hestrup (left) and the Rev. Donald N. Kelly, a United Church of Christ minister. The projected ministry, to be maintained by a "steering committee" of laymen under Pastor Kelly's direction, will witness to four segments of the non-residential community—professional people, commercial and industrial executives and workers, and faculty and students at nearby seminaries. "CATACOMBS" service for members of Prince of Glory Lutheran Church, Detroit, Mich., is conducted (above right) by the Rev. Alan J. Kieffer. He is shown leading an ancient litany by flickering candlelight for members of his congregation gathered for Wednesday evening Lenten service in a private basement. "We're trying to emphasize the basic elements of primitive Christian fellowship and worship," explained Pastor Kieffer. "We want to remember the early setting of the Church, the persecution, the necessity of secretiveness." Meditations urged the Church to "come out of hiding and bear a fearless witness." Candles at right illuminate catacomb symbol of a fish under the Greek word for fish, "Ichthus." (RNS Photo)

LENTEN SEASON BEGINS MARCH 3

ASH WEDNESDAY, the first day of Lent, falls on March 3 this year. Traditionally coming 46 days before Easter, the start of the Lenten season is fixed to allow 40 weekdays (in commemoration of Christ's 40 days in the wilderness) and six Sundays in preparation for the celebration of our Lord's Resurrection.

Easter itself is dated, according to the decision of an early church council, on the first Sunday after the first full moon following the first day of spring.

LENTEN SYMBOLS are used for preaching themes at midweek services in St. Paul's Church, Albion, Mich. Pastor W. E. Lauterbach holds the symbol of Ash Wednesday which emphasizes the contrition and repentance in the hearts of believers during Lent. Other symbols are Judas' leather purse; a cross of two spikes, for the two thieves crucified with Jesus; the "3" for Peter's denial of the Lord three times; the crown of thorns; and the chain, for Barabbas, who was released as Christ was crucified. What does it mean to you?

"I HAVE BEEN BAPTIZED"

By Edgar M. Carlson

YOU WERE BAPTIZED into the "name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." This assumes that we are not by nature bearers of that name. We belong to a fallen humanity which does not automatically and naturally acknowledge the sovereignty of God's name.

However romantic we may want to be about childhood, none of us can very convincingly argue that self-will, self-centeredness, is not the characteristic mark of all human existence. Growing up is in part a matter of harnessing that self-will and directing it into less destructive channels, or at least masking it so that it assumes more acceptable forms. Faith is the transcendence of that self-will; it is the surrender of ourselves to God, and the acceptance of his will in trustful obedience.

Baptism is the rite by which Christian parents and a Christian congregation bring this new life into the believing community. It is the event in which, according to Christ's command, those who are outside the Church are brought into it.

If we ask how this can be—how the simple act of Baptism with water can change the status of a person in his relation to the Church and to God—we will have to answer that we do not know. We practice Baptism in obedience to Christ's command; we believe that his command and promise are sure.

But if we ask what this means to us—that we have been baptized—then there are some things that we can say.

First, our Baptism established the conditions under which we can claim membership in Christ's Church. We were brought (most of us) as infants, in the arms of another, without any record of good works, with no credits to our account, and we were made members of his Church. It has been said that infant Baptism is the purest preaching of the Gospel. Here the Gospel of God's free grace is acted out before the congregation, as a new life is made the recipient of all God's blessings and full participant in the fellowship which we have with God through Christ.

There may be times when we will need to remember that—times when we are tempted to doubt our claim to membership in the Body of Christ. Luther said he often drove the devil away with the reminder that he had been baptized. What he meant was that God had accepted him as an infant, without anything to his account, and therefore He could be relied on to accept him on those same grounds now. "By grace you have been saved."

Baptism Is a Beginning

A second thing it means is that we have been incorporated into the life of a Christian congregation. The community of believers, most especially the parents and godparents, has assumed a responsibility for surrounding the baptized child with Christian love and instruction. Baptism is not an end but a beginning. It places responsibilities upon both the baptized one and the Christian community into which he is baptized. The planting of the seed does not guarantee the harvest, irrespective of soil and sun and rain.

The third thing we can say about it is this: If as baptized ones we are to reject Christ and the Church, we must do so as rebels and traitors. We must do battle against our King and country as those who are within it. No longer do we have the choice of whether we are to be inside or outside. It is not one of the alternatives which we make now; it has already been made.

If this seems slightly unfair, may I remind you that it is exactly the case with almost every meaningful relationship in life. You cannot reject your parents except as members of their family. You do not have the choice of the family into which you have come. You cannot reject America, except by insurrection and treachery, even though you were born here, and had nothing to say about whether you were to become American citizens. If you would oppose and seek to destroy America, you must do so as those who are already her citizens. And if you set yourselves against Christ and his Church, you must do so as those who have already been made a part of her life. There is no middle ground—"He who is not with me is against me."

It is not a little thing to have been baptized into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. It has made the area of your life not as small as you might want it to be, but as large as God intended it.

THE GOSPEL of God's free grace is acted out before the congregation, as another life is made the recipient of all God's blessings and full participant in the fellowship we have with God through Christ.

HONOLULU PARISH SERVES MILITARY, TRAVELLERS IN WAIKIKI BEACH AREA

WAIKIKI, the name given by the early Hawaiians to the beautiful strip of beach in suburban Honolulu, means spurting waters.

Significantly, today, in this area which has become a mecca for vacationers and fun lovers, the Water of Life flows freely. High above the area, bordered by the waters of the blue Pacific, the cross of Prince of Peace Lutheran church seems to call out in the words of the ancient prophet, "Ho, everyone that thirsteth, come. . . ."

Many do come to Prince of Peace Church to hear the Gospel message proclaimed. They come from the East and the West, for Hawaii has become a "gathering place" for those coming and going in the Pacific from all parts of the world. Since most of the large hotels are in the Waikiki area, almost everyone goes there first—and some never get away from it!

Waikiki is a long crescent of sand with Diamond Head rising at the end of the cove. The waters are perfect for surfing and are alive with surf riders, swimmers and canoe riders.

It is in this area, which has always been known as a "playground" that the American Lutheran Church recently established one of its most unique and exciting congregations. Located on the 13th floor of Laniolu (Haven of Rest), which is the Lutheran Senior Citizens' Home, Prince of Peace Church provides its worshippers a sweeping view of ocean and mountain, which does not seem to distract them from participation in the Service.

PRINCE OF PEACE Church is located atop the Laniolu Senior Citizens' Home at Waikiki Beach, Honolulu, Hawaii.

Visitors to the islands, coming from all parts of the world, comprise perhaps half of the Sunday morning congregation. (There are two services each Sunday morning and Vespers each Sunday evening, the latter beautifully enhanced as the sun sets in a riot of colors over the Pacific). The other half is made up of residents of Waikiki, and near-by Honolulu —a very fluctuating "half." People who live in the area only a few months, a year, or possibly two or three years (rarely more) are the ones who become the congregation that supports the ministry in Waikiki. Many of these people are military.

Prince of Peace has all the usual activities and organizations of a congregation. Largest and most active organization is the College and Career Club, made up of single adults, beyond high school age. Obviously many military personnel are in the club, along with university students, nurses, secretaries and other office workers, teachers, waitresses, etc. With no Lutheran Service Center on the island, military personnel are always welcome at Prince of Peace and are sure to find fellowship.

Interestingly, this club has to do less promoting of its Bible studies than its social activities! Every Wednesday night a large group of young people meet for a Bible study led by the Rev. Norman L. Hammer, pastor of Prince of Peace. Members actively assist in the congregation by singing in the choir, teaching Sunday school, assisting in evangelism calling, coffee hours, ushering at services, etc. Many of them have become members of the congregation—some transferring their membership for the time that they are in the area —others becoming members of a Church for the first time.

Located in a "cultural and religious crossroads" area, Prince of Peace has many unusual opportunities for its ministry. Recently baptized on a Sunday morning were a young service man (whose wife was a member of the Lutheran Church), a university student who grew up in the islands in a Buddhist home (and who is seriously considering the Lutheran ministry), and a young man from Tokyo (also formerly Buddhist) who is studying at the East-West Center of the University of Hawaii. When he has finished his course he will return to Tokyo, taking back with him the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

This, also, is Waikiki, land of "spurting waters" where many are finding today the Water of Life.

A MIGHTY FORTRESS

Vol. XIV | New York, N.Y., February 1965 | No. 10

LANA PETERSEN, a high school senior from Toledo, Ohio, is our "Lutheran Girl" for February.

Active in her home parish, St. Paul's of Toledo, Lana has served as vice-president of the youth council, choir singer, and summer camp counselor.

She was recently chosen the 1964 Homecoming Queen at Start High School, where her extra-curricular activities include cheerleader, and membership in the Literary and Beta Social Societies. Swimming ranks as her favorite outdoor recreation.

Upon graduation from high school, Lana will attend Miami University, Oxford, Ohio.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Petersen, she was nominated for "Lutheran Girl of the Month" by the Rev. David E. Winter, pastor in charge of youth work in her Church, who describes her as a "vibrant and enthusiastic young lady."

"SINCE THE NEW CHAPLAIN ARRIVED, YOU'RE GETTING SUSPICIOUSLY SPIRITUAL, I'D SAY!"

Paul Carlson: "Never Thought of Himself"

"BY GOD, that man was brave! He knew he was under sentence of death, but he never thought of himself for a moment, always for other people who needed him."

These were the words of Gleb Makaroff, a Belgian who escaped the Congolese rebel slaughter at Stanleyville, as he told of the last days of American medical missionary Paul Carlson, who was killed late in November in a street massacre that took at least 50 lives.

Dr. Carlson, who had refused to leave his northern Congo mission hospital as rebels took the area, had been sentenced to death by a rebel tribunal that accused him of being a mercenary spy.

The threatened execution was delayed for one week after the U.S. State Department urged Kenya's Prime Minister Jomo Kenyatta to intervene in behalf of the doctor. The National Council of Churches issued a similar plea to the prime minister, chairman of a commission of the Orgnaization of African Unity set up to try to end the conflict in the Congo.

Belgian paratroops and U.S. Air Force pilots rescued about 100 rebel-held hostages in a dramatic airlift. Rebels loosed wild bursts of gunfire into a Stanleyville street as the paratroops approached, killing Dr. Carlson and other hostages.

The American doctor's morale was "magnificent" during the period that his threatened execution produced international concern and official U.S. attempts to save him, Makaroff said. "He was extremely courageous and liked by everbody. He was giving medical attention to those who needed it until the last moment."

Tragedy Called "God's Will"

After word of the slaying reached Los Angeles, Calif., where the slain doctor's parents live, his father and brother issued a joint statement calling the tragedy "God's will."

The statement by Gust Carlson, 65, and the missionary's brother, Dwight, said they had been informed by the State Department of the paratroop rescue attempt and that word of the doctor's welfare would be forthcoming.

"In the interval," their statement said, "we prayed as a family for his life, but also that God's will would be done. Shortly thereafter, a second call informed us of his death.

"Despite the emotion that welled up in our hearts, we were reminded of a statement our mother made many years ago, that God had given her each of her children and she and Dad committed them to God to use at He saw fit. We feel He has done this in this instance.

"Paul went to the Congo not only for the humanitarian reasons of alleviating physical suffering and pain through modern medicine, but, more important, to convey a message of hope in Christ.

"We are reminded of this hope in a verse in the Bible (1 Thessalonians, 4:13-14) which says:

" 'We want you not to remain in ignorance, brothers, about those who sleep in death; you should not grieve like the rest of men, who have no hope. We believe that Jesus died and rose again; and so it will be for those who died as Christians; God will bring them to life with Jesus.'

"As in this quotation, we believe that we will someday see Paul again, as well as all those that trust in Christ."

Gave Up California Practice

A missionary of the Evangelical Covenant Church of America, Dr. Carlson was captured on Sept. 20.

He had given up his private medical practice in Rolling Hills, Calif., to serve for five months with the Congo Protestant Relief Agency, supported by the National Council of Churches, and when that term expired he volunteered his services to the Evangelical Covenant Board of World Missions.

It was believed that the rebels based their contention that the doctor was a spy on the fact that they discovered short wave radio equipment in his isolated mission hospital station. Such communications equipment is used by many mission stations to maintain links with each other and the outside world.

GERMAN PASTORS have begun working in an automobile factory in order to gain first-hand knowledge of the daily life of their people. Second from left, in picture at left, is the Rev. Martin Pirol as he leaves factory at Cologne with other assembly line workers at the end of a shift. He and two other clergymen received permission from church authorities to join the work force at the factory. At the end of several months they hailed the "fellowship" project as a success, saying the work experience had given them new understanding of their pastoral duties. (RNS Photo)

DR. PAUL CARLSON, medical missionary who was killed by rebel forces in the Congo is pictured above as he appeared during the summer of 1964 presenting corn and eggs to a native in a Congo village. The 36-year-old American doctor had been held hostage by the Congolese rebels since September, who accused him of spying for the central government. LUTHERANS SHARE IN RELIEF SHIPMENTS TO SOUTH VIETNAM

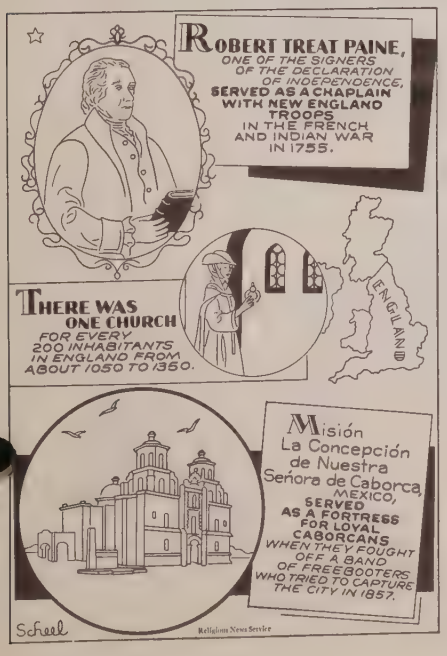
LUTHERAN World Relief, as well as other voluntary agencies, responded to requests for help for the victims of typhoons which struck Vietnam in November. With a reported one million homeless and more than 7,000 lives lost as a result of the storms in South Vietnam, large supplies of food and clothing were rushed to the scene, with the cooperation of the U.S. government.



Shipped from Lutheran World Federation, Department of World Service, stores in Hong Kong were 1,300 cases of milk powder, 300 bags of flour, 1,500 bags of bulgor wheat, 1,500 cases of cottonseed oil and 400 bales of used clothing. Similar materials were supplied by Church World Service, Catholic Relief Services, the Mennonite Central Committee and CARE.

The foodstuffs were originally made available by the U.S. government, which will replace in Hong Kong the surplus foods shipped to Vietnam. The supplies sent from Hong Kong were shipped on a U.S. government vessel, the U.S.S. Princeton. U.S. Army helicopters and other U.S. government-supplied conveyances carried the relief goods to the typhoon sufferers in South Vietnam.

Lutheran World Relief, material aid agency of Lutheran church bodies in the U.S., distributes food, clothing and medical supplies in many areas of need around the world.

Monetary offerings of Lutheran church members, as well as donations of goods by private individuals, corporations and the government, make possible this ministry of compassion.

Religious Remarkables

"By grace you are saved . . ."

WHY WE HAVE SACRAMENTS

By Edgar M. Carlson

"GRACE" is a lovely word. It has been called the most beautiful word in the English language. It is a complimentary word, even when we use it superficially. To speak of someone's walk or bearing as "graceful" is to voice a compliment. To speak of a person as "gracious" is to extend the compliment to something inward and to make a favorable judgment about one's total personality.

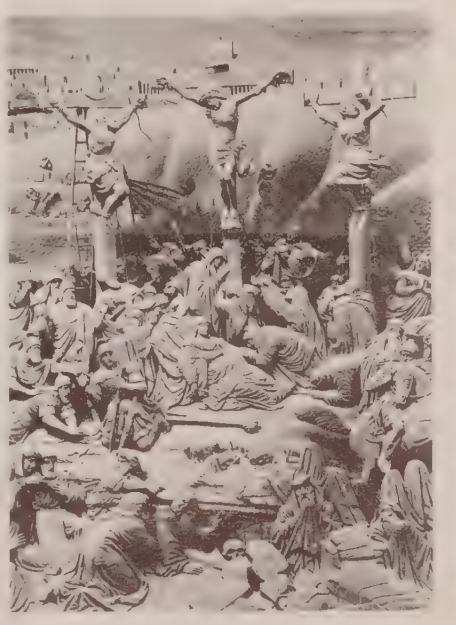
But "grace" is really a religious word. It is central and basic in the evangelical view of the Gospel. Luther described his own restless and agonizing quest in terms of the question, 'How can I find a gracious God?" He became convinced that the grace of God was not some energizing force or power that God gives to men, but the gracious will of God, the character of God himself.

It is God's nature to forgive. Nothing can stand in the way of it except our unwillingness to accept it. No one can withhold it; it does not depend on any "good work" done in advance. It is offered freely to any and all who will receive it. "For by grace you have been saved through faith; and this is not your own doing, it is the gift of God" (Ephesians 2:8).

But we do speak of "means of grace." And when we thus speak we are talking about the Word and the Sacraments. They are the means in which and through which God makes known his graciousness. They are given us in order that we might know that God forgives us.

This is not to deny that we may know something about God apart from these means. God has not left himself without a witness even among those who know not the Gospel. Some knowledge of God's existence can be seen in the universal recognition that there is some power not our own at work in the world. Just because we are creatures who inevitably stand before forces which are not under our control, we are likely to recognize the existence of some power greater than ourserves, even if we label it Chance or Fate.

We can learn something about God from nature and from history and from the workings of conscience within us. The philosopher Immanuel Kant is not the only one who would have to confess that the "starry heavens above" and "the moral law within" fill him with wonder. One can learn something about God from test tubes and rocks and the working of the human mind, but one cannot know a gracious God from any of these—at least not in the sense in which we are here speaking.



The Sacraments Are Special

This comes only through the Word of God, written and spoken, and through the Sacraments. For it is only here that we are confronted by the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. It is only here that we learn of a love that was willing to die for sinners. There is no other channel through which we can learn about the incarnate Son of God who came into this world and loved men even unto death. "God shows his love for us in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us" (Romans 5:8).

There is no other Gospel of "the remission of sins" save that good news which Christ proclaimed and which he actualized in his own dying and rising again. "God so loved the world that he gave his only Son, that whoever believes in him should not perish but have eternal life" (John 3:16). You will never find that written in the sunset or in green forests, or in test tubes or the farthest reaches of the human mind. We would not know it except for the Word of God as it confronts us in the pages of Scripture, the service of the Church, and most especially in the Sacraments.

So treasure these "means of grace," for without them you would not know a gracious God.

This is the first of a series of three meditations on the Sacraments by the Rev. Dr. Edgar M. Carlson, president of Gustavus Adolphus College, St. Peter, Minnesota. It is adapted from his book, The Classic Christian Faith, used by permission of Fortress Press.

Second Glance

¶ The U.S. Army 237th Engineer Battalion at Heilbronn, Germany, has been cited by church leaders for assistance in building an evangelical children's home at nearby Kleingartach. The American unit volunteered manpower and equipment to build a 750-foot road through difficult terrain connecting the main street with the building site.

It was another in a long series of lend-a-hand projects by American servicemen. They have raised drives for children's homes, and "adopted" a number of church-affiliated institutions, supplying them with funds, food and clothing.

¶ An extensive study of the meaning and practice of private confession and absolution before Holy Communion is being launched by the Lutheran Church in America's Commission on Worship. Said the Rev. Dr. Edgar S. Brown, director of the commission: "For too many Lutherans, private confession is contradictory to all that they regard as Protestant. . . . Yet what such people don't realize is that the practice is commanded in Holy Scripture, that it is sanctioned in the Small Catechism of Martin Luther, that it has strong support in the other confessional documents of Lutheranism and that the Church has an approved rite for its use."

The study aims to develop "suggestions of a pastoral nature for use in our congregations."

¶ Numerous pastors and lay church workers have been among hundreds of "political prisoners" quietly released from confinement in East Germany in recent months. According to a church source, all those on the intercession list of the congregations of the Evangelical Church in Germany have now been set free from prisons and concentration camps. This was a list of churchmen who had been arrested since 1945 in the (East) German Democratic Republic for acts inspired by their Christian conscience.

¶ U.S. Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark told a convocation of 200 clergymen and public school administrators at Wartburg College, Waverly, Iowa, that "no domestic problem has more national interest than religion and the public school." Unfortunately, he added, much of this interest stems from misunderstanding of the Supreme Court's 1963 ban on public school devotional acts.

Justice Clark said that the Supreme Court must not only "protect freedom of religion but also freedom from religion" and added: "Man is free to exercise any belief as long as it does not interfere with the same right of any other man."

This does not mean, he said, that the state must be divorced from the country's religious heritage. He cited the Supreme Court oath which invokes the "grace of God" and various governmental provisions for chaplaincies. However, he added, the state must be neutral, "discouraging none while protecting all."

¶ The "cooperation" of the ecumenical era reached a new peak when a Roman Catholic pastor in Milwaukee turned to a Lutheran congregation for help in coaching his people in the singing of hymns. Thus on Nov. 1, the 800-seat Roman Catholic Church of the Holy Ghost was filled with parishioners who required training and by 80 members of the choir of the Lutheran Church of the Ascension.

Changes recently introduced in Roman Catholic worship as a result of Vatican Council reforms require singing by the congregation. This has always been a custom in Lutheran worship. In the Milwaukee event, Lutherans brought their Service Book and Hymnal, and the two groups jointly sang representative hymns of the various seasons of the Church which are sung by both religious bodies.

JUNE M. ANDERSON, a WAF stationed at Bolling Air Force Base, Washington, D. C., is our Lutheran Girl of the Month for January.

June, who hails from Bowbell, North Dakota, has an outstanding military record according to Chaplain Dean C. Hofstad, who nominated her for this honor. Along with her regular duties as Records Maintenance Clerk at Headquarters Command office, June is extremely active in the Air Force Chaplain Program as sponsor for the Protestant Youth of the Chapel. She holds the rank of Airman First Class.

As a member of Bethany Church, Suitland, Md., she has devoted time to Sunday school teaching, serving as education secretary and circle chairman of the Bethany Lutheran Church Women, and senior choir membership.

Upon discharge, June plans to attend the Lutheran Bible Institute in Los Angeles, California, to study youth work and religious education. Chaplain Hofstad regards her as "a fine young Christian woman" who is "a great credit to the United States Air Force."

"A sense of urgency—"

ALC Takes Action on Church Unity, Human Relations, Christian Education

PLANS AND PROGRAMS for extending the Christian religion in many places and by varied means were blue-printed by 1,000 delegates from throughout the U.S. and Canada at the second general convention of the American Lutheran Church in Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 21 to 27.

The package for this work in 1965 will cost $23,750,000, an increase from the 1964 budget of 4.1 per cent. Of this amount more than $8 million will be used for programs of missions both on the home front and in "the uttermost parts of the earth."

The Columbus meeting was viewed by the Church's leaders as a successful blending of divergent views which involved theology, social concerns, and problems in church administration.

The massive agenda included extensive revisions in the Church's constitution. The changes still require ratification by the Church's 19 geographic districts.

Social Action Urged

A sense of urgency running through the deliberations seemed related to a statement made by the Rev. Dr. Fredrik Schiotz, church president, in his opening report: "The Christian Church in this generation may very well stand or fall by her proclamation and practice of righteousness in human relations."

Criticism had been directed toward leaders of the ALC for earlier forthright stands in issues of civil rights, particularly in race relations. Although a few of these voices were heard in convention debate, the delegates gave overwhelming approval to a move to put "church discipline" behind announced principles.

Although the traditional congregational autonomy makes enforcement of convention decisions difficult, spokesmen for the ALC explained that in matters of basic morality, pastors and congregations in direct violation may be brought into "counseling situations" (called on the carpet).

In related actions the ALC:

- Spelled out a policy statement on Church and State, suggesting church-owned properties, not in direct religious use, should be taxable;
- Opposed commercialism as a stigma on the good name and integrity of the Church;
- Proposed that cooperative measures in local communities should deal with problems of Sunday closing, and rejected the use of civil law as an aid to worship;
- Advised clergy to deal with the divorce evil by wiser and more thorough marriage counseling.

In the convention the ALC set sail on a "Lutheran unity" course, becoming the first Lutheran body to approve a constitution draft for the formation in 1967 of a cooperative agency to embrace 95% of U.S. Lutherans—the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A.

Education Programs Debated

The plight of the ALC's 17 church colleges and secondary schools was diagnosed in depth. Symptoms found showing: explosion in number of entering students and in volume of established knowledge. Analysis report: nothing wrong that dollars in multiples of millions wouldn't cure.

New knowledge in theology and new perspectives in its application had set off rumbling sounds of uneasiness in the ALC during the past two years, a wholesome amount of it being voiced in plenary debates on the convention floor. When the issues had been "talked out" in a wholesome spirit, the rough edges of discontent appeared to lose their sharpness. Words of reassurance that Scriptural doctrines are being undergirded and not undercut were voiced persuasively.

Boards of youth activity and parish education, both engaged in the publication of study materials, were strongly re-enforced in their programs for making Christian precepts relevant through new methods which they regard as appropriate under present-day conditions. The convention's slightly reluctant green light was in sharp contrast to the spanking administered to the Church's youth leaders in the previous convention in Milwaukee two years ago.

FORMER PRESIDENT Eisenhower received the "Family of Man" Award from the Protestant Council of the City of New York at a special awards dinner in October. At left, John S. Eisenhower, son of the former chief executive, accepts the award on behalf of his father from John Hay Whitney, editor-in-chief of the N.Y. Herald Tribune. The Protestant Council honored Gen. Eisenhower, who was hospitalized and could not attend, "in recognition of his life-long dedication and contribution to the principles of freedom and humanity throughout the world."

MARTIN LUTHER's wedding ring with crucifixion scene and the Latin initials I.N.R.I. (for "Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews") has been found in the possession of an unidentified family at Schoenberg, Germany. The ring has been lost since World War I. It bears the wedding date, June 13, 1525, and the names of the Reformer and his wife, Catherine von Bora. The ring was put on display in the Schoenberg Museum. (RNS Photo)

PRESIDENT JOHNSON uses a trowel and mortar, in picture at left, to seal a stone from the Cypriote monastery of St. Barnabas into the nave wall of the new St. Barnabas Episcopal church at Fredericksburg, Texas. The First Lady, who looks on, also took part in the ceremony. President and Mrs. Johnson gave the stone to the Church near their ranch where they frequently have worshipped. The stone was given to the Johnsons by Archbishop Makarios, president of Cyprus, when they visited the island in 1962. Barnabas was a Cypriote who, along with St. Paul, carried Christianity to the island in the first century. (RNS Photo)

A CHURCH in Lapland, northern Sweden, has been dedicated in memory of Dag Hammarskjold, Secretary-General of the United Nations who died in a plane crash in 1961. It is pictured at left. First suggested by a Laplander mountain guide, Andreas Labba (right), a friend and companion of the noted world figure on many hikes into the wild northern Scandinavian country, the church was built with funds contributed by institutions, firms and individuals. Triangular in shape—the form of a Lapp hut—its furnishings include candlesticks and communion vessels donated by friends of Mr. Hammarskjold. (RNS Photos)

¶ In a move to counteract the influence of the island's "Cargo Cult," the Evangelical Lutheran Church of New Guinea has "strongly urged" all its congregations to adopt a Declaration of Faith dealing with the matter.

The "cargo cult" is a materialistic way of life based on belief in magical practices for the acquisition of earthly goods as a means to power and prestige. Since the war it has spread widely among the New Guineans as the people, just emerging from the Stone Age, were suddenly confronted with many material products of modern Western technology.

The island's 300,000 Lutherans were asked to affirm that "there is no way of obtaining goods, money or other things for the body from cemeteries, mountains, ponds or caves." They were invited to pray: "May the Lord Christ help me to be strong and to put down the confused thinking about obtaining wealth."

Barkenquast

¶ A Lutheran pastor, the Rev. James L. Barkenquast, has been named as chaplain to the English-speaking community in Moscow. He succeeds the Rev. Donald V. Roberts, a Presbyterian, who has served in the Russian capital for the past two years. Pastor Barkenquast, 32, will begin his tour of duty in April, after an intensive period of Russian language study. He will conduct services in his five-room apartment as well as in the British and American embassies. A Roman Catholic priest also ministers to Americans in the U.S.S.R.

¶ Walter H. Moeller, a former Lutheran pastor, will be one of 11 Lutherans serving in the next Congress, as a result of November's elections. A Democrat, he was elected to the 89th Congress from Ohio's 10th District. He was previously a House member from 1959-62, when he was defeated in a bid for re-election. He then became an official of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Eight other Lutherans were re-elected to the House in November. Two senators are Lutherans: Vance Hartke of Indiana and Warren Magnuson of Washington.

¶ Sixty-two new positions are waiting to be filled in the overseas mission work of the Lutheran Church in America, the Board of World Missions reported. Only 19 of the openings call for ordained pastors of the Church. Among the requests are those for nursing instructors, doctors, school teachers, college professors, business and hospital administrators, social workers, airplane pilots and dietitians.

That Men Might Live—

What Am I Doing in the Service?

By Chaplain John C. Siege, USA

IT WAS a casual conversation. A young Christian soldier had stopped by the office with a question. "What am I, as a Christian, doing in the military?" The question rang with overtones familiar to any chaplain. The thoughts of the young man could be summarized as follows: "Is not the military a specialized form of violence? I have heard the statement that it is the soldier's mission to kill or be killed. Just where does a Christian fit into this pattern?"

For many, this is a paradox. . . . Just where does the Christian fit into this pattern. We could have gone into all of the familiar arguments on pacifism. . . . But maybe there is a more positive approach to this young lad's pressing dilemma.

For nearly two thousand years Christians have marched with the armies of a variety of civilizations and cultures. In America, men of the Christian faith trudged along as Revolutionary soldiers and they have made up the bulk of our armies ever since. No doubt this problem was discussed in 1776 and will continue to be discussed . . . 1965 . . . 1995 . . . 2565.

As the New Year begins we live in a nation dedicated to protect a precious heritage that found its origin in the greatest political revolution the world has ever known—the American Revolution. That revolution was dedicated to the principle that each man has worth and dignity because he is a unique creature under God. It follows, from our revolutionary principle, that we defend this ideal. Consequently, our armed forces are not organized to extend our borders or to dominate nations. We are organized to protect our ideals and the rights of free men.

Ministers to Mankind

So the role of the dusty figure in khaki takes on new meaning. From the orphanages of Germany to the dispensaries of Viet Nam, the American serviceman extends himself to those in need. We are seeing a dramatic historical change taking place. Our country, in line with its proud heritage, does not feel its soldiers are trained when they are merely efficient killers; rather, we recognize the crucial need to teach our men to live . . . with purpose and ideals.

Here, precisely, we see the very basic role of the Christian in uniform today. In the classroom, on the parade field or the battle field, the Christian endeavors to instill purpose, meaning and the ideals of his Christian and national heritage in order that men might live. His concern, his example and his work are all a part of this ideal. It may be a damp cloth pressed to parched lips, a cool hand on a burning brow, a kind word in moments of depression, a word of life at the moment of death or merely a soft touch on a sagging shoulder . . . each act has meaning . . . that men might live.

The flame of the quivering rocket, the sleek chassis of the computer, or the famous "push button" has not changed his basic role. The Christian, at his job, in his home or barracks, still ministers to men in need of the grace of Christ . . . in a variety of ways!

What is the Christian doing in the military? He is a man among men ministering to their deepest needs, carrying with him a precious ideal. To insure a lasting peace in the world or in the minds of individuals, men must learn more than how to kill. They must realize their full potential as free men under God in Christ . . . men must first learn how to live. That is what—I hope and pray—the Christian is doing in the military as he fulfills his duty to his God, and to his country.

Lutheran Sisters on U.S. Tour
Witness to God's Judgment and Promises

AFTER an 18-minute air attack, "the whole city was one sea of flames."

The city: Darmstadt, Germany. The time: July, 1944. The eyewitness: Dr. Klara Schlink, a founder of the Evangelical Sisterhood of Mary, a 90-member order rooted partly in the memory of that World War II bombing.

Known within the order as Mother Basilea, she retraced that "hour of God's judgment" in talks on the history and mission of the sisterhood before American audiences from coast-to-coast during a recent tour. The 60-year-old mother superior addressed church groups and appeared on radio and television during a two-month speaking trip that began in Canada in late October and ended in California in mid-December.

Mother Basilea, a Lutheran, told the story in German, and it was translated into English by one of two sisters who accompanied her.

Defied Hitler Regime

She began by telling of a small group of girls who, despite danger, defied the state and met for Bible study during Hitler's regime. "Because God held out his hand to this group, it grew to 150 members."

The participants were members of the Confessional Church, she said, and for two or three years they prayed that young people might experience "inner life" through repentance and prayer.

Asserting that "God . . . answered in judgment," Mother Basilea spoke of the air raid on Darmstadt and after picturing the city in flames, said it had been "utterly razed to the ground, except for some outskirts."

During that confrontation with death came a realization that "we had not involved ourselves for the Jews," she said, adding: "This hour of judgment brought contrition and repentance, and out of this repentance many things were broken up.

"Now the youth wanted to dedicate their lives to Jesus. They started to do immediately what they had failed to do out of indifference. We had passed by the Jews in our midst and had not helped them. Now we felt driven to our Jewish brethren.

"We learned to love them as God's chosen people, and we tried to urge our people to a new attitude toward the Jews."

Preaching Through Plays

The sisterhood, founded in 1947 by Mother Basilea and Mother Martyria Madauss and formed by participants in the Bible study classes, turned to the theater as a medium for expressing their conviction.

Among its first steps was a "proclamation play" in which "we confess our guilt as Germans," she explained, noting that the play was performed before large audiences at Germany's Protestant Kirchentag (church assembly) and in many large German cities.

Other efforts in behalf of the Jewish people, she said, included the establishment of a home in Jerusalem, Israel, "where we receive as our guests, those who had to suffer in concentration camps."

Despite the threat of large debts, the order offered its services freely, she related, "and God fulfilled his Word."

"We spent all gifts completely for the commissions of his kingdom," Mother Basilea said, pointing out that the labor in building homes and undertaking other projects was provided by the sisters.

Describing the period that followed as filled with "hundreds of wonderful experiences," she cited as an example the planning and construction of the "motherhouse and chapel when there was only seven dollars in our cashbox."

Prayers Were Answered

"We prayed in turn for all things—iron and brick and glass and whatever was necessary. We did not ask our friends for money; we only asked God. Every time, sometimes at the last minute, the money and the things necessary came."

Among the guest houses that have been erected are homes named "Jesus' Joy," "God's Kindness," and "Jesus' Comfort," she continued, which have had guests from other faiths and other countries.

Still another project was that of erecting a printing plant through which the sisters have printed "hundreds of thousands" of tracts and other literature, including a small newspaper.

Her talks included hymns in English and German in which she was joined by Sister Rebecca and Sister Benedicta, the two sisters with her.

Mother Basilea, a sister of the Rev. Dr. Edmund Schlink, noted Lutheran theologian at the University of Heidelberg, said her speaking tour followed invitations from pastors in the United States and Canada.

EVANGELICAL SISTERS of Mary are shown during their visit to America recently. They are (l. to r.) Sister Rebecca, Mother Basilea and Sister Benedicta. The 90-member sisterhood, with headquarters at Darmstadt, Germany, emphasizes the call to repentance in the face of God's judgment on the sins of our time, and the joy that results from forgiveness through Christ. The Power Behind Christmas—

GOD'S UNSPEAKABLE GIFT!

By Chaplain Richard R. Tupy, Jr., USA

OF ALL the traditions and customs that characterize Christmas the most universal is not a tree or Santa Claus. It is not holly wreaths, sleigh bells or Christmas cards. It is the giving of gifts. Even the most offensive commercialization of Christmas cannot dim the joy and expectation of a family gathered together to exchange these symbols of their love.

Where did this tradition come from? Could the answer be that, whether we realize it or not, we're so moved by this celebration of God's one great gift that we cannot help but join in giving? Perhaps our exchange of gifts is a reflection of that gift from our Father, the gift of Jesus Christ, about whom the Apostle Paul once cried, "Thanks be to God for His unspeakable gift!"

Can a gift be unspeakable? To begin, all my speech must come first from my thought. But when I look at the wonder of the birth of the Son of God I cannot begin to comprehend the depth, height, or width of a love that would lead my God to so humble himself for me. I hear of this gift. It springs at me from every loudspeaker along the street echoing around me in word and song. "Joy to the World . . . Silent Night, Holy Night . . . O Come, All Ye Faithful." Yet my poor mind finds itself unable to grasp the fulness of such a love, to understand the mystery of such a miracle as this.

"THE ANGEL of the Lord . . . said to them, 'Fear not, for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy!" This annunciatory angel is over the chapel in the Shepherds' Field outside Bethlehem. Each Christmas eve a carol service is held here, attended by pilgrims from all over the world.

A FINE traditional artistic interpretation of the Nativity of our Lord is the painting by Rogier van der Weyden (1399-1464), pictured at top of this page. It pictures the Virgin Mary, St. Joseph and adoring shepherd and angels in the costume and setting of medieval Europe. A modern portrayal of the same theme is depicted below. The "motion choir" of House of Prayer Lutheran Church, Minneapolis, Minn., is shown interpreting the words of the hymn, "O Come All Ye Faithful." Accompanied by an orchestra, organ or conventional voice choir, a motion choir conveys the message through gesture and pantomime. (RNS Photos)

If I could understand, if I could see all of the Father's love and purpose, then words would fail me. Can I describe the singing of Handel's "Messiah" so as to communicate its splendor to a man who is deaf and mute that he too might thrill to its beauty? Could I describe the color of the lights of Christmas sparkling from a mantle of new laid snow so that a man born blind could conjure for himself a vision of their radiance? Every day I struggle for and fail to find the words to express God's love for me. Yet this is not so strange, for even God Himself could not speak adequately to me through human tongues. Psalmists, prophets, apostles, or a million Bibles could not tell me what the birth of Jesus Christ tells me of Him. God's Word made flesh! God's Unspeakable Gift!

And so this gift from God overwhelms my comprehension. But if I could understand, I could find no language to express my understanding. And if by some miracle I should find the words I need, I should be so overwhelmed by the glory, awe, and wonder of it all that my tongue would refuse to move and my lips to speak.

So once again on the glorious night of his birth I will bow before his altar, raise my eyes to his cross, and whisper for his ears to hear, "Thanks be to God for his unspeakable gift!" Won't you join me in the Spirit of that Gift? God's Unspeakable Gift!

May the blessing of Christmas

throughout the new year!

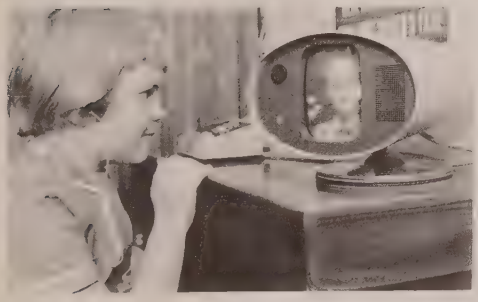
Religious sidelights on recent news events and other items of interest



EVANGELIST Billy Graham carried the Word of God to a barroom following the opening service of his recent crusade in Boston, Mass. At left he is shown chatting with a patron at the bar. The "twist" band stopped playing as he told the nightlife crowd that they "need spiritual food." Several shouts of "We will" answered his suggestion that they attend church. (RNS Photo)

A LIFE-SIZE photograph of Bobby Richardson, New York Yankee's second baseman, is part of a special display at the American Bible Society's Bible House in New York. Accompanying the photograph is the text of a 60-second spot announcement taped by Richardson to promote reading of the Bible, for use on TV stations. "Read the Bible and let its message live in you," says the baseball star. (RNS Photo)

A MAJOR BREAKTHROUGH in aiding the deaf to "talk" to one another over great distances is demonstrated as Morag Paget, a seven-year-old deaf student at Mill Neck Manor Lutheran School for the Deaf, Long Island, N.N.Y., lip reads via Bell System's "picture-phone" across the continent to Brian Ehlers, age six, of Los Angeles, Calif.

NEW CHAPEL at Concordia Lutheran Junior College, Ann Arbor, Mich., is triangular in shape, with all pews focusing on an altar of Botticine marble and a series of multi-colored stained glass windows. The $500,000 chapel sits at the hub of the three-year-old $6.5 million campus which enrolls 460 students for the ministry, the diaconate, and the teaching profession.

THE MESSAGE on signal flags held by sailors from the U.S. Coast Guard Honor Guard at Cape May, N.J., spells out "Bible Week." This is an annual observance sponsored each October by the Laymen's National Committee, Inc. (RNS Photo)

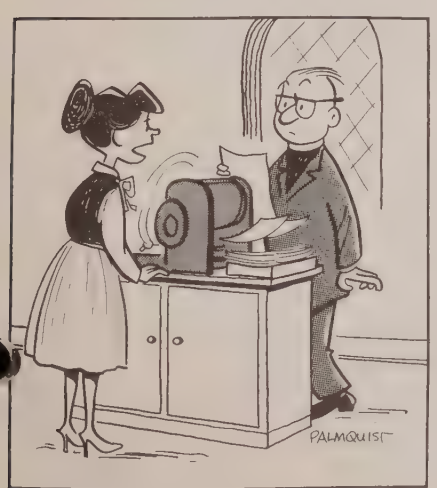
Second Glance



¶ Besides their regular Japanese-language worship schedule, Lutheran Churches of Tokyo held services in at least five other languages for athletes and spectators at the Olympic Games in October. Worship and other pastoral ministrations were offered by Lutherans in the following languages for Olympic participants: Finnish, Norwegian, Danish, English and German. Lutherans of Japan also sponsored a "get-acquainted" program for fellow-believers from other lands.

¶ Plans to establish a Lutheran medical mission in Bhutan have been announced by the Norwegian branch of the Santal Mission, a Lutheran missionary society. It would be the first Protestant mission work permitted in the little maharajah-ruled state which lies between northeastern India and Tibet. Until now, only a Roman Catholic mission has been allowed to have work in Bhutan, in the form of a vocational training center.

¶ A Minnesota pastor who visited his native Latvia said on his return that he was "ashamed" that he once attacked the World Council of Churches for sponsoring exchanges of visits by clergymen across the Iron Curtain. The Rev. Rudolfs Krafts, pastor of Our Saviour's Church, Circle Pines, Minn., said he found that such visits give Christians in countries like Latvia "courage to be more faithful." He described the clergymen who remain in Latvia (now ruled by the U.S.S.R.) as "real men of God" and said he was "very much blessed" by talking to them.

¶ Dr. Ian Campbell, a nuclear scientist and former member of the Communist Party, was ordained an Anglican priest in Chester, England, recently. He told newsmen he ceased to have Communist sympathies five years ago and had lost all contacts with the party. He said he first realized the impact of the Christian faith three years ago.

PASTOR ASSERTS GI'S NOT MORALLY READY FOR KOREAN DUTY

YOUNG U.S. servicemen aren't spiritually and morally ready for Korea, according to a Lutheran pastor in Seoul. The Rev. Ernst W. Karsten asserted that nearly 90 per cent of American military personnel are involved in sexual immorality during their Korean tour of duty.

Pastor Karsten, a former Army chaplain who now is in charge of the Lutheran service center in Seoul, gave his views in a letter distributed to almost 12,000 Lutheran pastors in the U.S. by the National Lutheran Council's Division of Service to Military Personnel.

He stated that "little can be done for the men individually after they get here, if they haven't been adequately prepared" before arrival. His purpose in writing the open pastoral letter at the request of the NLC's Service Division, he said, was to urge Lutheran clergymen "to fully prepare our young men for what they will be facing . . . the age-old dangers of women and liquor."

"What's new about them in Korea," Pastor Karsten wrote, "is their great abundance coupled with an almost universal attitude, 'It isn't immoral; everybody does it,' or the companion attitude, 'At home we wouldn't do it; but in Korea it's all right'."

There's nothing new in these attitudes either, he added, except their "frightening prevalence."

Laxity Widely Prevalent

Pastor Karsten said that every G.I. he talked to told him that about 90 per cent indulge more or less frequently. "Is the figure accurate?" Answering his own question he said "the men who live in the barracks know best what's going on and it is significant that there is almost universal agreement on a figure somewhere near 90 per cent."

"Many have their steadies," he continued. "Some of them 'own' their girls, complete with hooch (Korean dwelling) and furniture. Before leaving Korea they sell the package to a man who is just coming in."

The Lutheran pastor said that some who have decided to remain sexually clean feel they can make up for sexual continence by being incontinent in drinking.

"It's hearing good church people say such things that has me frightened more than anything else," he said.

Cautioning stateside Lutheran pastors against writing their congressmen since it would give the commanding general undeserved embarrassment, Pastor Karsten asked what Congress or the commanding general could do. He commended the top military official in Korea for already doing everything in his power to correct the situation.

"The chief factors in this evil are not the result of any laxity in command policy," Pastor Karsten commented, "they are inherent in the very situation." Factors he listed are "a passionate, God-given urge for sex; separation from home and its deterrent effects; an almost universal feeling of disgust at being in Korea; in some areas long hours of boredom; an entirely inexcusable tendency to despise the Korean people; a destitute native economy that thinks it needs the money that comes from prostitution; and the tendency of young men to have their fling the first time they are away from home."

According to Pastor Karsten, the only possible thing to be done must be handled by local Churches and homes before the men ever get to Korea. "You people back home," he wrote, "must see to it that the men are strong enough to meet temptation and say 'No'."

Suggests Solution to Problem

On a positive note, the Lutheran service pastor said that men are ready for Korea only when they have a vivid feeling that God is real and ever present. They must, he added, have in their hearts more than a set of rules which are hardly ever a deterrent.

Insisting that this must be done in civilian communities, Pastor Karsten said if it is not, "there is very little that any military chaplain or service center pastor can do. We won't even get to see most of them. They will have gotten into the whoring rut soon after their arrival, and then a bad conscience keeps them from the chapel."

Noting that every pastor has seen some of this in his own parish, Pastor Karsten said that what is taking place in Korea is only a variant of what is going on at home, but in a considerably intensified form.

He said he felt that he would be remiss in his duty if he did not tell the stateside pastors that the intensified form exists.

"We need a strong Church," he concluded, "but a Church is only as strong as the individual in it; and what we see here shows that there is much less individual strength than there should be. I am writing to you in an effort to help strengthen what is weak."

Christian Witness: A Baseball Story

SPORTWRITERS claim that any thing that could ever happen in baseball has happened in the Yankee Stadium—but they hadn't counted on Dave Wickersham, pitching star of the Detroit Tigers.

New York sportwriters said "he wept in the clubhouse"—but not because he had lost his chance to win his 20th victory—or even that he had been thrown out of the game by an umpire.

Wickersham

Dave Wickersham wept because he feared that the thousands watching a late-season Tiger-Yankee game would think he had cursed the umpire in an argument. And, said World-Telegram and Daily News sportswriters, his ejection from the game was an innocent mistake in the first place.

The incident came when Wickersham, a member of a growing Fellowship of Christian Athletes, was involved in a close play at first base as a Yankee beat out a bunt. Detroit's first baseman Norman Cash protested to the umpire—and in a moment Wickersham was thrown out of the game.

Here's the way Larry Fox of the World-Telegram reported the story:

"I've never been thrown out of a game before in any thing," the sandy-haired righthander explained. "I feel terrible about it. You see, I work for the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and that's not the kind of witness, I mean testimony, I want people to see.

"People who didn't realize what happened might think I was cussing him or something.

"All I said was 'Time out'; I said it four times," Wickersham told the reporter. "All I tried to do was get his attention."

In "trying to get his attention," Wickersham reached out and grabbed umpire Bill Valentine's shoulder. Touching an umpire, particularly one already involved in an argument, is tantamount to robbing a bank. Ejection is immediate.

Said Joe Trimble of the Daily News:

"The umpire threw up his right arm like a judge condemning an innocent soul to Devil's Island. Wick left peaceably: turning the other cheek as he has been taught and which is the rule by which he lives."

Reporters commiserated with the Detroit hurler—he had lost his last chance to win his 20th game. Detroit won but Wickersham was trailing 2-1 in the seventh inning; another pitcher got the victory.

"If the good Lord wanted me to win 20 games, I would have won 20. I guess it wasn't his will," said Wickersham.

Among other baseball stars who are active in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes are Bobby Richardson of the N.Y. Yankees and Don Demeter of the Detroit Tigers.

GIRL OF THE MONTH

MARY KATHRYN RICHTER, daughter of a USN chaplain, is our "Lutheran Girl" for December.

Mary resides in Yokohama, Japan, with her parents, Chaplain and Mrs. Thomas J. Richter. A graduate of Yokohama High School, she now a freshman at Seishin University, Tokyo.

Artistically inclined, she did the graphic art publicity for her high school, and also found time to be class secretary, choir singer, lead actress in the senior class play, and hold office in the Future Teachers of America.

Her many activities in the U.S. Navy Chapel Center and community "People to People" programs brought her to the attention of fashion designers and photographers. As a result, she has been modelling professionally in Tokyo for the past two years.

Mary's primary interest lies with her work in the chapel programs and with the Japanese religious community. According to her proud father, who nominated her for "Lutheran Girl of the Month," she is "Navy born and has lived Navy all her life."

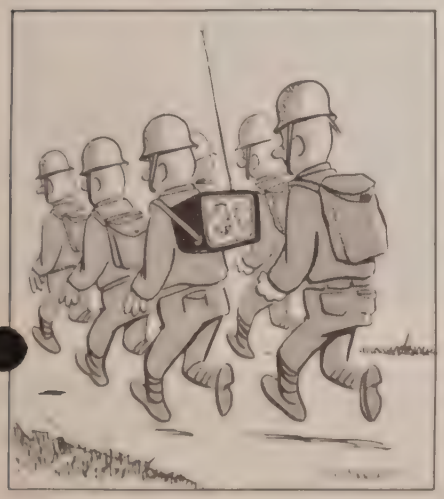
GIRL OF THE MONTH

BARBARA JACOBSEN of Syosset, N. Y., is our "Lutheran Girl" for November.



Chosen Viking Queen of 1964 by the Norwegian-American Women's Committee, she was sent on a good will tour of Norway where she represented American youth of Norwegian ancestry.

A graduate of Syosset High School, Barbara is active in church work at her home parish, Faith Church, Syosset. She sings in the young people's choir, teaches Sunday school classes and is interested in church youth activities.

Swimming, ice-skating and bowling rate as her favorite recreations. Sewing being her favorite hobby, she is an excellent dressmaker.

Twenty-year-old Barbara, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arne Jacobsen, is an employee of the Moller Steamship Company, New York City. She was nominated "Lutheran Girl of the Month" by the Social Ministry Committee of her parish. They understandably refer to her as "one of the prettiest Sunday school teachers in the country."

YOUTH HEAR CHALLENGE TO RELATE FAITH TO DAILY LIFE

A NATIONAL CONVENTION of 12,000 youth of the American Lutheran Church was held in Detroit late in August, determined to help young people relate their Christian faith to contemporary issues. A program of worship and study focused on economic and social issues found on the streets of the nation's center for automobile manufacturing.

Donald Luther, ALC Luther League president, told the opening session: "This convention will be overwhelmingly concerned with the life of the world and our place in it."

One of the featured speakers was Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers. He told the youth that the biggest problem in America today is moral and religious, rather than economic or social.

"For the first time in history we have the technical ability, thanks to automation, to satisfy the massive material needs of humanity, but we still need to develop the ability of filling the needs of the inner man," Mr. Reuther said.

"The important thing is not what you have, but what you do with what you have. The test should not be how much power do you have, but how much purpose do you have," the labor leader told the convention.

Objections to Reuther's appearance before the youth had been registered by some church members, as well as by certain right wing groups. But the audience, filling Detroit's Cobo Hall arena to capacity gave a standing ovation when he was introduced, and again at the conclusion of his address.

Other noted speakers also challenged the Lutheran young people. Included were:

• The Rev. Dr. Fredrik A. Schiotz, ALC president, who pointed out that "the person who has yielded his loyalty and will to a great cause, to an over-lord, finds recreation and renewal in the process." He asked, "What greater over-lord can we find than Jesus Christ, the One who made us his own in Holy Baptism?"

• Louis Lomax, author and civil rights worker, who declared: "If the Christian spirit is to survive—and it may not—it will have to become meaningful in the issues of racial equality."

• The Rev. Dr. William Hulme, seminary professor, who contended: "Christians are losing their identity because they want to be like everybody else. We find it difficult today to tell the difference between Christian and non-Christian."

A dominant note throughout the convention was worship, under the theme, "Jesus Is Lord." Each day began with a Service of Holy Communion, with up to 5000 receiving the Sacrament at each occasion.

New forms of liturgical worship were especially composed for the convention. The high altar, centrally located in the vast exposition hall, rested on sewer pipes to symbolize the identity of Christ with "the common things of life." Candle holders were fashioned out of automobile engine pistons, to further extend the symbolism.

AUTO PISTONS served as candleholders on the large altar at the ALC Luther League convention. Two Austin, Minn., boys are shown preparing the altar for Communion Service. More convention photos on next page.

Mr. Ellis, in an address to the LCA convention in July, made a plea for Lutherans to "present their bodies for the picket line" in support of the new civil rights bill. (RNS Photo)

PRESIDENT met president as Philibert Tsiranana, the first chief executive of the Malagasy Republic (Madagascar) paid a special visit to the Rev. Dr. Fredrik A. Schiotz, president of the American Lutheran Church and of the Lutheran World Federation. The two are pictured below.

At ALC headquarters in Minneapolis, Minn., President Tsiranana thanked the Church for its mission work on the world's fourth largest island, which has been carried on since 1888. He asked that the mission "be continued because there are many of my citizens who are not yet Christians, and there is a lot to be done."

The Lutheran Church in Madagascar embraces over 2,000 congregations and nearly 250,000 members.
